Thou hast 4 harp'd my fear aright.—But one word I Witch. He will not be commanded. Here's an—

More potent than the first. [other.

Thunder. 2 Apparition, a bloody Child.

App. Macb! Macbeth! Macbeth!—

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute: laugh to scorn The power of man; for none of woman born Shall harm Macbeth.

Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macbeth: what need I fear of But yet I'll make assurance double sure, [thee? And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live; That I may tell pale-heart'd fear it lies, And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this,

Thunder. 3 Apparition, a Child crowned, with a Tree in his hand.

That rises like the issue of a king; And bears upon his lady braw the round And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to't.

App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care Who makes, who frets, or where conspirers are: Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill Shall come against him. [Descends.

Macb. That will never be:

Who can impress the forest; bid the tree Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodements! good! [Rebellion's head, rise never, till the wood Of Birnam rise; and our high-piec'd Macbeth Shall live the lense of nature, pay his breath To time, and mortal custom.—Yet my heart Throbs to know one thing: tell me, (if your art Can tell so much) shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more. Macb. I will be satisfied: done me this,

And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know,— Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this! [The cauldron descends. Hantuysoud.

1 Witch. Show! 2 Witch. Show! 3 Witch. Show! All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart; Come like shadows, so depart.

A show of eight Kings, and Banquo's first and last, with a Glass in his Hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo: down! Thou art the slave of fear:—Shame!—Thou art the slave of fear:—Shame!—Thou art better to have seen me die than to have killed me. Macb. Thou hast seen me; and I am more than ever I was;—I will to-night kill thee, and be damn'd. Macb. Let us所有 the property of Macbeth:—I will to-night kill thee, and be damn'd.

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?

Come, sisters, cheer us up his spirits, And show the best of our delights. I'll charm the air to give a sound, While you perform your antic round; That this great king may kindly say, Our duties did his welcome pay.

Macb. Where are they? Gone!—Let this pernicious hour Stand aye assured in the calendar!—

Come in! without there!

Enter Lenox.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infecciected be the air whereon they ride, And damn'd all those that trust them!—I did hear The galloping of horse: who was't came by?

Len. His two or three, my lord, that bring you Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England?

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticip'st my dread exploits: The flighty purpose never is o'ertook, Unless the deed go with it. From this moment, The very firstlings of my heart shall be The firstlings of my hand. And even now, [done: To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and The castle of Macduff I will surprise; Seize upon Fife; give to the edge of the sword His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls That track him in his line. No boasting like a fool; This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool: But no more flights.—Where are these gentlemen? Come; bring me where they are. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Fife. A Room in Macduff's Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Rosse.

L. Macd. What had he done to make him fly the Rosse. You must have patience, madam. [Land! L. Macd. He had none:

"Blood-bolted," i. e., besmeared with blood.— 2 Spirits. 2. "Anticip'st," i. e., prevented, by taking away the opportunity.— Trace, i. e., follow; succeed.
His flight was madness. When our actions do not, Our fears do make us traitors.

Rosse. You know not, Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear. [babbles.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his
His mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not:
He wants the natural *touch; for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love:
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest coz', I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband, He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits of the season. I dare not speak much farther:
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors, And do not *know ourselves; when we hold rumor
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear, But flout upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way and move. I take my leave of you:
*T shall not be long but I'll be here again.
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward To what they were before.—My pretty cousin, Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.
Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer, It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort, I take my leave at once. [Exit Rosse.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead: And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As birds do, mother.
L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?
Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net, The pit-fall, nor the gin.
Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.
L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?
L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any mar.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again. [ket.
L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;
And yet is faith, with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?
L. Macd. Ay, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.
Son. And be all traitors that do so?
L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.
Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?
L. Macd. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
L. Macd. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the liars and swearees are fools; for there are liars and swearees enow to beat the honest men, and hang up them.
L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame. I am not to you known, Though in your state of honor I am *perfect.
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly: If you will take a homely man's advice, Be not found here; hence, with your little ones. To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage, To do worse to you were fell cruelty. Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you! I dare abide no longer. [Exit Messenger.

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm; but I remember now I am in this earthly world, where to do harm Is often laudable; to do good sometimeAccounted dangerous folly: why then, alas! Do I put up that wonnily defense, To say, I have done no harm?—What are these faces?

Enter Murders.

Mur. Where is your husband?
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified, Where such as thou may'st find him.

Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou liest, thou shag-eared villain.
Mur. What, you egg! [Slabb'ng him.
Young fry of treachery.
Son. He has kill'd me, mother:
Run away, I pray you. [Dies.

[Exit Lady Macduff, crying murder, and pursued by the Murderers.

SCENE III.—England. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and Weep our sad bosoms empty.

[there

Maced. Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men Bestrade our down-fall'n 6 birthdown. Each new morn New widows bawl, new orphans cry; new sorrows Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds As if it felt with Scotland, and ye'd out Like syllable of color.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wait; What I know, believe; and what I can redress, As I shall find the time to *friend, I will: What you have spoke, it may be so, perchance. This tyrant, whose sole name blusters our tongues, Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well; He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something You may deserve of him through me, and *wisdom To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb To appease an angry god.

Maced. I am not treacherous.
Mal. But Macbeth is. A good and virtuous nature may recoil [don: In an imperial *charge. But I shall crave your par- That which you are my thoughts cannot transpasse; Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell: Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace, Yet grace must still look so.

Maced. I have lost my hopes. Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts. Why in that rawness left you wife, and child, Those precious motives, those strong knots of love, Without leave-taking?—I pray you,

* That is, 'I am perfectly acquainted with your rank.'—
* Birthday,' I. e., the place of our birth.— * To friend,' i. e., to befriend.— * Wisdom,' I. e., wisdom it is.— * In an imperial charge,' I. e., in the execution of a royal commission.
Let not my jealousies be your dishonor,
But mine own safety: you may be rightly just,
Whenever I shall think.

Mac. Bleed, bleed, poor country! Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure, [wrongs;
For goodness dures not check thee! wear thou thy Thine titles are affcr'd!—Pare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st,
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mac. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think there
There would be hands uplifted in my right:
And here, from gracious England, have I offer'd

(Shewing a Paper.)

Of goodly thousands; but, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more bloody ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Mac. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be ripen'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state
Extends him as a helm, being compar'd
With my confinless harms.

Mac. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'er-bear,
That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Mac. Boundless intertemperate
In nature is a tyranny: it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Enjoy your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoardly.
We have willing dames enough; there cannot be
That vulture in you to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this, there grows
In my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other house's
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Mac. This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with thore perecious root,
Than summer-seeming last; and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath poison to fill up your will,
Of your own mere. All these are portable

With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I love none. The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stedfastness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways:—Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Mac. O Scotland, Scotland!
Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Mac. Fit to govern?
No, not to live.—O, nation miserable!
With an unmitigated, bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands uncertain,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal father
Would have deni'd all kings: the queen, that bore thee,
O'her upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well.
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself
Have banish'd me from Scotland.—O, my breast!—
Thy hope ends here.

Mac. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, bath from my soul
Wipe these black spots, resolve'd to lay my thoughts
To thy good truth and honor. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste; but God above
Deal between thee and me, for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction; here abjure
The tainted and blames laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsworn;
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth, than life: my first false speaking
Was that upon myself. What I am truly
Is thine, and my poor country's, to command:
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now, we'll together; and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent?
Mac. Such welcome and unwelcome things at
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Once, Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well: more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you?

Dox. Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched souls,
That stay his cure: their malady convinces
The great assay of heart; but at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor.

Exeunt Doctor.

Mac. What's the disease he means?

Mal. Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king,
Which often, since my here remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,
All awon and ulcers, pitiful to the eye,

From over-credulous haste, i.e., from over-hasty credulity.*—Convincing, i.e., overcomes.
The mere despair of surgery, he curst;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers: and his spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Rosse.

Macd.

Rosse.

Macd.

Soc, who comes here!
Rosse.

Macd. My countryman; but yet I know him not.
Rosse. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.
Macd. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove
The means that make us strangers!
Rosse.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?
Rosse.

Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot
Be call’d our mother, but our grave; where nothing,
But many knoweth nothing, is once seen to smile:
Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks that rend the air,
Are made, not mark’d; where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy: the dead man’s knell
[These are scarce ask’d, for whom; and good men’s Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.
Macd.

Rosse.

Macd.

Rosse.

Almost too, and yet too true!
Rosse.

Macd. How does my wife?
Rosse.

Macd. Why, well.
Rosse.

Macd. And all my children?
Rosse.

Macd. Well, too.
Rosse.

Macd. The tyrant has not bated’r at their peace!
Rosse.

Macd. No; they were well, at peace, when I did leave them.
Rosse.

Macd. Be not a niggar of your speech: how goes
Rosse. When I came hither to transport the tides,
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumor
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness’d the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant’s power a-foot.
Now is the time of help. Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To d’off their dire distresses.
Macd.

Rosse.

Do be their comfort!
Rosse.

We are coming thither. Gracious England hath
Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men:
An older, and a better soldier, none
That Christendom gives out.
Rosse.

Macd. Would I could answer
Rosse. This comfort with the like! But, I have words,
That would be howl’d out in the desert air
Where hearing should not catch them.
Rosse.

Macd. What concern they?
Rosse.

Macd. The general cause, or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some single breast?
Rosse.

Macd. No mind that’s honest
Rosse.

Macd. But in it shares some woe, though the main part
Pertains to you alone.
Rosse.

Macd. If it be mine,
Rosse.

Macd. Let not your ears despise my tongue forever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound,
That ever yet they heard.
Rosse.

Macd. Humph! I guess at it.

Rosse. Your castle is surpris’d; your wife, and Savagely slaughter’d: to relate the manner
Were, on the 4 quarrie of those murder’d deer,
To add the death of you.
Macd.

Rosse.

Macd. Merciful heaven!—
What, man! ne’er pull your last upon your brows;
Give sorrow words; the grief, that does not speak,
Whispers the o’erwaft heart, and bids it break.
Macd. My children too!
Rosse.

Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.
Macd.

Rosse.

Macd. And must I be from thence!
My wife kill’d too?
Rosse.

Macd. Be comforted:
Let’s make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure his deadly grief.
Macd.

Rosse. He has no children.—All my pretty ones?
Did you say, all?—O, hell-kite!—All?
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop?
Macd. Dispute it like a man.
Macd.

Rosse. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it like a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.—Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff!
They were all struck for thee. Naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!
Macd. Be this the whetstone of your sword: let grief
Couvert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.
Macd. Of! I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And bragget with my tongue.—But, gentle Heavens,
Cut short all intermission; front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself;
Within my sword’s length set him; if he’scope,
Heaven forgive him too!
Macd.

Rosse. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king: our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above may;
Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you
The night is long that never finds the day.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?
Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.
Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at one time the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this slumbery agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what at any time have you heard her say?

* The "golden stamp" was the coin called an angel.
* A modern ecstasy.
* A common grief.
* Put off.
* A fee-grief.
* A grief that has but a single owner.

The quarry is the heap of game after it is killed.— "Dispute it," l. e., contend with your sorrow.— "Put on their instruments," l. e., thrust at, their instruments, forward against the tyrant."
Macbeth.

Enter, with Drum and Colors, Menteith, Cathness, Angus, Lenox, and Soldiers.

Menteith. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm, his uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenues burn in them; for their dear causes Would, to the bleeding and the grim alarm, Excite the 2 mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood Shall we well meet them: that way are they coming.

Cath. Who knows, if Domibain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not. I have a file Of all the gentry: there is Siward’s son, And many 3 young youths, that even now Protest their first of manhood.

Menteith. What does the tyrant?

Cath. Great Dunsiyne he strongly fortifies, Some say, he’s mad: others, that lesser hate him, Do call it valiant fury; but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper’d 4 course Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel His secret murders sticking on his hands; Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breath: Those he commands move only in command, Nothing in love: now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant’s robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Menteith. Who, then, shall blame His pester’d senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn Itself, for being 5 there?

Cath. Well; march we on, To go in obedience where ‘tis truly ow’d: Meet we the 4 medicine of the sickly weal; And with him pour we, in our country’s purge, Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds. Make we our march towards Birnam.

[Exit, marching.

Scene II.—The Country near Dunsiyne.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macbeth. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all: Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsiyne, I cannot taint with fear. What’s the boy Malcolm? Was he nor born of woman? The spirits that know All mortal consequences have pronounced me thus: —“ Fear not, Macbeth; no man’s born of woman Shall ever have power upon thee.”—Then fly, false And mingle with the English epicures: [thanes, The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear, Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Serjeant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac’d 1 lout! Where goest thou that goose look?

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macbeth. Goece, villain!

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macbeth. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy face, Thou lily-liver’d boy. What soldiers, 2 patch? Death of thy soul! those lichen cheeks of thine Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whie-faces?

1 By the mortified man is meant a religious man.—That is, 2 When all the faculties of his mind are employed in self-condemnation,—By the medicine is here meant the physi 3 A bon is a base fellow.—Patch was an appellation of contempt.—4 Are counsellors to fear,—i. e., they infect others.
MACBETH.

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy free hence.—[Exit Serv.] Seyton—! I am sick at heart,
When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will I chair me ever, or dissect me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my 3May of life
Is full'in the ear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud, but deep, mouth-honor, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton!—

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight, till from my bones my flesh be Give me my armor. [Hack'd.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses, 4skirt the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armor—
How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that.

Causeth not minister to a mind diseas'd,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the soul's bosom of that perilous 4grief,
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Thyself.

Macb. Therein the patient
Must minister 5unto himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs: I'll none of it.—
Come, put mine armor on; give me my stuff—
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thames fly from me.—
Come, sir, despatch.—If thou could'st, doctor, cast
The 6water of my hand, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull it off, I say.—
What rubarb, senna, or what purgative drug,
Would scour these English hence?—Hearst thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord: your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.—
I will not be afraid of death and bane,
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. [Exit.

Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Country near Dunsinane: a Wood in view.

Enter, with Drum and Colors, Malcolm, old Siward, and his Son, Macduff, Menteith, Cathness, Angus, Lennox, Rosse, and Soldiers marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope, the days are near at hand,
That chambers will be safe.

Mett. We doubt it nothing.

Sic. What wood is this before us?

Mett. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough,
And heart before him: thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery

Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Sic. We learn no other but the confident tyrant
Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before't.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope;
For where there is advantage to be 6gotten,
Both more and 7less have given him the revolt,
And none serve with him but constrained things,
Whose hearts are absent too.

Macb. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiery.

Sic. The time approaches,
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have, and what we owe.
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,
But certain issue strokes must 8arbitrate;
Towards which, advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colors, Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers.

Mal. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still, 'They come!'—Our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie,
Till famine and the ague eat them up.
Were they not 7far'd with those that should be ours,
We might have met them darestful, heard to hear,
[A Cry within, of Women.

And beat them backward home. What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

[Exit.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of a 9fear.
The time has been, my senses would have 11qual'd
To hear a night-shriek; and my 7fell of hair
Would at a dismal tristeous rouse, and stir,
As life were in't. I have supp'd full with horrors:
Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

[Re-enter Seyton.

Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Mal. She should have died hereafter:
There would have been a time for such a word.
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story, quickly.

Mes. Gracious my lord,
I 13should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do't.

Mal. Well, say, sir.

Mes. As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.

Mal. Liar, and slave!

Mes. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so.

Scour. 7To cast the water was the empirical phrase for finding out disorders by the inspection of urine.

Both more and less. I. e., both high and low; those of all ranks. 4Arbitrate. 6I. e., determine. 7Pell is skin, and here means the hairy scalp.
Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false, upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till some one, as thinking thee: if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much.—I'll pull in resolution; and begin.
To doubt th' equivocation of the seer;
That lies like truth: "Fear not, till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunstable."—and now a wood
Comes toward Dunstable.—Arm, arm, and out!—If this, which he avouches, does appear,
There is no flying hence, nor tarrying here.
I'll be a weary of the sun,
And wish th' estate o' the world were now undone.—
Ring the alarum bell!— Blow, wind! come, wrack! At least we'll die with b harness on our back.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The same. A plain before the castle.

Enter, with drums and colors, Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, &c., and their army with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough: your leafy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle, shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff, and we,
Shall take upon what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siev. Fare you well,—
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight. [All breath,
Macb. Make all our trumpets speak: give them
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.

SCENE VII.—The same. Another part of the plain.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake: I cannot fly,
But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—What's he,
That was not born of woman? Such a one
I am to fear, or none.

Enter young Siward.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter
Then any is in hell. [name.
Macb. My name's Macbeth. [Title
Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a
More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant: with my
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st. [sword

[They fight, and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman:—
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macd. That way the noise is.—Tyrant, show thy face!
If thou be slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hid to bear their staves: either thou, Macbeth,
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Sic. Then he is dead?
Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Sic. Had he his hurts before?
Rosse. Ay, on the front.

Sic. Why then, God's soldier be he.
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mai. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Sic. He's worth no more:
Theysay, he parted well, and paid his score,
And God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's Head, on a Pike.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands [Sticking the Pike in the ground.
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free.

I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's *pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
Hail, king of Scotland!

All. Hail, king of Scotland! [Flourish.
Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,
Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen
Henceforth be earls; the first that ever Scotland
In such an honor nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,—
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad,
That fled the snare of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life;—this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place.
So, thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

Francisco on his Post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis new struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks. 'Tis bitter cold, and I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

SCENE, Elsinore.

Fran. Bernardo, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, The *rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is Horatio? Friends to this ground. [there!]

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O! farewell, honest soldier; Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.

Give you good night.

[Exit Francisco.

Ber. What! Is Horatio there?

* "Rivals," i. e., partners; colleagues.— * "Liegemen," i. e., subjects.
Hor. A piece of him. [Jus.
Ber. Welcome, Horatio! welcome, good Marcellus.
Hor. What has this thing appear'd again to-night? Ber. I have seen nothing.
Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our fantasy, And he will not let belief take hold of him, Touching this dreadful sight twice seen of us: Therefore, I have entreated him along With us, to watch the minutes of this night; That, if again this apparition come, He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.
Hor. Tush, tush! 'twill not appear.
Let us sit down while; and let us once again assail your ears, That are so fortified against our story, What we two nights have seen.
Hor. Well, sit we down, and let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all, When 'twas yond'some star, that's westward from the pole, Had made his course 'illume that part of heaven Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself, The bell then beating one,— [again! Mar. Pence! break thee off: look, where it comes Enter Ghost, armed.
Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.
Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.
Hor. Most like:—it harrows me with fear, And Ber. It would be spoke to.
Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Exit Ghost.
Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer. [pale.
Ber. Horatio! you tremble, and look Is not this something more than fantasy? What think you on't? Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe, Without the sensible and true [avouch Of mine own eyes. Mar. Is it not like the king? Hor. As thou art to thyself. Such was the very armor he had on, When he th' ambitious Norway combatt: So frownd he once, when, in an angry parle, He smote the stedled y'Polacks on the ice. 'Tis strange. [hour.
Mar. Thus, twice before, and 'tis jump at this dead With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch. Hor. In what particular thought to 'work, I know But in the gross and scope of mine opinion, [not; This bodes some strange eruption to our state.
Mar. Good now, sit down; and tell me, he that knows, Why this same strict and most observant watch So nightly tells the subject of the land? And why such daily cast of brazzen cannon, And foreign mart for implements of war? Why such 'impress of shipwrights, whose sore task Does not divide the Sunday from the week? What might be 'toward, that this swipe last Doth make the night joint laborer with the day? Who is't, that can inform me?

Hor. That can I; At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, Whose image even but now appear'd us, Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway, Thereto pricked on by a most emulous pride, Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet (For so this side of our known world esteem'd him) Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a soul'd compact, Well ratified by law and heraldry, Did forfeit with his life all those his lands, Which he had good seid of, to the true conqueror: Against the which, a moiety competant Was kag'd by our king; which had return'd To the inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same design'd, And carriage of the article design'd, His fell to Hamlet. Now, sit, young Fortinbras, Of unimproved meta hot and full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there, [梭'd up a list of lawless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprise That hath a stomach in't: which is no other (As it doth well appear unto our state) But to recover of us, by strong hand And terms compulsive, those foresaid lands So by his father lost. And this, I take it, Is the main motive of our preparations, The source of this our watch, and the chief head Of this post haste and romage in the land.
Ber. I think, it be no other, but 'tis so: Well may it sort, that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch; so like the king That was, and is, the question of these wars. Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye, In the most high and palmy state of Rome, A little ere the mightiest Julius fell, The graves stood tomantless, and the sheeted dead Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets: As, stars with trains of fire and dews of blood, Disasters in the sun; and the murdered Neptune's empire stands, Was sick almost to dooms-day with eclipse: And even the like precise of fierce events— As harbingers preceding still the fates, And prologue to the omen coming— Have heaven and earth together demonstrated Unto our climatures and countrymen,— Re-enter Ghost.

But soft! behold! lo, where it comes again! I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion! If thou hast any sound, or use of voice, Speak to me: If there be any good thing to be done, That may to thee do ease, and grace to me, Speak to me: If thou art privy to thy country's fate, Which happily foreknowing may avoid, O speak, or,
Or, if thou hast upbraided in thy life Extorted treasure in the womb of earth, For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death, [Crowe.

1 a moity competent, l. e., a sufficient portion.—
2 Gaged, i. e., pledged.— 4 Co-mart, i. e., covenant; bargain.— — Carriage of the article design'd, l. e., fulfillment of the treaty expressed.— 7 Unimproved mettle, l. e., uninjured courage.— 8 A starr'd, i. e., star'd up.— 9 A starr, l. e., a determined purpose.— 10 A rommage, l. e., ramrage; ransack.— 11 Sort, l. e., suit; fall in with the idea of.— 12 Question, i. e., subject.— 13 Palmy, l. e., prosperous.— 14 The most star, l. e., the moon.— The omen is put here for the predicted event.
HAMLET, and

ACT I.

Speak of it: stay, and speak!—Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my 4 partisan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. Tis here! Tis here! [Exit Ghost.

Hor. Mar. Tis gone.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our blow vails malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
Th' extravagant and berring spirit hies
To his confine; and of the truth herein
This present object made 1 probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.

Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The spirit of dumb锻s with such delight
And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy 2 takes, nor witch hath power to harm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is that time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it.

But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yond 3 high eastern hill.
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.

Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and this I morning know
Where we shall find him most conveniently. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State.

1 Scenet. Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltimand, Cornelius, Lords, and Attendants. 2 The King takes his Seat.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's
The memory be green, and that it us befitted [death
To 3 bathe our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one bower of woe;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves,
Therefore, our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'were with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious, and one drooping eye,
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and sole,—
Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along: for all, our thanks.
Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Colleagued with the dream of his advance,
He hath not fail'd to peater us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all 5 bands of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for him.

Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is: we have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His farther 6 guilt herein, in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject; and we here dispatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no farther personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow. 4 Giving them.

Cor. Vol. Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell.

[Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: what wouldst thou beg, Laertes,
That we should not be very liberal in giving thee
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more 7 instrument to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.

What would'st thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord,
Your leave and favor to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,
And how them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says
Polonius?

Leave, Pol. He hath, my lord, wrong from me slow
By impertinent petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces: spend it at thy will.—
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy 8 night-like color off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not, for ever, with thy 9 vaileth lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st, 'tis common; all that live must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! say, it is; I know not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy 10 suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 11 havior of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, show's of grief,
That can denote me truly: these, indeed, seem,
For they are actions that a man might play;
But I have that within, which passeth show,
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature,

Ham,
To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation, for some term,
To do "obsequious sorrow; but to persevere
Of impious stubbornness: 'tis a fruitless grief:
It shows a will most "incorrect to heaven;
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
An understanding simple and unshod:"
For what, we know, must be, and is as common
As any the vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Tear to heart? Fie! 'tis a fruitless grief:
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd, whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth
This "unprovocable woe, and think of us
As of a father; for, let them who take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And, with no less "nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I import you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg
It is most "regrade to our desire;
And, we beseech you, "bend you to remain
Here in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.
[let: Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Ham.
I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.
King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply:
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This great and unforbear'd accord of Hamlet.
Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heaven shall burst again,
Re-speaking earthy thunder. Come away.
[Flourish. Exeunt King, Queen, Lords, &c.
Polonius, and Laurenti.
Ham. O! that this too, too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and 'resolve itself into a dew;
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His 'canon' gainst self-slaughter. O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me the uses of this world.
Fie on 't! O! Ée! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature,
Possess 't so merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—may, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not 'Betem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she was hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown.
By what it fed on; and yet, within a month,—
Let me not think on't.—Frailty, thy name is woman!
A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she,
(O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer)—married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: within a month;
 Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married.—O, most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Euret Horatio, Bernardo, and Marcellus.
Hor. Hail to your lordship!
Ham. I am glad to see you:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself. [ever.
Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant
Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name
And what 'make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?— Marcellus?
Mar. My good lord. [sir.
Ham. I am very glad to see you: good even
But what, in faith, 'make you from Wittenberg?
Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.
Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so;
Nor shall you tell me that which you pretend,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are not truant.
But what is your affiir in Elsinore?
We'll tell you to drink deep, ere you depart.
Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.
Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student:
I think it was to see my mother's wedding.
Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.
Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio: the funeral bak'd meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
'Would I had met my 'dearest foe in heaven
Ere ever I had seen that day, Horatio—
My father,—methinks, I see my father.
Hor. O! where, my lord?
Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.
Hor. I saw him once: he was a goodly king.
Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.
Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.
Ham. Saw! 'tis a dream.
Hor. My lord, the king your father.
Ham. The king my father!
Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an 'attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvell to you.
Ham. For God's love, let me hear.
Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead' vast and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
Armed at point, exactly, cap-a-pie,
Appears before them, and with solemn march
Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd,
By their apron'd and fear-surprised eyes, [child'd
Within his trancheon's length; whilst they, 2be-
Almost to jelly with the net of fear,
Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did,
And with them the third night kept the watch;
Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good,
  *"What make you?" i. e., what do you?—It was anciently the custom to give an entertainment at a funeral.
  *"Dearest," i. e., chiefest; most cruel—Attentive.
HAMLET.

The apparition comes. I knew your father; These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd,

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did,

But answer made it none; yet once, methought,

It lifted up its head, and did address

Itself to motion, like as it would speak:

But, even then, the morning cock crew loud,

And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,

And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange.

As I do live, my honor'd lord,'tis true;

And we did think it writ down in our duty,

To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to-night?

All. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

All. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then, saw you not his face?

Hor. O! yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What! look'd he hewingly?

Hor. A countenance more

In sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red?

Ham. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes up on you?

Ham. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there!

Ham. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like. Stay'd it long?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a

Hor. Not when I saw it.

Ham. His beard was grizzled? no?

Ham. It was, as I have seen it in his life,

A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night:

Perchance, 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,

I'll speak to it, though bell itself should gape,

And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,

If you have hitherto conceald this sight,

Let it be tenable in your silence still;

And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,

Give it an understanding, but no tongue:

I will requite your loves. So, fare you well:

Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,

I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honor.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you. Farewell.

[Exeunt Horatio, Marcellus, and Bernardo.

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;

I doubt some foul play: would the night were come!

Till then sit still, my soul. Foul deeds will rise,

Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Lar. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell:

And, sister, as the winds give benefit,

And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,

But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Lar. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favor,

Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood;

A violet in the youth of primy nature,

Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,

The perfume and suppliance of a minute;

No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Lar. Think it no more:

For nature, crescent, does not grow alone

In thaws, and bulk; but, as this temple waxes,

The inward service of the mind and soul

Grows with the outward; perhaps, he loves you now;

And now no soil, nor constant guardian, doth

The virtue of his will; but you must fear,

His greatness weight'd, his will is not his own,

For he himself is subject to his birth:

He may not, as unvalued persons do,

Carve for himself; for on his choice depends

The safety and health of this whole state;

And therefore must my choice be circumscrib'd

Unto the voice and yielding of that body,

Whence all the head. Then, if he says he loves you

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,

As he in his particular act and place

May give his saying deed; which is no farther,

Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.

Then, weigh what loss your honor may sustain,

If with such uncertain ear you list his songs,

Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open

To his unmaster'd importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;

And keep you in the rear of your affection,

Out of the shot and danger of desire.

The choicest maid is prodigal enough,

If she unmask her beauty to the moon.

Virtue itself seems not calamitous strokes:

The Duncan galls the infants of the spring,

Too oft before their buttons be disclosed;

And in the moon and liquid dew of youth

Contagious blastsments are most imminent,

Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear:

Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall shew these effects of this great misfortune,

As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,

Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,

Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,

Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,

And recks not his own 'read.

Lar. O! fear me not.

I stay too long;—but here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace;

Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, forshame

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,

And you are stay'd for. There,—my blessing with you;

[Leaving his Hand on Laertes's Head.

And these few precepts in thine memory,

Look thou 'character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.

Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar:

"Crescent," i. e. growing; increasing.—"In thaws," i. e. in showers and muscular strength.—"Caustic," i. e., deceit; subtility.—"Besmirch," i. e. soil.—"Subject to his birth," i. e. bound by the laws which relate to him as heir to the throne.—"Credent," i. e. credulous.—"Lift," i. e. listen to.—"Unmaster'd," i. e. licentious.—"Charist," i. e., most cautious.—"Reckless," i. e. negligent.—"Read not his own letter," i. e. do not read his own letter. —"Character," i. e., write; imprint.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But their light and feather’d wings shall make
Of new-hatch’d, unfeidg’d comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear’t, that th’ opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man’s censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not loose, nor call thy  s palm with niggardment.
Of each new-hatch’d, unfeidg’d comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear’t, that th’ opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man’s censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not loose, nor call thy  s palm with niggardment.

Heath. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.
Hor. It is a nipping, and an eager air.
Ham. What hour now?
Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.
Mar. No, it is struck.
Hor. Indeed! I heard it not: it then draws near
Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.
[Enter Affection, Ophelia, and Hamlet.

Oph. It shall obey, my lord.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.
Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.
Hor. It is a nipping, and an eager air.
Ham. What hour now?
Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.
Mar. No, it is struck.
Hor. Indeed! I heard it not: it then draws near
Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.
[Enter Ophelia, Hamlet, and Marcellus.

Oph. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you: go; your servants tend.

Lear. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock’d,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Lear. Farewell.

Pol. What is’t, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the lord.
Pol. Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous.
If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly,
As it behoves your daughter, and your honor.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I, by mine honor, will think myself a knave;
That you have taken these tenders for true pate,
Which are not steril. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or, not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running it thus, you’ll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun’d me with love,
In honorable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.
Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech,
My lord.

With almost all the holy vows of heaven. [know,
Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these bawds, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is in making.
You must not take for fire. From this time,
Be somewhat scatter of your maiden presence,
Set your entreatments at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, that he is young;
And with a larger thither may he walk,
Than may be given you. In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers
Not of that die which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious  bands,
The better to beguile. This is for all:—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so squander any moment’s leisure,
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.
Look to’t, I charge you; so now, come your ways.

Oph. There is a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is’t:
But to my mind,—though I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honor’d in the breach, than the observance.
This heavy-laden rebel, east and west,
Makes us traduc’d and tax’d of other nations.
They cleft us drunkards, and with swinish phrase
Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes
From our achievements, though perform’d at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose them in this making),
By their o’ergrowth of some complexion,
Often breaking down the pales and posts of reason;
Or by some habit, that too much o’er-leavens
The form of plausive manners:—that these men,
Carring, I say, the stamp of one defect
Being nature’s livery, or fortune’s star,
Their virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: the drum of bill
Doth all the noble substance often dout,
To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost, armed as before.

Hor. Look, my lord! it comes.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!

Pause.

Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn’d,
Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from hell,
Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
Ham.

I will.

Ghost.

My hour is almost come, When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames Must render up myself.

Ham.

Aha, poor ghost!

Ghost.

Pity me not; but lend thy serious hearing To what I shall unfold.

Ham.

Speak; I am bound to hear.

Ghost So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt Ham. What? [hear.

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit; Doon'd for a certain term to walk the night, And for the day confin'd to 2 lasting fires, Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature, To which thy soul is now a slave, Are purg'd away. But, I am forbid To tell the secrets of my prison-house, I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood, Make thy two eyes like stars start from their spheres, Thy knotted and combined locks to part, And each particular hair to stand on end, Like quills upon the fretful porcupine? But the eternal heaven must not be Ears of flesh and blood. — List, list, O list! — If thou didst ever thy dear father love,—

Ham. O God! [der.

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural Mort.

Ham. Murder?

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the heat it is; But this our Englishmen, strange and unnatural. [swift

Ham. Haste me to know't, that I, with wings as As meditation, or the thoughts of love, May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost.

I find thee apt; And durer should'st thou be, than the fat weed That roots itself in case on Lethe's wharf, Would follow'st in this; not Hamlet, hear. 'Tis given out, that sleeping in mine orchard, A serpent stung me: so the whole ear of Denmark Is by a forged process of my death Ruin'd abus'd; but know, thou noble youth, The serpent that did sting thy father's life Now wears his crown.

Ham. O, my prophetic soul! my uncle?

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast, With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts, (O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power So to seduce!) won to his shameful lust The will of my most sequestered virtue. O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there! From me, whose love was of that dignity, That it went hand in hand even with the vow I made to her in marriage; and to decline Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd, Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven, So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd, Will sate itself in a celestial bed, And prey on garbage. But, soft! methinks, I scent the morning air: Brief let me be. — Sleeping within mine orchard, My custom always in the afternoon, Upon my 2 secure hour thy uncle stole, With juice of cursed 2 hebenon in a phial, And in the porches of mine ears did pour The venomous 2 distilment; whose effect Holds such an emnity with blood of man, That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through The natural gates and alleys of the body;

"Blazon," i. e., discovery; display,—" Secure," i. e., unguarded.—2 Hebenon is the poisonous hemlock.—2 Distilment," i. e., distilled juice.
And with a sudden vigor it doth posset.
And curd, like unger droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine;
And most lazar-like, with vile and leathsome crust
All my smooth body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once
Despoiled:
Cut off even in the blossom of my sin,
Disenanted, disappointed,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head:
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
I lift the royal bed of Denmark
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursueth this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once.
This un-worm'd shows all unmit'ned to be near,
And 'gis to pale his uneffectual fire:
Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me. [Exit.
Ham. O, all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?
And shall I couple hell?—O fie!—Hold, heart;
And you, my sheets, grow not instant old,
But be me stiffly up.—Remember thee?
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee?
Yes, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there,
And conversation hang'd upon my brain,
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by Heaven!
O, most pernicious 4 and perfidious woman!
O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables,—meet it is, I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark.
[Writing.
So, uncle, there are you. Now to my word;
It is, "Adieu, adieu! remember me."
I have sworn't.
Hor. [Within.] My lord! my lord!
Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet!
Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!
Mar. [Within.] So be it!
Hor. [Within.] Ulo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham. Hillo, hillo, ho! boy! come, bird, come.
[Enter Horatio and Marcellus.
Mar. How is't, my noble lord?—
Hor. What news, my lord?—
Ham. O, wonderful!—
Hor. Good my lord, tell it.
Ham. You'll reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you then; would heart of man
Once think it?—
But you'll be secret.

Roy. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does—

What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was

About to say something:—where did I leave?

Roy. At closes in the consequence,

As "friend or," and "gentleman."

Pol. At closes in the consequence,—say, marry;

He closes thus:—"I know the gentleman;

I saw him yesterday, or tother day,

Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,

There was he gaming; there o'ertook in's rouse;

There failing out at tennis: or perchance,

I saw him enter such a house of sale,

Videlicet, a brothel!" or so forth.

See you now;

Your blit of falsehood takes this carp of truth:

And thus do we of wisdom and in reach,

With windlasses, and with assays of 'bias,

By inductions find directions out:

So, by my former lecture and advice,

Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Roy. My lord, I have:

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Roy. Good my lord.

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Roy. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Roy. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Pol. Farewell,—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?

Oph. Alas, my lord! I have been so affrighted!

Pol. What is it, in the name of God?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my chamber,

Lord Hamlet,—with his doublt all unbraided;

No hat upon his head; his stockings 'fould,

Ungarter'd, and "down-gyved to his angle;

Fane as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;

And with a look so piteous in purport,

As if he had been loosed out of hell,

To speak of horror he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;

But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm,

And, with his other hand thus on his brow,

He falls to such "persual of my face,

As he would draw it. Longstay'd he so:

At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up and down,—

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

That it did seem to shatter all his bulk,

And end his being. That done, he lets me go,

And, with his head under his shoulder turn'd,

He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

For out o' doors he went without their help,

And to the last bend'd their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me: I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecstasy of love;

Whose violent property & fordoes itself,

And leads the will to desperate undertakings,

As oft by passion under heaven,

That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—

What! have you given him any hard words of late?

1That is, 'by crooked devices and side essays.'—"In yourself," i.e., by your own observations.—"'Fould,' i.e., in wrinkles.—"'Down-gyved,' i.e., hanging down like gyves or fetters.—"'Persons,' i.e., survey; examination.—

'Madness.'—"Fordoes,' i.e., unioes.
SCENE II.

PRINCE OF DENMARK.

*Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command, I did repel his letters, and denied His access to me."

That hath made him mad. I am sorry that with better heed and judgment I had not quoted him: I fear'd, he did but trifle, and meant to-wreck thee; but, beseech my jealousy. By heaven, it is as proper to our age To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions, As it is common for the younger sort To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king: This must be known; which, being kept close, might move More grief to hide, than hate to utter love. [Exeunt."

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern:
Moreover, that we much did long to see you, The need we have to use you, did provoke Our hasty sending. Something have you heard Of Hamlet's transformation; such a one As Sith nor th' exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should be, More than his father's death, that thus hath put him So much from the understanding of himself, I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,
That, being of so young days brought up with him, And since so neighbor'd to his youth and humor, That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court Some little time; so by your companies To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather, So much as from occasion you may glean, Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
That, open'd, lies within our remedy. [you;

Queen. Good gentleman, he hath much talk'd of And, sure I am, two men there are not living To whom be more adheres. If it will please you To show us so much 'gentry, and good will, As to expend your time with us a while, For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks As its a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, Put your dread pleasures more into command Than to entreaty.

GUIL. But we both obey; And here give up ourselves, in the full bent, To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded. [senn.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.
Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz.
And I beseech you instantly to visit dispersed.

My too much changed son.—Go, some of you, And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

GUIL. Heavens make our presence, and our prace-

Pleasant and helpful to him! [sence,

Queen. Ay, amen! [Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. 'Th' ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege, I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, Both to my God, one to my gracious king: And I do think, (or else this brain of mine Hants not the trail of policy) that I have found The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O! speak of that; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to th' ambassadors; My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit Polonius.

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found The head and source of all your son's distemper. Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltimand and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, my good friends. Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway— Volt, Most fair return of greetings, and desires. Upon our frankness, he sent out to supply us His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd To be a preparation 'gainst the Poleick, But, better look'd into, he truly found It was against your highness: whereat grief'd,—

That so his sickness, age, and impotence, Was falsely borne in;—sent out arrests On Fortinbras; which he in brief obey'd. Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine, Makes vow before his uncle, never more To give th' assay of arms against your majesty. Wherein old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee, And his commission to employ those soldiers, So levied as before, against the Poleack:

With an entreaty, herein farther shown,

[Giving a Paper.

That it might please you to give quiet pass Through your dominions for this enterprise, On such regards of safety, and allowance, As therein are set down.

King. It 'likes us well; And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business:
Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labor.
Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:
Most welcome home.

[Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.

Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam; to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night, night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste day, night, and time. Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes, I will be brief. Your noble son is mad: Mad call I it; for, to define true madness, What 'is't, but to be nothing else but mad: But let that go.

Queen. More art. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true 'tis pity, And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure;

4. "Falsely borne in hand," i.e., deceived; imposed upon. —5. "To give th' assay of arms," i.e., to attempt any thing by force of arms.
6. "Three thousand crowns in annual fee," i.e., a fee in land of the annual value of three thousand crowns.
HAMLET, Act II.

King.

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks for hours here in the lobby.

Queen. So he doth, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll lose my daughter to him:
Be you and I behind an arras, then:
Mark the encounter; if he love her not,
And she not thus from his descry quickly taken,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm, and carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet, reading.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away! I do beseech you, both away.

I'll board him presently:—O! give me leave.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Attendants.

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, God's-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then, I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir: to be honest, as this world goes,
is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, does he a good kissing carriage,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk in the sun: conception is a blessing; but not as your daughter may conceive:

—friend, look to't.

Pol. [Aside.] How say you by that? Still harping on your daughter,—yet he knew me not at first; he said, I was a fishmonger. He is far gone, far gone: truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between whom?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hans: all of which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honestly to have it set down; for you yourself, sir, should be as old as I am, if like a crab you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there is method in't. [Aside.] Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out of the sir. [Aside.] How say you by that? Sometimes his replies are so! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanly could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. [To him.] My honorable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part with; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Arras is tapestry, so called from the city of Arras, where it was manufactured.—"Board him," i. e., accost, address him.—"Frequent," i. e., replete with meaning; ready; apt.
Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Pol. You go to seek the lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you, sir! [To Polonius.]

[Exit Polonius.]

Guil. Mine honor'd lord! —

Ros. My most dear lord,

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah! Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happily, in that we are not overhasty; on fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe!

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favors!

Guil. 'Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? O! most true: she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is dooms-day near; but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then, is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeous, Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so; to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why then, your ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs, and outstretched heroes, the beggar's shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my "fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; or, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come come; may, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not crafiff enough to e' color: I know, the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the conscience of our long-continued, undivided love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you? [To Guildenstern.]

Ham. Nay, then I have an e'ye of you. [Aside.] —If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, I am sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mount no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth; foregone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent aeness, the majestical roof fretted with golden fires, why, it appeareth nothing to me, but a foul and pestilential congregation of vapors. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, in moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! how all a prophet! how a man! how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust! man delights not me; I [Ros. smiles.] no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what l'entertainment the players shall receive from you: we 'cated them on the way, and hither are they coming to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall be a tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis: the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled of the 'sero; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't. What players are they?

Ros. Even those that you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it, they travel! their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavor keeps in the wonted pace; but there is, sir, an eny of children, little *eysases, that cry out on the top of "question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't: these are their fashion; and so proceed the community, (so they call them) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

* Consonancy, i.e., agreement; fellowship; "I have an eye of you," i.e., I have an inkling of your purpose.—* Brave," i.e., splendid; fine; "Congregation," i.e., collection.—* "Tovered," i.e., overtook.—* "Foil," i.e., fencing blade.—* "Tickled the e'rea," i.e., tickled with a dry caugh or laughiness.—* An eny, i.e., a herself, a brood. —* A little a brae," i.e., young neadlings: properly, unbaked haws.—* On the top of question," i.e., at the top of their voice.—* Baggary, i.e., fill with noise.
Ham. What! are they children? who maintains them? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the * quality no longer than they can sing? will they not buy afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are not better) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession? Res. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to turn to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bill for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guit. O! there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules, and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those, that would make *mowes at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Sblood! there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

Guit. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come, then; the apperentunce of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me *comply with you in this garb, lest my *extent to the players (which, I tell you, must show fairly outward) should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are Guit. To what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guilderstern:—and you too;—at each ear a heater: that great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swathing-clouts.

Res. Haply, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the players. I say, you say right, sir; 'o Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you.

When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, Buz!

Pol. Upon my honor,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca can be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of *write, and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, Judge of Israel, what a treasure hast thou?

Pol. What treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why—

"^4 Escoted," i. e. said. "^5 The quality," i. e. the profession.—"To tour them, is to set them on.—"The sign of Shakespeare's Globe is said to have been Hercules carrying the globe.—"Months."—""Comply with you in this garb," i. e. embrace you in this fashion.—"^6 Extent," i. e. extending of the hand in friendship.—"^7 Write for writing.

"One fair daughter, and no more,

The which he loved passing well."—

Pol. Still on my daughter. [Aside.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

"As by lot, God wot,"

And then, you know.

"It came to pass, as most like it was,"

The first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look, where my abridgment comes.

Enter Four or Five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all.—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! why, thy face is *valanced since I saw thee last: com'st thou to hear me in Denmark?

What, my young lady and mistress! By'lordy, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, then when I saw you last, by the altitude of a *chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncertain gold, he not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome.

Will e'en to the French falconers, fly at any thing we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my good lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,— but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once, for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas a survey to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the *top of mine) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, 'there was no salt in the lines to make the matter savour, nor no matter in the phrase that might *indict the author of affection, but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas *Enes's tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter.

If it live in your memory, begin at this line:—

let me see, let me see;—

"The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,"—

"So it begins with Pyrrhus."

"The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms,

"Black as his purpose, did the night resemble

"When he lay couch'd in the omonous horse,

"Hath now this dread and black complexion smeard

"With heraldry more dismal; head to foot

"Now is he total *gules; horribly *trick'd

"With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons;

"And impast with the parching streets,

That lend a tyrannous and a damned light

To their lord's murder: roasted in wrath, and fire,

"And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,

"With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus

"Old grand sire Priam seeks;":—

So proceed you.

Pol. 'Tis God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent, and good disucion.

1 Play. "Anon he finds him

"Row," i. e. column. —""Chanson," i. e. ballad.—

"My right hand, i. e. those who come to advance my talk.—"* Valanced, i. e. fringed with a beard.—"A chopine was a clog or shoe with a thick cork sole.—"Cantare was a condiment not generally relished.—"In the top of." i. e. above.—"Indict," i. e. impecch. —"Quins, in heraldry is red.—"Trick'd," i. e. colored.
... Striking too short at Greeks: his antique sword,
Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,
Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd,
Pyrrhus at Priam's feet, in rage strikes wide;
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unerv'd father falls. Then senseless Hium,
Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword
Which was declining on the milky head
Of revered Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stript;
And, like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,
The bold winds speechless, and the orb below
As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder
Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause,
Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work,
And never did the Cyclops' hammers full
On Mars' armor, forg'd for proof et cetera,
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.—

Out, out, thou strompet, Fortune! All you gods,
If Pyrrhus get the good, take away her power;
Break all the spokes and fettleys from her wheel,
And bowl the round world down hill of the heaven,
As low as to the fiends!" Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—
Pyrrhus, say on: he's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he shal speak of any thing on, come to Hecuba.

1 Play. "But who, O! who has seen the mobled queen—"

Ham. The mobled queen?
Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

2 Play. "Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames
With his bare foot; a clout upon that head,
Where late the diadem stood; and, for a robe
About her lank and all o'ertoomed loins,
A blanket, in th' alarm of fear caught up;
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd, Gaiest fortune's state would treason have pronounced:

But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mixing with his sword her husband's limbs,
The instant burst of choler that she made,
Unless things mortal move them not at all)
Would have made milk the burning eyes of heaven,
And passionate the gods.*

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his color,
And has tears in his eyes!—Pyrrhes, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I have thee speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts, and brief chronicles, of the time: after your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their deserts.

Ham. God's bookish, man, much better use every man after his desert, and who should *scape whipping? Use them after your own honor and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs. [Exit Polonius, with some of the Players.
Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play tomorrow.—Doth thou love me, old friend? can you play the murder of Gonzago?

I Play, Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in't, could you not?

I Play, Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord: and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To Ros. and Guild.]
I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

[Exeunt Rosenkantz and Guildenstern.
Ham. Ay, so, good bye you.—Now I am alone.—O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Is it not monstrous, that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit, That from her working all his visage wound'd; Tears in his eyes, distraction in his aspect, A broken voice, and his whole function sitting With forms of his conceit? and all for nothing: For Hecuba! What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her? What would he do, Had he the motive and the cue for passion, That I have? He would draw the stage with tears, And cleave the general ear with horrid speech; Make mad the guilty, and appal the saint, Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed, The very faculties of eyes and ears. Yet I, A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak, Like a John a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, And can say nothing; no, not for a king, Upon whose property, and most dear life, A damn'd deceit was made. Am I a coward? Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across? Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face? Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat, As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this? Ha! 'Swounds! I should take it; for it cannot be, But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gait To make true speeches; and I am not sad, I should have fatted all the region kites With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy villain! Remberless, treacherous, lecherous, kindles villain! O, vengeance! Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave; That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell, Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words, And fall a cursing, like a very drab, A scullion! Fie upon't! fo! 'About my brain!—I have heard, That guilty creatures, sitting at a play, Have by the very cunning of the scene Been struck so to the soul, that presently They have professed some confusions; For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players Play something like the murder of my father,
Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks;
I'll test him to the quick: if he but blush,
I know my course. The spirit, that I have seen,
May be the devil; and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps,
Out of my weakness, and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds
More relative than this: the play's the thing,
Wherin 'twill catch the conscience of the king.

[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference,
Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?
Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted;
But from what cause he will by no means speak.
Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,
But with a crafty madness keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?
Ros. Most like a gentleman.
Guil. But with so much forcing of his disposition.
Ros. Niggard of question; but to our demands
Most free in his reply.
Queen. Did you assay him
To any pastime?
Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
We o'er-ruaught on the way: of these we told him;
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it. They are about the court;
And, as I think, they have already order
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true:
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties,
To hear and see the matter. [tent me
King. With all my heart; and it doth much con-
To hear him so inclin'd.
Good gentlemen, give him a farther edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too;
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here
Affront Ophelia: her father, and myself
Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge;
And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be his affliction of his love, or no,
That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you.
And, for your part, Ophelia, I do wish,
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope, your virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honors.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here.—Gracious, so please you
We will bestow ourselves.—Read on this book,
[To Ophelia.

That show of such an exercise may color
Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,—
'Tis too much prov'd,—that, with Devotion's visage,
And pious action, we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.

King. O! 'tis too soon.—[Aside.] How smart
A lash that speech doth give my conscience!
The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
Than is my deed to my most painted word.
O heavy burden!

Pol. I hear him coming: let's withdraw, my lord.
[Exeunt King and Polonius.
2 Monet. Ophelia behind, reading.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be: that is the question:—
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?—To die,—to sleep,—
No more; and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die;—to sleep:—
To sleep! perchance to dream:—ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Most give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despi'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare 'sould killkin' who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns,—puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of!
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now!
The fair Ophelia.—Nymph, in thy foris
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. [Coming forward] Good my lord,
How does your honor for this many a day?
Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.
Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never saw you aught.

Oph. My honor'd lord, I know right well you did;
And with them words of so sweet breath compor'd
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.
There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?
SCENE II.

PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Thus set it down. He shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the seas, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something settling matter in his heart,
Whereon his brain still beating pots him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you not?
Poë. It shall do well: but yet do I believe,
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia?
You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play
Let his queen's mother all alone inform him
To show his griefs: let her be round with him;
And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him; or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter Hamlet, and certain Players,

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O! it offends me to the soul, to hear a robustious periwigs-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings: who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows, and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing "Termagant:" it outshadows Herod: pray you avoid it.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action, with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one must, in your allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O! there be players, that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely, that neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellow'd, that I have thought some of nature's journeysmen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Play. I hope, we have reformed that indifferent ly with us.

Ham. O! reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will...
HAMLET,

ACT III.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet: these words are not mine.

Ham. Nay, nor mine now.—My lord, you played once in the university, you say? [To Polonius. Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a pet of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready? Ros. Ay, my lord; they fastay upon your patience. Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet; sit by me. Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King. Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap? [Lying down at Ophelia's Feet. Oph. No, my lord. Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap? Oph. Ay, my lord. Ham. Do you think I mean country matters? Oph. I think nothing, my lord. [legs. Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids! Oph. What is, my lord? Ham. Nothing. Oph. You are merry, my lord. Ham. Who, I? Oph. Ay, my lord. Ham. O God! you only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours. Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord. Ham. So long! Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by' redy, he must build churches then, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, 'For, O! for, O! the hobby-horse is forgot.'

Trumpets sound. The dumb Show enters.

Enter a King and Queen, very lovingly; the Quean embracing him. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Axum comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exits. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner seizes the Queen with gifts: she seems loath and unwilling archite, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord? Ham. Marry, this is miching 4 mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Believe, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

a "Question," i.e., point.  b "Pregnant," i.e., quick, ready.  c "Occulted," i.e., concealed; secret.  d "Stibby," i.e., smilty; workshop.  e "Censure," i.e., opinion.

t "They stay upon your patience," i.e., they wait upon your will.  4 "Misching mallecho," i.e., lurking mischief.
Scene II.

Prince of Denmark.

Op. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mark the play.

P. King. For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the poetry of a ring?

Op. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter the Player King and Player Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phoebus' car
Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;
And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen,
About the world have times twelve thirty been;
Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands,
Unite communal in most sacred bands. [Moon
P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and make an arcan count o'er, ere love be done.
But, woe is me! you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer, and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust,
Discomfit you, my lord, it nothing must;
For women's fear and love hold quantity,
In neither aught, or in extremity.
Now, what my love is proof here made you know,
And as my love is 'siz'd, my fear is so.
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly
My operant powers their functions leave to do:
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honor'd, belov'd; and, haply, one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!
Such love must needs be treason in my breast:
In second husband let me be accurst;
None wed the second, but who killed the first.

Ham. [Aside.] Wormwood, wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances, that second marriage move,
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:
A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed. [Speak,
P. King. I do believe you think what now you
But what we do determine off we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory,
Of violent birth, but poor validity:
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'ts, that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose love,
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactors with themselves destroy:
Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye; nor 'ts not strange,
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 'ts a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favorite flies:
The poor advanced makes friends of enemies;
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend,
For who not needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly season him his enemy,
But, orderly to end where I begun,

"Siz'd," i. e. proportioned.—"Operant." i. e. active.—
"The instances," i. e. the motives.—"Validity," i. e. value, efficacy.

Our wills and fates do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:
So think thou wilt no second husband wed,
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose lock from me, day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that b'anks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break 'her vow,—

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while:
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come miscensure between us twain!

[Exeunt.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?
Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O! but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no; they do but jest, poison in jest:
no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. Marry, how! aTropically.
This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon: 'tis a knavish piece of work; but what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the gal led jade wince, our withers are unvring.

[Exeunt Lucinius.

This is one Lucinius, nephew to the king.

Op. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Op. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. I would cost you a groaning to take off my edge.

Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands.—Begin, murderer: leave thy damnable faces, and begin.
Come:—The croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;
Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecate's 'ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magic and dire property,
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Flours the Poison into the Sleeper's Ear.

Ham. He poisons him? the garden for his estate.
His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and writ in very choice Italian. You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Op. The king rises.

Ham. What? frightened with false fire?
Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light!—away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.

*Anchor's for anchor's.—"Blanks." i. e. blanches; whites.—"The mouse-trap." i. e. 'The thing in which he'll catch the conscience of the king.'—"Tropically," i. e., figuratively.—"Man," i. e. curse.
Ham. Why, let the st ricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play;
For some must watch, while some must sleep:
Thus runs the world away.
Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me, with two Provincial Rolls on my raised shoes, get me a fellowship in a pack of players, sir?
Hor. Half a share.
Ham. A whole one, I.
For thou dost know, O Damon dear!
This realm dis mantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—peacock.
Hor. You might have rhymed.
Ham. O good Horatio! I’ll take the ghost’s word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?
Hor. Very well, my lord.
Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—
Hor. I did very well note him.
Ham. Ah, ha!—Come; some music! come; the records! For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, Belike,—he likes it not, perdy.—
Enter Rosenkantsiz and Guildenstern.

Come; some music!

Guilt. Good my lord, vouchesafe me a word with you.
Ham. Sir, a whole history.
Guilt. The king, sir,—
Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?
Guilt. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.
Ham. With drink, sir?
Guilt. No, my lord, with choler.
Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer, to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.
Guilt. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from the affair.
Ham. I am tane, sir; pronounce.
Guilt. The queen your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.
Ham. You are welcome.
Guilt. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother’s commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of business.
Ham. Sir, I cannot.
Guilt. What, my lord?
Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit’s diseased: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother; therefore no more, but to the matter. My mother, you say,—
Ros. Then, thus she says. Your behavior hath struck her into amazement and admiration.
Ham. O wondrous son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother’s admiration? impart.
Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.
Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any farther trade with us?
Ros. My lord, you once did love me.
Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.
Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distress

Ham. Ay, sir, but “while the grass grows,”—the proverb is something musty.

Enter one with a Recorder.
O! the recorder.—let me see one.—To withdraw with you—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a teal?
Guilt. O, my lord! if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanly.
Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?
Guilt. My lord, I cannot.
Ham. I pray you.
Guilt. Believe me, I cannot.
Ham. I do beseech you.
Guilt. I know no touch of it, my lord.
Ham. It is as easy as lying: govern these bantings with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.
Guilt. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony: I have not the skill.
Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. ’Shoul’d I do think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.—
Enter Polonius.

Goddess bless you, sir!
Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.
Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that’s almost in shape of a camel?
Pol. By the mass, and ’tis like a camel, indeed.
Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.
Pol. It is backed like a weasel.
Ham. Or, like a whale?
Pol. Very like a whale.
Ham. Then, will I come to my mother by and by,—They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.
Pol. I will say so.

[Exit Polonius.
Ham. By and by is easily said. Leave me, friends. [Exeunt Ros., Guilt., Hon., &c.

’Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out
Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot
And do such bitter business as the day [blood,
Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.—
O, heart! lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:
Let me be cruel, not unnatural.
I will speak daggers to her, but use none;
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:
How in my words soever she be shent,
To give them seals never, my soul, consent!

[Exit.
SCENE III.—A Room in the Same.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you: I your commission will forthwith dispatch, And he to England shall along with you. The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so dangerous, as doth hourly grow Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide. Most holy and religious fear it is, To keep those very many bodies safe, That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound, With all the strength and armor of the mind, To keep itself from novanoye; but much more That spirit, upon whose weal depend and rest The lives of many. The cease of majesty Dies not alone; but like a gulph doth draw What's near it with it: it is a massy wheel, Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount, To whose base spokes ten thousand lesser things Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls, Each small annexment, petty consequence, Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage; For we will fatter put upon this fear, Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. and Guil. We will haste us.

(Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.)

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet. Behind the arras I'll convey myself, [home; To hear the process: I'll warrant, she'll tax him And, as you said, and wisely was it said, 'Tis meet that some more audience than a mother, Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear The speech, of advantage. Fare you well, my liege: I'll call upon you ere you go to bed, And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord. [Exit Polonius.

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven; It hath the primal note of all offenses, A tyrant's murder.—Pray God, it may not, Though inclination be as sharp as will: My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent; And, like a man to double business bound, I stand in pause where I shall first begin, And both neglect. What if this cursed hand Were thicker than itself with brother's blood, Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens, To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy, But to confront the visage of offence? And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force,— To be forestalled, ere we come to full, Or pardon'd, being down? Then, I'll look up: My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer Can serve my turn? Forgive me, my foul murder!— That cannot be; since I am still possess'd Of those effects for which I did the murder, My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen. May one be pardon'd, and retain th' offence? In the corrupted currents of this world, Offence's gilded hand may shake by justice, And oft 'tis seen: the wicked it itself Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above: There is no-shuffling, there the action lies.

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Same.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him; Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear with, And that your grace hath scent'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll seconce me even here, Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother!

Queen. I'll warrant you; Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming. [Exit Polonius behind the Arras.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother: what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come; you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go; you question with a wicked tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so: You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife; And,—would it were not so!—you are my mother. Queen. Nay then, I'll send those to you that can speak.

187. In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd, Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults, To give in evidence. What then? what rests? Try what repentance can: what can it not? Yet what can it, when one can not repeat? O wretched state! O bosom, black as death! O tim'd soul, that struggling to be free, Art more engag'd! Help, angels! make assay: Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart, with strings of steel, Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe. All may be well.

188. Enter Hamlet behind, his Sword drawn.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying; And now I'll do't:—and so he goes to heaven, And so am I reveng'd.— That would be scan'd: A villain kills my father; and for that, I, his sole son, do this same villain send To heaven. Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge. He took my father grosly, full of bread; With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May, And how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven? But, in our circumstance and course of thought, 'Tis heavy with him; and am I then reveng'd, To take him in the purging of his soul, When he is fit and season'd for his passage? No. Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent. When he is drunk, asleeep, or in his rage; Or in th' incestuous pleasures of his bed; At gaming, swearing; or about some act, That has no vehil of salvation in't; Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven, And that his soul may be as dam'd, and black, As hell, whereo it goes. My mother stays: This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.]

King. [Rising.] My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words without thoughts never to heaven go. [Exit King.]
Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge:
You go not, till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the utmost part of you. [me.
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder
Help, help, ho!—
Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help! help! help!
Ham. How now! a rat? [Draws.] Dead for a ducat, dead.
[Hamlet makes a pass through the Aarass.
Pol. [Behind.] O! I am shain. [Falls and dies.
Queen. O me! what hast thou done?
Ham. [Coming forward.] Nay, I know not:
Is it the king?
[Lines the Aarass, and draws forth Polonius.
Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!
Ham. A bloody deed; almost as bad, good mother,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king!
Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell.
[Seeing the body of Polonius.
I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:
Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.
Leave wringing of your hands. Peace! sit you down,
And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff;
If dross and custom hath not bled it so,
That it is proof and bulwark against sense. [tongue Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy noise in so rude against me?
Ham. Such an act,
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty; Casts virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose From this fair station of an innocent love, And sets a blister there: makes marriage vows As false as dicer's oaths: O! such a deed, As from the body of crosstination plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow,
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With a truant visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.
Queen. Ah me! what act,
That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow:
"Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;" An eye like Mars, sad; "Hamlet, in thy station;" A station like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill; A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man.
This was your husband: look you now, what follows.
Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes? Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And "batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it, love; for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment
Would "stoop from this to this?" Sense, sure, you have,
Else, could you not have motion; but, sure, that sense
Is apoplex'd; for madness would not err,
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd,
But it reserve'd some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil was't,
That thus hath cozen'd you at a hoodman-blind?
Eyes without seeing, seeing without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling "sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so 'more.
O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
When the compulsive ardor gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And in the embers panders will;
Queen. O Hamlet! speak no more.
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and glaring spots,
As will not leave their tint.
Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an "ensenned bed;"
Stead in corruption; honeying, and making love
Over the natty syle;—
Queen. O, speak to me no more
These words, like daggers enter in mine ears:
No more, sweet Hamlet.
Ham. A murderer, and a villain;
A slave, that is not twenty part the title
Of your precedent lord:—"a vice of kings!"—
The cure of the empire and the rule,
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket?
Queen. No more!
[Enter Ghost, unarmed.
Ham. A king of shreds and patches.—
Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards!—What would you, gracious
Queen. Alas! he's mad. [figure?
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to clide,
That, hap'd in "flame and passion, lets go by
Th' important acting of your dead command?
O, say!
Ghost. Do not forget. This visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits:
O! step between her and her fighting soul;
"Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works.
Speak to her, Hamlet.
Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas! how is't with you,
That do you bend your eye on vacancy,
And with th' incorporeal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in th' alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in premonstrance,
Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son!
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Wherefore do you look?
Ham. On him, on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable.—Do not look upon me;
Least with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects: then, what I have to do
Will want true color; tears, perchance, for blood.
Queen. To whom do you speak this there?
Ham. Do you see nothing there?
"Hoodman-blind," I. e., blindman's buff.—"Suns," I. e., without.—"Could not so more," I. e., could not be so stupid—"deformed," I. e., dyed in green.—"Tinct," I. e., color.—"Ensenned," I. e., great rank; gross.—"A vice," I. e., a mimic; a counterfeit.—"Conceit," I. e., imagination.—The Air is exalted in relation to what is, without life or sensation.—"A Capable," I. e., susceptible; intelligent.—
"Effects," I. e., affections of the mind; dispositions.
SCENE I.

PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all, that is, I see.
Hom. Nor did you nothing hear?
Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.
Hom. Why, look you there! look, how it steals My father, in his habit as he liv'd! [away! Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal! [Exit Ghost.

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain: This bodiless creation *ecstasy Is very cunning in.
Hom. Ecstasy!
My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time, And makes as healthful music. It is not madness, That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the more will lend, not, which madness Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace, Lay not that flatteringunction to your soul, That not your trespass, but my madness speaks: It will but skin and film the urchin place, While rank corruption, mining all within, Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven; Repeat what's past; avoid what is to come, And when you spread the compost on the woods, To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue; For in the fineness of these purey times, Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg, Yea, curb and won, for leave to do him good. Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleav'd my heart in the brain.
Hom. O throw away the worser part of it, And live the purer with the other half.
Good night; but go not to mine uncle's bed: Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat Of habits, devil, is angel yet in this;
That to the use of actions fair and good He like wise gives a flock, or live lives, That aptly is put on: refrain to-night;
And that should lend a kind of easiness To the next abstinence: the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature, And master the devil, or throw him out With wondrous potency. Once more, good night: And when you are devisers to the gross, A blessing beg of you.—For this same lord, [Pointing to Polonius.] I do repent: but heaven hath pleas'd it so, To punish me with this, and this with me, That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well The death I gave him. So, again, good night.— I must be cruel, only to be kind:
Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.— One word more, good lady.
Queen. What shall I do?
Hom. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do: Let the blank king tempt you again to bed; Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his dog mouse; And let him, for a pair of *reec'h gloves, Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers, Make you to ravel all this matter out, That I essentially am not in madness, But mad in craft. 'Twere good, you let him know; For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise, Would from a paddock, from a bat, a *gib, Such dear concernings hide, who could do so? No, in despite of sense and secrecy, Unpeg the basket on the house's top, Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try *conclusions in the basket creep, And break your own neck down.
Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath, And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me. Ham. I must to England; you know that.
Queen. Ahack! I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on. [Follows,-
Hom. There's letters seal'd, and my two school
Whom I will trust, as I will adders fung'd,—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way, And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport, to have the enginer Hoist with his own petar, and it shall go hard, But I will delve one yard below their mines And blow them at the moon. O! 'tis most sweet, When in one line two crafts directly meet.—
This man shall set me packing: I'll lug the guts into the *neighbor room.—
Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave,-
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.—
Good night, mother.
[Exeunt severally: Hamlet dragging in Polonius.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these sigs: these profound heaves You must translate; 'tis fit we understand them. Where is your son?
Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.
[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night! King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?
Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both conjoin Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit, He hesips his riper out, and cries, "A rat! A rat!" And in his brainish apprehension kills The unseen old man.
King. O heavy deed! It had been so with us, had we been there. His liberty is full of threats to all; To you yourself, to every one. Ahas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt, This mad young man; but so much was our love, We would not understand what most was fit, But, like the owner of a foul disease, To keep it from divulging, let it feed Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?
Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd; O'er whom his very madness, like some ore Among a *mineral of metals base, Shows itself pure: he weeps for what is done.
King. O, Gertrude! come away! The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch, But we will ship him hence; and this vile deed We must, with all our majesty and skill,

HAMLET,

ACT IV.

Both countenance and excuse.—Ho! Guildenstern!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid. Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain, And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him: Go, seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends; And let them know, both what we mean to do, And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander,— Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter, As level as the cannon to his blank, Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our name, And hit the woundless sir.—O, come away! My soul is full of discord, and dismay.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Hamlet.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, where'to 'tis kin.

Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it thence, And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge, what replication should be made by the son of a king? Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw, first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord!

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body. How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He's lovd of the distracted multitude, Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes; And where 'tis so, 'th' offender's scourge is weight'd, But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even, This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: diseases, desperate grown, By desperate appliance are relievd,'

For. Go, captains, from me greet the Danish king:
Tell him, that by his license Fortinbras
Claims the conveyance of a prompt'sd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye;
And let him know so.

For. Go safely on. [Exeunt Fortinbras and Forces.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?
Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How profess'd, sir, I pray you?
Cap.
Against some part of Poland. Who COMMANDS them, sir?
Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,
Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it:
Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand
Will not debate the question of this straw:
They are the imposthume of much wealth and peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without
Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit Captain.

Ros. Will 't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I'll be with you straightforward. Go a little before.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good, and his market of his time,
Be but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason,
To do in us unkind. Now, what here it be
Bestial oblivion, or some eraven scuffle
Of thinking too precisely on this event,—
[dom, A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wise—
And ever three parts coward,—I do not know
Why yet I live to say, "This thing's to do;"
'Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means,
To do't. Examples, gross as earth, exhorte me:
Witness this army, of such mass and charge,
Led by a delicate and tender prince,
Whose spirit, with divine ambition puffed,
Makes mouths at the invisible event;
Exposing what is mortal, and unsure,
To all that Fortune, death, and danger, dare,
Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great,
Is not to stir without great Argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,
When honor's at the stake. How stand I, then,
That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
Excitements of my reason and my blood,
And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see
The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
That for a fantasy, and trick of fame,
Go to their graves like bedes; fight for a splot
Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause;
Which is not tomb enough, and 6continent,
To hide the slain?—O! from this time forth,
My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!
[Exeit.

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter 1 Queen, Horatio, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.
Gent. She is importunate; indeed, distract:
Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?
Gent. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears,
[heart;
There's tricks i' the world; and, hens, and beats her
Spurns 6enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,
That carry but half sense. Her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to 6collection; they 6aim at it,
And both the words up fit to their own thoughts;
Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,
Indeed would make one think, there might be thought,
Though nothing sure, yet much 6unhappily.
Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with, for she may strew
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in.—[Exit Horatio.
To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each 6toy seems prologue to some great amiss;
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spils itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Horatio, with Ophelia, 6distracted.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?
Queen. How now, Ophelia?

Oph. How should I your true love know [Singing.
From another one?
By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal 6shoes.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady! what imports this song?
He is dead and gone, lady,
[Singing.
He is dead and gone;
At his head a 6green grass turf,
At his heels a stone.

O, ho!

Queen. Nay, but Ophelia—
Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,
[Singing.

Enter King.

King. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. 6Larded with sweet flowers;
Which bewert to the grave did go,
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?
Oph. Well, 'Godild you'! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let’s have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine’s day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine:
Then, up he rose, and 2 don’d his clothes,
And 3 d’d up the chamber door; 4
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia! 5

Oph. Indeed, la! without an oath, I’ll make an
By Gia and by Saint Charity,
Ach, and fie for shame!
Young men will 2 d it, if they come to it;
By oath, they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised me to seed;

He answers.

So would I ha’ done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient; but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they would lay him i’ the cold ground. My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel,—Come, my coach! Good night, ladies: good night, sweet ladies: good night, good night. 6

[Exit King.]

Follow her close; give her her good watch, and pray you.

[Exit Horatio.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs All from her father’s death. And now, behold, O Gertrude, Gertrude!

When sorrows come, they come not single spies, But in battalions. First, her father’s skin; Next, your son gone; and last, the most violent author Of his own just remove: the people muddied, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whisperings,

For good Polonius’ death, and we have done but In 7 hugger-mugger to inter him; poor Ophelia, Divided from herself, and her fair judgment, Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts: Lost, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France, Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, And wants not buzzers to infect his ear With pestilent speeches of his father’s death; Wherein necessity, of matter beggar’d, Will nothing stick our persons to arraign In and out, and ear! O! my dear Gertrude, this, Like to a murdering 3 piece in many places Gives me superfluous death.

[A noise within.]

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

King. Attend! Where are my 3 Switzers? Let them guard the door. What is the matter?

2 Enter a Gentleman, in haste.

Gent. Save yourself, my lord; The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flats with more impetus haste, Than you Laertes, in a vicious head, O’er-coursing your officers! The rabble call him, 4 king:

And, as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The ratifiers and props of every word, They cry, “Choose we: Laertes shall be king!” Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds, “Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!” 5 [cry.

Queen. How cheerfully on the false 6 trail they O! this is 2 counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter Laertes, 7 with his sword drawn; Dances following.

Lacer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all Dan. No, let’s come in. 8 [without.

Lacer. I pray you, give me leave. Dan. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.

Lacer. I thank you: keep the door.—O thou vile Give me my father. 9

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Lacer. That drop of blood that’s calm proclaims me lastard; Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot Even here, between the chaste 8 unsmirched brow Of my true mother.

King. . What is the cause, Laertes, That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?

Let him go, Gertrude: do not fear our person: There’s such divinity doth hedge a king, That treason can but peep to what it would, Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incensed.—Let him go, Ger Speak, man.

[trude.

Lacer. Where is my father?

King. Dead. But not by him

Lacer. Let him demand his fill.

Lacer. How came he dead? I’ll not be juggled with. To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil! Consience, and grace, to the profoundest pit! I dare damnation. To this point I stand, That both the worlds I give to negligence, Let come what comes, only I’ll be reveng’d Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Lacer. My will, not all the world’s:
And, for my means, I’ll husband them so well, They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes, If you desire to know the certainty Of your dear father’s death, let’s in thy revenge, That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe, Winner and loser?

Lacer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them, then?

Lacer. To his good friends thus wide I’ll ope my And, like the kind life-rendering pelican, 9 farms; Re-sew them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak Like a good child, and a true gentleman. That I am guiltless of your father’s death, And am most sensibly in grief for it, It shall as level to your judgment pear, As day does to your eye.

Dances. [Within.] Let her come in.

Lacer. How now? what noise is that?

Re-enter Ophelia, 10 still distracted.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt, Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!— By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight,
SCENE VII.

PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Till our scale turns the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!
O heavens! 'tis possible, a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
Nature is fine in love; and, where 'tis fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him bare-fac'd on the bier;
Sings.

Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny:
And in his grave rain'd many a tear;

Fare you well, my love! [Venge.
Locr. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade me
It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing, Down a-down, an you call him a-down-a. O, how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.
Locr. This nothing's more than matter.
Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies; that's for thoughts.

Locr. A document in madness; thoughts and remembrance fitted.
Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines; there's rue for you; and here's some for me: we may call it, herb of grace of Sundays:—you may wear your rue with a difference.—There's a daisy: I would give you some violettes; but they withered all when my father died.—They say, he made a good end,—

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.—[Sings.

Locr. Thought and affliction; passion, hell itself, She turns to favor, and to prettiness.
Oph. And will he not come again? [Sings.

And will he not come again?
No, no, he is dead;—
Gone to his death-bed,
He never will come again.

His beard was white as snow,
All fuxen was his poll;
He is gone, he is gone,
And we cast away moon: God ha' mercy on his soul!

And all of Christian souls! I pray God.—God be wi' you! [Exit Ophelia, dancing distractedly.

Locr. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commence with your grief,
Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me.

If by direct, or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
To you in satisfaction; but if not,
We bear content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labor with your soul
To give it due content.

Locr. Let this be so:
His means of death, his obscure funeral,
No trophies, sword, nor hatchetment, o'er his bones,
No noble rites, nor formal ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call in question.

King. So you shall;
And, where th' offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me. [Exit."

*"Fine," i.e., refined; subtitled.—"The wheel is the burden of a ballad.—""Pansies" (Fr. pensées), thoughts.—"Commune with," i.e., partake of.

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Horatio, and a Servant.

Hor. What are they, that would speak with me? Serv. Sailors, sir: they say, they have letters for you.
Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Servant.

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

I Sail. God bless you, sir.
Hor. Let him bless thee too.

I Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir: it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it.

Hor. [Reads.]

"Horatio, when thou shalt have over-looked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valor; and in the grapple I beheaded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. The king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou would'st fly depth. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the charge of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstann hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell;

He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet."

Come, I will give you way for these your letters;
And do the speediest, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquaintance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
'Though you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursu'd my life.

Locr. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So criminal and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stir'd up.

King. O! for two special reasons,
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd,
But yet to me they are strong. The queen, his mother,
Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(If my virtue, or my plague, be it either which)
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him;—
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone,
Convert his eyes to graves; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them."

*"The bore is the caliber of a gun."—Since.—"The general gender," i.e., the common people.—"Gyres," i.e., letters.
Laert. And so have I a noble father lost,
A sister driven into desperate terms;
1 Who was, if praises may go back again,
2 Sole challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.
King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think,
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shock'd with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more:
I loved your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine, —
How now! what news?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet.
This to your majesty: this to the queen.
King. From Hamlet! who brought them?
Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudius, he receiv'd them
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.—
Leave us.
[Exit Messenger.

[Reads.] "High and mighty, you shall know, I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return.

HAMLET."

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back? Or is some abuse, and no such thing?
Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. "Naked," —
And, in a postscript here, he says, "alone":
Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him come:
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
"Thus diddest thou."

King. If it be so, Laertes,
(As how should it be so? how otherwise?)
Will you be ruled by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.
King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—
And he is not his usual voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it,— I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it accident.

My lord, I will be rule'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so,
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?
King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables, and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness. — Two months since,
Here was a gentleman of Normandy;
I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French,
And they can well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat;

* * Of the unworthiest siege," i. e., of the lowest rank.

And to such wond'rous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast. So far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman, was't?
King. The very same.
Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch, indeed,
And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you;
And gave you such a masterly report,
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially;
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you: the 4 scrimmers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them. This report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy,
That he could nothing do, but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you.
Now, out of this,

Laer. What out of this, my lord?
King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or were you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father,
But why I know love is beguiled by time;
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick, or stuff, that will abate it,
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a splendid,
Dies in its own too-much. That we would do,
We should do when we would; for this "would" changes,
And hath abatements and delays as many,
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this "should" is like a spendthrift's sigh,
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer,
Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake,
To do this yourself your father's son in deed,
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctify;
[tes,
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laer
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber,
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame,
The Frenchman gave you; bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads: he, being & remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foil; so that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose a sword unbated, and in a pass of 4 practice
Require him for your father.

Laer. I will do't;
And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an uction of a mountebank,
So mortal, that but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasme so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue

1 "In forgery of," i. e., in imagining. — "Brooch," i. e., ornament. — "Scrimmers" (Fr. escrimeurs), fencers. — "In passages of proof," i. e., in daily experience. — "Pleurisy here means superabundance." — "Remiss," i. e., inconstancy; not vigilant. — "Peruse," i. e., examine. — "Unbated," i. e., not blunted, so foils usually are. — "A pass of practice," i. e., an insidious thrust.
Under the moon, can save the thing from death, That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point With this contagion, that if I call him slightly, It may be death.

King.
Let's farther think of this:
Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means, May fit us to our shape. If this should fail, And that our drift look through our bad performance, 'Twere better not assay'd: therefore, this project Should have a back, or second, that might hold, If this should blast it, proof. Soft!—let me see:—
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings,—
I ha't:
When in your motion you are hot and dry,
(As make your bouts more violent to that end)
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prefer'd him
A challenge for the nonce, whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there. But stay! what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen!
Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow.—Your sister's drown'd, Laertes.
Laer. Drown'd! O, where?
Queen. There is a willow grows usht the brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
Therewith fantastic garlands did she make
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them.
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious siluer broke,
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,
And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up;
Which time she snatch'd snatches of old lands;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and redud
Unto that element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Fell'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.
Laer. Alas! then, is she drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.
Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out.—Alas, my lord,
I have a speech of fire, that thin would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it.

[Exit King.

Let's fellow, Gertrude.
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I, this will give start again;
Therefore, let's follow.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church Yard.
Enter two Clowns, with Spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that willfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is, and therefore make her grave—straight: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Water is found so.

1 Clo. It must be so offendenado; it cannot be else.
For here lies the point: if I drown myself willing, it argues an act, and an act hath three branches: it is, to act, to do, and to perform: aargal, she drowned herself willingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman deliver.

1 Clo. Give me the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes, mark you that; but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drown'd not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shorter not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry, is't; crowner's quest-law.

2 Clo. Will you lu'n' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st; and the more pity, that great folk shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their levens, Christian; my space. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditches, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: could he dig without arms? I put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now, thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To't.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for thy dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker: the houses that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to yon; fetch me a stomp of liquor.

[Exit 2 Clown.

1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,
Methought it was very sweet,
To contract, O! the time, for, ah! my behove,
O! methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

1 stomp and unyoke i. e., therefore—Even Christian for will-Christian.

2 stump a measure containing about half a gallon

* Blast in proof, as firearms sometimes burst in proving their strength.—Cunning is skill.—Arma chalice for the nonce. et. a cap for the occasion.—Stuck is a thrust.—Atwood—"Liberal," i. e., licentious.—"Land," i. e., hymns.—"Incapable" i. e., unacceptable.—"Strait" i. e., straightway; immediately.
HAMLET, ACT V.

Ham. 'Tis c'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath clove'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me 'till the land,
As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a scull.]

Ham. That scull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knife jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'revouches, one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courier, which could say, "Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?" This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so, and now my lady Worm's: chappless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see'd. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at *loggats with them? mine achoo to think on!

1 Clo. A pick-axes, and a spade, a spade, [Sings.
A pick-axes, and a spading shiek:
O! a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is met.

[Throws up another scull.]

Ham. There's another: why may not that be the scull of a lawyer? Where be his *quiddits now, his e'quitts, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the *seconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? These conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?
Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow.

—Whose grave's this, sir?

1 Clo. Mine, sir,—

O! a pit of clay for to be made [Sings.
For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think, it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in't.

1 Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't, and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore, thou liest.

1 Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

1 Clo. For neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

1 Clo. One, that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is: we must speak by the 'card, or equivocation will undo us. By the lord! Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it. For none is grown so picked, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his *kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days i' the years, I came to that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that. It was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry; why was he sent into England?

1 Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there; there, the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely!

1 Clo. 'Tis Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man, and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i'the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. 'Tis Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pokey cores now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a barnet will last you nine year.

Ham. Why be he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a scull now; this scull hath lain you I'd earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. What was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! a' poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same scull, sir, this same scull, sir, was Yorick's scull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times: and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now, get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch

*Loggats, an ancient game resembling quoits.—1 Quiddits, i. e., substines. 2 Quillets, i. e., frivolous distinctions.—3 The section, i. e., the head. Assurance is here used in a double sense; deeds of parchement are called the common assurances of the realm.

4 The age has grown so picked, i. e., an allusion to the shoes with long pointed or picked toes, formerly so much worn in England: picked is also curious, over-nice; hence the quib. A kibe is a child-ban.
thick, to this favor she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander looked o'this fashion i'the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smell so? Pah! [Puts down the Scuil.

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio.

Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: as thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returned into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam, and why of that loam, whereof he was constituted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

"Imperial Caesar, dead, and tumbled to clay."

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O! that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall 't expel the winter's flaw!

But soft! but soft! aside:—here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c. in Procession; the Corpse of Ophelia, Larerts and Mourners following; King, Queen, and their Trains.

Laer. The queen, the courtiers. Who is that they follow,
And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken,
The cause they follow did with desperate hand
Forsook in own life: 'twas of some estate.

Couch we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring 1 on side with Horatio.]

Lacer. What ceremony else?

That is Laerets,
A very noble youth: mark.

Lacer. What ceremony else?

1 Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd
As we have warranty: her death was doubtful; And but that great command o'erways the order,
She should in ground unsanctioned have lodg'd,
Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers,
'Shards,' flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her; Yet here she is allow'd her virgin chrants,
Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home
Of hell and burial.

Lacer. Must there no more be done?

1 Priest. No more be done.

We should profane the service of the dead,
To sing 2 and requiem, and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

Lacer. Lay her i' the earth;
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
May violets spring!—I tell thee, curdish priest,
A ministering angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What! the fair Ophelia?

Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell.

[Strewing flowers.]

I hope thou shouldest have been my Hamlet's wife:
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not to have strew'd thy grave.

Lacer. O! treble woe
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenion sense
Depriev'd thee of.—Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms.

[Leaping into the Grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o'er-top old Pelion, or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

... [Hamlet addressing Ghost.]

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief
Bears such an emblem? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand,
Like wonder-wounded heroes? this is I,
Hamlet the Dane.

[Leaping into the Grave.

Lacer. The devil take thy soul.

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I pr'ythee, take thy thy fingers from my throat;
I for though I am not spleenetic and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom fear. Hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet! Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen!—Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme,
Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.—What will you do for her?

King. O! he is mad, Laerets.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds! show me what thou'llt do:
Wouldst weep? woul'st fight? woul'st storm? woul't tear thyself?
Wouldst drink up Baill? eat a crocodile?
Till do';—'Till I'll do. Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I:
And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw
Millions of acres on us; till our ground,
Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,
I'll tart as well as thou.

King. This is mere madness:
And thus a while the fit will work on him.

7 Queen. Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden 8 couples are 8 disclos'd,
His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir?

What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever: but it is no matter;
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, the dog'll have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him.

[Exit Horatio.

[To Larerts.] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;
We'll put the matter to the present push.

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—
This grave shall have a living monument:
An hour of quiet thereby shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

[Ereunt.]

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other.—
You do remember all the circumstances.

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep: methought, I lay

8 The golden couples alludes to the dove laying but two eggs.
Worse than the rudest times in the wildest days. Rashly,—
And I am to be rashness for it,—let us twain,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
[us,
When our deep plots do fail; and that should teach
There's a divinity that shapes our ends.
Rough-hew them how we will.

_Hor._ That is most certain.

_Ham._ Up from my cabin,
My sea-gown and scarf about me, in the dark
Grop'd I to find out them; had my desire;
Finger'd their packet: and, in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again: making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unfold
Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,
O royal knavery! an exact command,—
Larded with many several sorts of reasons,
Importing Denmark's health, and England's too.
With, he! such dugs and gobins in my e-life,
That on the supercifie, no leisure
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.

_Hor._ Is't possible?

_Ham._ Here's the commission: read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed?

_Hor._ I beseech you.

_Ham._ An earnest conjuration from the king,—
As England was his faithful tributary,
As love between them like the palm might flourish,
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,
And stand a common trench their amities,
And many such like as's of great charge,—
That on the view and know of these contents,
Without debate or farther, more or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not sparing time allow'd.

_Hor._ How was this seal'd?

_Ham._ Why, even in that was heavy ordenate.
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal;
Folded the writ up in form of the other;
Subscribe it; gave thee't impression; plac'd it safely,
The changing never known. Now, the next day
Was our sea-fight, and what to this was sequent
Then know'st already.

_Hor._ So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

_Ham._ Why, man, they did make love to this employment:
They are not near my conscience; their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow.
'Tis dangerous, when a base nature comes
Between the pass and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

_Hor._ Why, what a king is this!

_Ham._ Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon—
He that hath kill'd my king, and whor'd my mother;
Popp'd in between his election and my hopes;
His angle for my proper life thrown out,
And with such cozenage—is't not perfect conscience, To quit him with his own? and is't not to be
To let this cancer of our nature come [Thom.,
_Hor._ It must be shortly known to him from Eng.
What is the issue of the business there.

_Ham._ It will be short: the interim is mine;
And a man's life no more than to say, one.
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself,
For by the image of my cause I see
The portraiture of his: I'll 8 court his favors:
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

_Hor._ Peace! who comes here?

_Enter_Osrick._

_Osr._ Your lordship is right welcome back to Den.

_Ham._ I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this water-fly?

_Hor._ No, my good lord.

_Osr._ Thy state is more the gracious, for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile;
let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a p'chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

_Osr._ Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure,
I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

_Ham._ I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit.
Your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

_Osr._ I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

_Ham._ No, believe me, 'tis very cold: the wind is northerly.

_Osr._ It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

_Ham._ But yet, methinks, it is very sultry, and hot for my complexion.

_Osr._ Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, as 'twere,—I cannot tell how.—But my lord, his majesyty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter,—

_Ham._ I beseech you, remember—

[Hamlet moves him to put on his Hat.

_Osr._ Nay, in good faith; for mine ease, in good faith.
Sir, here is now a newly come to court, Laertes;
I believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent 4 differences, of very soft society, and great showing; indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

_Sir._ Sir, his dexterity suffers no perdition in you;
though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy the arithmetick of memory; and yet but raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of exultation, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dexterity and rares-ess, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his unbraze, nothing.

_Osr._ Your lordship speaks most infullility of him.

_Ham._ The concurrence, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more raver breath?

Stand me now upon, _i.e._ become incumbent upon me. A change, a sort of jackalow—Excellent differences, _i.e._ distinguishing excellencies. _The card, _i.e._ the chart. This speech is a ridicule of the court jargon of that time.
SCENE II. PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Osr. Sir?
Hor. Is’t not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do’t, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?
Hor. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir. Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did; sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me.—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is.

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well was to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the impudence laid on him by them, in his mood he’s unfollowed.

Ham. What’s his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That’s two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses against the which he has imposed, as it would take it, six French rapiers and pistols, with their assigns, as girdle, t’hanglers, and so. Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hils, must delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the margin, were you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hanglers.

Ham. The phrase was more germene to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides: I would, it might be hanglers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that’s the French bet against the Danish. Why is this imposed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve, for nine; and that would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me, let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

[Exit.] Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for’t then.

Hor. This leaping runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dag before he sucked it. Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drossy age dotes on) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and windowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commanded him to you by young Osrick, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes: they follow the king’s pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whatsoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so: since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. Thou wouldst not think, how ill all is here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving, as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind disliked anything, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, ‘tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man of aught he leaves, knows what is to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osrick, and Attendants with Foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet; come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have done you But pardon’t, as you are a gentleman. [wrong; This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punish’d With some disdainful action. What I have done,

That might your nature, honor, and exception, Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was’t Hamlet wrong’d Laertes? Never, Hamlet: If Hamlet from himself be’t en away,

And when he’s not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not; Hamlet denies it.

Who does it then? His madness. It is so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong’d;

His madness is poor Hamlet’s enemy.

Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purpose’d evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot mine arrow o’er the house,

And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most To my revenge: but in my terms of honor,

I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation,

Till by some elder masters, of known honor,

I have a voice and precedent of peace.

To keep my name unv’rd. But till that time,

The ‘outward habit of encounter’ is exterior politeness of address.—‘Gain-giving,’ i. e., misgiving.—‘This presence,’ i. e., the king and queen.—‘Unv’rd,’ i. e., unwounded.
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.—
Give us the foils; come on. [Foils brought.]

Lac. Come; one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes: in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star: the darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Lac. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand. [Hamlet,延.]

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.—Cousin
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
You once bid laid the odds: the weaker side.
King. I do not fear it: I have seen you both;
But since he be better, we have therefore odds.
Lac. This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.]

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stools of wine upon that table.—
If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordinance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath:
And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups;
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannon without,
The cannon to the heavens, the heavens to earth,
"Now the king drinks to Hamlet!"—Come, begin:—
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Lac. Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham. One, No.

Lac. Judgment.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Lac. Well:—again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and Cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by while.

Come.—Another hit: what say you? [They play.]

Lac. A touch; a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.—

Here is a napkin, rub thy brows, my son:
The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord: I pray you, pardon me.

[She drinks.]

King. It is the poison'd cup! it is too late.

[Aside.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Lac. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Lac. And yet it is almost against my conscience.

[Aside.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes. You butdaily:
I pray you, pass with your best violence.
I am afraid, you make a wanton of me.

Lac. Say you so I come on. [They play.

Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Lac. Have at you now. [Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffling they change Rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.

King. Part them! they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.]

Osr. There is no more to the queen there, ho?

Hor. They bleed on both sides.—How is it, my
Osr. How is't, Laertes? [Lord.]

Lac. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osrick;
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink.—O my dear
Hamlet!—

The drink, the drink: I am poison'd. [Dies.]

Ham. O' villainy!—How? let the door be lock'd;
Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.]

Lac. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good:
In Hamlet there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated, and envenom'd. The foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me: lo! here I lie,
Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd;
I can no more. The king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point

Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King.]

All. Treason! treason! [Diss.]

King. O! yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incontinent, murderous, damned
Drink off this potion:—is thy union here? [Dane,
Follow my mother. [King dies.]

Lac. He is justly serv'd; it is a poison temper'd by himself;
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet;
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee;
Nor thine on me! [Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.
I am dead, Horatio.—Wretched queen, adieu!—
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mute or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest) O! I could tell you,—
But let it be.—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv'st: report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it; [Taking the Cup.]
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man,
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven I'll have it.—

[Struggling: Hamlet gets the Cup.]

O God!—Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!
If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To told my story. [March of Har, and off, and Shot within.]

What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from
To the ambassadors of England gives [Poland, This warlike volley.

Ham. O! I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite the o'er-crows my spirits;
I cannot live to hear the news from England;

1. "Unbaited," I. e., not blunted; without a button.—"Temper'd," I. e., mixed.—"A sergeant was a bailiff's or sheriff's officer."—"O'er-crows," I. e., overcomes; subdues.
Scene II.

Prince of Denmark.

But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the *occurrences, more and less,
Which have *solicited—The rest is silence. [Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart.—Good night,
Sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come bither? [March within.

Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it ye would see?

If aught of woe, or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This *quarry cries on *havock.—O proud death!

What feast is *toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck? [Exeunt, marching.

1 Amb. The sight is dismal,
And our affairs from England come too late:
The ears are senseless that should give us hearing,
To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead.

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth.

Had it th' ability of life to thank you:
He never gave commandment for their death.

But since, so jumpe upon this bloody question,
You from the *Polack wars, and you from England.

Occurrences.— solicited, i. e., incited; the sentence is left unfinished.—* Quarry' was the term for a heap of slaughtered game.—* Havock, a word of censure, when more game was destroyed than was reasonable.—* Toward, i. e., at hand; near; in preparation.—* So jumpe, i. e., so exactly at the time.—* Polack, i. e., Polish.

Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak to the yet unknown world,
How these things came about: so shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters,
Of deaths put on by cunning, and for'd cause,
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads. All this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.

For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune:
I have some rights of *memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my *vantage doth invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more:

But let this *scene be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mis-

chance,

On plots and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally: and for his passage,
The soldiers' music, and the rites of war,
Speak loudly for him.—

Take up the body.—Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.

Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead March.

[Exeunt, marching; after which, a Peal of Ordnance is shot off.

* Put on, i. e., instigated; produced.—* Rights of memory, i. e., rights which are remembered.—* Vantage is here used for opportunity, convenience.
KING LEAR.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

SCENE, Britain.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King Lear's Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloster, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdoms, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed, that 'curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.'

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am 'brazed' to it.

* Curiosity is scrupulous nitesty, finical precision.—* Moiety is used by Shakespeare for part or portion.—* Brazed, i. e., hardened.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; where- upon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some "year elder than this, who yet is no denier in my account: though this knave came somewhat scantily into the world, before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair, there was good sport at his making, and the woreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honorable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

* Proper is comely, handsome.—* "Some year," i. c., about a year.
KENT. I must love you, and sue to know you better.
EDG. Sir, I shall study to deserve.
GLO. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming. [Sennet within.

ENTER LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and attendants.

LEAR. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloster.
GLO. I shall, my liege. [Exeunt GLOSTER and EDG."DUM.

LEAR. Mean-time, we shall express our darker purpose.
Give me the map there. —Know, that we have divided, In thee, our kingdom; and this our eldest son,
To shake all cares and business from our age,
Conferre'ing on younger strengths, while we Unburdened crush toward death. —Our son of Cornwall,
And you, our dearest son, of Albany; [Wall.
We have this hour a constant will to publish
Our daughters' several dovers, that future strife
May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,
Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love,
Long in our court have made theirammenous sojourns,
And here are to answer'd. —Tell me, my daughters,
(Since now we divest us, both of rule,
Interest of territory, cares of state)
Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?
That we to our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge. —Goneril,
Our eldest-born, speak first. [Aside.
GON. I love you more than words can wield the Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty; Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare; No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honor: As much as child e'er lov'd, or lover found;
A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable; Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

COR. What shall Cordelia speak? —Love, and be silent. [Aside.
LEAR. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this, With shadowy forests, and with champains rich'd,
With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady: to thine and Albany's issue Be this perpetual. —What says our second daughter, Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall? Speak. REG. I am made of that self metal as my sister, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart I find, she names my very deed of love; Or, she comes too short, that I profess myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious spine of sense possesses,
And find, I am alone felicitate
In your dearest g dinness' love. [Aside.

COR. Then, poor Cordelia! And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's More plenteous than thy tongue. [Aside.
LEAR. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that confer'd on Goneril. —Now, my joy,
Although our last, not least; to whose young love

* Deserving," 1 e., to be, to make myself deserving,
* Our darker purpose," i.e., that part of our plan which we have not yet disclosed, or brought to light; "a Fast intent," 1 e., fixed resolution; "Constant," 1 e., firm, fixed; "Can wield the matter," 1 e., can express.-"Beyond all manner of so much," i.e., beyond all kinds of comparisins, expressed by so much as this, that, etc., enriched.
*"Prize me at her worth," 1 e., estimate myself at her value; "Felicitate," 1 e., made happy.-"Validity is used for value.

The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be interested; what can you say, to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.
COR. Nothing, my lord.
LEAR. Nothing? COR. Nothing.
LEAR. Nothing will come of nothing: speak again.
COR. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my hand; nor more, nor less. [Title.
LEAR. How? how, Cordelia? mend your speech a little you may mar your fortunes.
COR. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honor you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say.
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.
LEAR. But goes this with thy heart?
COR. Ay, my good lord.
LEAR. So young, and so untouched?
COR. So young, my lord, and true.
LEAR. Let it be so: thy truth, then, be thy dower;
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night,
By all the operation of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stronger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbor'd, pitied, and relieved,
As thou, my sometime daughter.

KENT. Good my liege,—
LEAR. Peace, Kent!
Come not between the dragon and his wrath.
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. —Hence, and avoid my sight!—
[To CorDELIA.
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her!—Call France.—Who stirs?
Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two daughters' dovers digest the third:
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty.—Ourselves, by monthly course,
With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turns. Only, we still retain
The name, and all th' additions to a king;
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you. [Giving the Crown.
KENT. To the Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honor'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
And as my patron thought on in my prayers,—
LEAR. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.
KENT. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart: be Kent unmann'd,

1 Interested. — "Propinquity," 1 e., kindred; relationship.—"From this," 1 e., from this time.—"His generation," 1 e., his offspring.—"Additions," 1 e., titles.
KING LEAR.

When Lear is mad.—What wouldst thou do, old man?
Think'st thou, that duty shall have dread to speak,
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honor's bound,
When majesty stoops to folly; Reverse thy doom;
And in thy best consideration check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
Reverbs no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Out of my sight! Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo,—

Kent. Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. Now, by Apollo, king,

O, vassal! 'tis recreant!

Kent. Do;

Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift;
Or, whilst I can vent clamor from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, recreant!

On thine allegiance hear me.
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
(Which we durst never yet) and, with strain'd pride,
To come betwixt our sentence and our power,
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for provision
To shield thee from * diseases of the world,
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back
Upon our kingdom: if the seventh day following,
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death. Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.

KENT. Fare thee well, king: since thus thou wilt
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.—
The gods to their dear shelter take thee, mad, mad [Appears.
That justly think'st, and last most rightly said!—
And your large speeches may your deeds approve,
[To Cornelia.
That good effects may spring from words of love.—
Thus Kent, 0 princes! bids you all adieu;
He'll shape his old course in a country new.

[Exit.

FLOURISH. Re-enter GLOSTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My lord of Burgundy,
We first address toward you, who with this king
Hast avail'd for our daughter: what, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?

Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us, we did hold her so;
But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands:
If she be dear to you, let her come in,
Or of it, with our displeasure pelted.
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer.

Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes, Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our love,
Take her, or leave her?

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir; Election makes not up on such conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,
I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate: therefore, beseech you
T' avert your liking a more worthy way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is ashamed
Almost t' acknowledge hers.

FRANCE. This is most strange, That she, that even but now was your 3bluest object,
Then a monument of your praise, half of your age,
Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favor. Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That 'monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall'n into.taint: which to believe of her,
Must be a faith that reason, without miracle,
Could never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,

If for what I meant that glib and oily art,
To speak and purpose not, since what I well intend,
I'll do before I speak) that you make known
It is no vicious blots, nor other founness,
No unchaste action, or dishonor'd stoop,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favor;
But even for want of that for which I am richer,
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou
Hadst not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better.

FRANCE. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature,
Which often leaves the history mospace,
That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love is not love,
When it is mingled with 9 respects, that stand
Alow from the entire point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear, Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father,
That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy:
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

FRANCE. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor,

* See "Seeming," i.e., specious.—" Owes," i.e., owes; is possessed of.—" Stranger'd," i.e., o. — " Makest not up," i.e., is not concluded.—That is used here for as.—" Monsters it," i.e., makes it monstrous.—" Fallen into talent," i.e., become the subject of reproach.—For because.—" Hath lost me in your liking," i.e., hath ruined me in your good opinion.—" With respects," i.e., with prudential considerations.
Most choice, forsaken, and most lov'd, despis'd,
Then and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! tis strange, that from their cold's neglect
My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—
Thy dowerless daughter, king,thrown to my chance,
Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukés of waterish Burgundy
Shall buy this unsir'd precious maid of me.—
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou losest here, a better where to *find.

LEAR. Thou hast her, France; let her be thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again;—Therefore, be gone
Without our grace, our love, our *benson.—
Come noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloucester, and Attendants.

FRANCE. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. Ye jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you: I know what you are; and,
And, like a sister, am most loth to call
Your faults as they are nam'd. Love well our father;
To your *professed bosoms I commit him:
But yet, ala! stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

GON. Prescribe not us our duty.

REG. Let your study
Be content your lord, who hath receiv'd you
As fortune's alms; you have obedience sauntered,
And well are worth the want that you have *wanted.
Cor. Time shall unfold what lighted cunning hides;
Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

FRANCE. Come, my fair Cordelia.

GON. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both; I think, our father will hence to-night.

REG. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

GON. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most, and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

REG. 'Tis the infirmity of his age; yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

GON. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then, must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engraff'd condition, but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

REG. Such uncertain starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

GON. There is farther compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us sit together; let our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

REG. We shall farther think of it.

GON. We must do something, and I the *heat.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloster's Castle.

ENTER EDMUND. 2 the Bastard, with a Letter.

EDM. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound. Wherefore should I
Stand *on the plague of custom, and permit
The *curiosity of nations to *deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines
Leg of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base,
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madam's issue. Why brand they us
With base? with businesse? bastardry? base? base?
Who in the lusty stealth of nature take
More composition and fierce quality,
Than doth within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of foes,
Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your hand:—
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund,
As to the legitimate. Fine word,—legitimate!—
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:—
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

*Reads the Letter.

ENTER GLOSTER.

GLO. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night! *subscribe'd his power!
Confus'd to *exhibition! All this done
Upon the *exhibition! How now! What news?
EDM. So please you your lordship, none.

Hiding the Letter.

GLO. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

EDM. I know no news, my lord.

GLO. What paper were you reading?

EDM. Nothing, my lord.

GLO. No! What needed, then, that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see; come; if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

EDM. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'er-reading.

GLO. Give me the letter, sir.

EDM. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, Are to blame.

GLO. Let's see, let's see.

EDM. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

GLO. *Reads.] 1 This policy, and reverence of age,
Makes the world bitter to the best of our times;
Keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and *fond bond age in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, Edgar."—Humph!—Conspiracy!—

"Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half

*That is "Thou losest preference here, to find a better elsewhere."—"Benson is blessing."—"Profess for professing,"—"That is. And well deserve the loss of the dower that you have failed to obtain."—"Long-engraffed condition," i.e., qualities of mind confirmed by long habit.—"I the best," i.e., "While the iron is hot," his revenue."—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in?—When came this to you? Who brought it? Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there's the running of it: I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's? Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I will faire think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his, my lord: but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord; but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that sons at perfect age, and fathers declined, the father should be asward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, I have a talk I must deliver from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; 'where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honor, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honor, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honor judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any farther delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you; frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently, convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequel effects. Love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason, and the bond broken between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bins of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty, this strange. [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent forreyness of the world, that when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behavior) we make guilty of our disas, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and traitors, by spheric predomination; drunkards, knaves, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influences, and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on. An admirable evasion of whoreson-master man, to lay his dotard disposition to the charge of stars!—'My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ura major; so that, it holds heurous.—Tut! I should have been that I am, had the maidenslot star in the firmament twinkled on my bostardizing.

Edgar—

Enter Edgar.

and put he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my care is villainous melancholy, with a sign like Tom o'Bedlam.—O! these eclipses do portend these divisions. Fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, death, dissolution of ancient amities; divisions in state; menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffinences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no disliking him, by word, or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him, that on the mischief of your person it would seem a slight.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitten bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go: there's my key. If you do sir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business. [Exit Edgar.]

A credulous father, and a brother noble, Whose nature is so far from doing harms, That he suspects none, on whose foolish honesty My practices ride easy.—I see the business. Let me, if not by birth, have hands by wit: All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit. [Exit.
SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow, That can my speech d abuse, my good intent May carry through itself to that full issue For which I did a wrong's my likeness.—Now, banish'd Kent, If thou canst serve where thou dost stand commend'd, (As may it come to!) thy master, whom thou lov'st, Shall find thee full of labors.

Horns within. Enter Lear, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now! what art thou? Kent. A man, sir. Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us? Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; To serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose, and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou? Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor As the king. Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou? Kent. Service.

* "Dissime," i. e., disguise.—"Raz'd," i. e., effaced.—* "To converse," i. e., to keep company.

Lear. What services canst thou do? Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly; that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence. Lear. How old art thou? Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho! dinner! Where's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither. Enter Oswald.

You, you, sirrah, where's thy daughter? Oswald. So please you,—[Exit. Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clodpole back. "Exit Knight."—Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep. [Re-enter Knight.] How now, where's that mongrel? Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I called him? Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not! Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general dependants, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so? Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception. I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity; than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much plied away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

Re-enter Oswald.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him. Oswald. I'll not be a stricken, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base foot-ball player. [Tripping up his heels. Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I love thee. Kent. Come, sir, arise; away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away! Go to; have you wisdom? so. [Pushes Oswald out

4 "Jealous curiosity," i. e., punctilious jealousy.—"A very pretence," i. e., an absolute design.
Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service.

[Giving Kent money.]

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too:—here's my coxcomb, [Giving Kent his Cap.]

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou? Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Lear. Why, my boy? Fool. Why? For taking one part that's out of favor.—Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'rt catch cold; shortly: there, take my coxcomb and a bundle of my fellow's banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will: if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, Sirrah! Would I had two coxcombs, and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my e living, I'd keep my coxcomb myself. There's nine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel: he must be whipped out, when the lady 3brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me.

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle. Have more than thou showest, Speak less than thou knowest, Lend less than thou owest, Ride more than thou goest, Learn more than thou 'trowest, Set less than thou overthrowest; Leave thy drink and thy whore, And keep in-a-door, And thou shalt have more Than two tens to a score.

Lear. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then, 'tis like the breath of an unfeec'd lawyer: you gave me nothing for't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord, that counsell'd thee To give away thy land, Come place him here by me; Do thou for him stand: The sweet and bitter fool Will presently appear; The one hath motives, The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away, that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith; lords and great men will not let me: if I had a monopoly out, they would have part out, and loads too: they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be sanctithing.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crows.

Lear. What two crows shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crows of the egg. When thou closest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou brest thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

Fools had ne'er less grace in a year; [Singing.]

1 For wise men are grown foppish;
2 And well may fear their ways to wear,
 Their manners are so aspish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers: for, when thou gavest them the rod and putt'st down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing.]
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool; and yet I would not be thee, nuncle: thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the middle. Here comes one o' the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that 3frontlet on?

Methinks, you are too much of late i' the brown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an o'without a figure. I am better than thou art now: I am a fool; thou art nothing.—Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue! so your face [To Gons.] bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum:

He that keeps nor crust nor crum, [Singing.]
Weary of all, shall want some.

That's a shielded 5peasow.

Goneril. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool, But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth In rank, and not to be endured, riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you, To have found a safe redress, but now grow fearful, By what yourself too late have spoke and done, That you protect this course, and put it long. Don't you write it; instigate it:—Allasance for aggravation, Which, in the tender of a wholesome 6weal, Might in their working do you that offence, Which else were shame, that then necessity Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you 6know, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long;
That it had its head bit off by its young.

1 "Catch cold shortly," i. e., be turned out of doors.—
2 Nuncle, a familiar contraction of mine uncle.—
3 "Living," i. e., estate property. —A brach is a bitch hound.—
4 Own- cet. —Toptower," i. e., believed.
5 Grace in favor.—
6 A frontlet, or for head cloth, was worn by ladies of old to prevent wrinkles, or frump.--"An O without a figure," i. e., a cipher.—
7 A shelled peasow; a mere empty husk.—"But it on," i. e., promote it; instigate it.—
8 A wholesome weal, i. e., a well-governed state.
KING LEAR

SCENE IV.

So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter? [wisdom.

Gon. I would, you would make use of your good Whereof I know you are fraught, and put away These dispositions, which of late transform you
From what you rightly are.

Lear. May not it be true when the court draws the horse?—Wrong, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Does any here know me?—Why this is not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his discernings are lethargied.—Sleeping or waking?—Ha! sure 'tis not so.—Who is it that can tell me who I am?—Lear's will I would learn that for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' the favor Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aright, As you are old and revrident, should be wise.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires; Men so disorder'd, so debanch'd and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners, Shows like a riotous inn: epicurian and lust
Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel, Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth speak For instant remedy: be, then, o' th' rack
By her, that else will take the thing she begs,
A little to disseiguity your train;
And the remainder, that shall still depend,
To be such men as may besort your age,
Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!—

Saddle my horses; call my train together.—

Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:
Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble
Make servants of their better.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—O, sir! [To Alb. Are you come?

Is it your will? Speak, sir.—Prepare my horses!—

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster.

Alb. Sir, pray, be at patience.

Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To Goneril.

My train are men of choice and meanest parts, That all particular of duty know,
And in the most exact regard support
The worship of their name,—O, most small fault! How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show,
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature
From the find place, drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear! Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in,

[Striking his head.

And thy dear judgment out.—Go, go, my people.

Lear. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.

Hear, nature, hear! dear goddess, hear! Suspends thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful! Into her womb convey sterility!

Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honor her! If she must teen,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a thwart dismurtur'd torrent to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With a cadent tears foot channels in her cheeks;
Turn all her mother's pains, and *benefits,
To laughter and contempt;* that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!—Away! away! [Exit.

Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon. Never affect yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What? fify of my followers, at a clap,
Within a fortight?

Alb. What's the matter, sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee.—Life and death! [To Goneril.] I am ashamed,
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus:
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee!
Th' unoctented woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee!—Old fond eyes,
Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck you out,
And cast you, with the waters that thee lea,
To temer clay.—Ha!

Lear. Let it be so:—I have another daughter.

Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable:
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy wofull visage. Thou shalt find,
That I'll resume the shape, which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever.

[Exit LEAR in fury, KENT, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

Lear. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you—

Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho!
You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

[To the Fool.

Fool. Nunce Lear, nunce Lear! tarry, and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,

Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter;

So the fool follows after.

[Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel.—A hundred knights!
'Tis politic, and safe, to let him keep [Dream, At a point a hundred knights: yes, that on every Each bus, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may engage his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!—

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far.

Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Fear still to be taken: I know his heart.
What he hath uttered I have writ my sister:
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd th' unfitness,—how now,
Oswald!

Re-enter Oswald.

What have you writ that letter to my sister?
Enter Gentleman.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy. [departure, Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter.]

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloster.

Enter Edmund and Curan. meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad: I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but whispering arguments.

Edm. No, I. I pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir.

[Exit Edm.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a squeezy question, Which I must act. —Briefness, and fortune, work! —
Brother, a word: —descend: —brother, I say! —

Enter Edgar.

My father watches. —O sir! fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid:

You have now the good advantage of the night; —
Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall? He's coming hither. —Now, i' the night, Fain haste, And Regan with him: have you nothing said Upon his —party 'gainst the duke of Albany? —
Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming. —Pardon me; In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you: Draw! seem to defend yourself. Now 'quit you well. Yield! —come before my father; —Light, ho! here! —
Fly, brother; —Torches! torches! —So, farewell. —

[Exeunt Edgar.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion

[Wounds his arm.]

Of my more fierce endeavor: I have seen drunkards Do more than this in sport. —Father! father!

Stop, stop! No help!

Enter Gloster, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain? [out.

Edm. Here stood he in the dark; his sharp sword Mummling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon To stand auspicious mistress.

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

*"Ear-whispering arguments," I. e., whispered arguments.
*"Toward," i. e. in preparation —"Qu-say," i. e. del(ic)ate.
*"Upon his party," I. e. upon the party formed by him (Cornwall) against the duke of Albany.—"Advise yourself!" I. e. recollect yourself.
KING LEAR.

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—
Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after.—[Exit Serv.]
Edm. Pursu'd me to the murder of your lordship; but that I told him, the revenging gods 'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend; Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond The child was bound to the father;—sir, in fine, Seeing how loathly opposite I stood To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, Where in his prepared sword he charges home My unprovided body, lance'd mine arm: But 'twas whether he saw my best alarum'd spirits, Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to th' encounter, Or whether 'tis ghasted by the noise I made, Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far; Not in this land shall he remain long; And found, dispatch'd. —The noble duke my master, My worthy barchet pamet, comes to-night: By his authority I will proclaim it, That he, which finds him, shall deserve our thanks, Bringing the murderous coward to the stake; He, that conceals him, death.

Edm. Where I dismissed him from his intent, And found him 'pight to do it, with 4curst speech I threaten'd to discover him: he replied, "Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think, If I would stand against thee, would the reposals Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny, (As this I would,) although thou didst produce My very character, I'd turn it all To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice: And thou must make a dandar of the world, If they not thought the profits of my death Were very pregnant and potential spurs To make thee caple.

Glo. Strong and fasten'd villain! Would he deny his letter?—I never got him. [Trunckt within.

Hark! the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes.—
All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not scape; The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture I will send far and near, that all the kingdom May have due note of him; and of my land, Loyal and natural boy. I'll work the maons To make thee caple.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

CORNWALL. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither, [news. (Which I can call but now) I have heard strange
Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short, Which can pursue th' offender. How dost, my lord? Glo. O, madam! my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.
Reg. What! did my father's godson seek your life? He whom my father nam'd! your heir, your Edgar? Glo. O, lady, lady! shame would have it hid. Reg. Was he companion with the riotous knights That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam: 'tis too bad, too bad.—
Edm. Yes, madam, 'tis; he was of that consort. Reg. No marvel, then, though he were illaffected:

*"Ghastled," i. e., agasthet; frighted. —"Arch," i. e., chief. —"Fight," i. e., fixed in his purpose. —"Curst," i. e., angry; bitter. —"The reposals," i. e., the opinion repos'd in these. —"Faithful," i. e., to be believed; to be credited. —"Character," i. e., hand-writing; signature. —"Strong," i. e., determined; resolute. —"Capable," i. e., capable of succeeding to my land.

'Tis they have put him on the old man's death, To have th' expense and waste of his revenues. I have this present evening from my sister Seen well innumerable of them; and with such cautions That if they come to sojourn at my house, I'll not be there.

CORN. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.—
Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father A child-like office.
Glo. He did bewray his practice; and receiv'd this hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
CORN. Is he pursued?
Glo. Ay, my good lord, he is.
CORN. If he be taken, he shall never more Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose, How in my strength you please.—As for you, Edmund, Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant So much commend itself, you shall be ours: Natures of such deep trust we shall much need; You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir, Truly, however else.
Glo. For him I thank your grace.
CORN. You know not why we came to visit you.

REG. Thus out of season, threading dark-eyed' night. Occasions, noble Gloster, of some pert., Wherein we must have use of your advice. Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister, Of differences, which I best thought fit To answer from our own: the several messengers From hence attend despatch. Our good old friend, Lay comforts to your bason, and bestow Your needful counsel to our business, Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam. Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before GLOSTER'S Castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

Osw. Good *dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?
Kent. Ay.
Osw. Where may we set our horses?
Kent. I 't he mine.
Osw. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.
Kent. I love thee not.
Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in 10 Finsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.
Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow, I know thee.
Osw. What dost thou know me for?
Kent. A knave, a rascal, an enter of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a filthy liver'd, action-taking knave, a whoreson glass-gazing, super-serviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou denyest the least syllable of thyaddition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knowest thee.

* "Bewray his practice," i. e., reveal his treacherous doings. — "Poise is weight, moment." — "From our home," i. e., away from our home. — "Dawning for morning." — "Pinfold," i. e., pound. — "Of thy addition," i. e., of thy titles.
KENT. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thee knowest me. Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines so bright, I can see o' the moonshine of you: [Drawing his Sword.] Draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger, draw.

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

KENT. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king, and take Vanity, the puppet's, part, against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so curulamo your shanks:—draw, you rascal; come your ways.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!

KENT. Strike, you slave: stand, rogue, stand; you ne'te slaver, strike.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Edmund, and Servants.

KENT. With you, goodman boy, if you please: I'll fetch you; come on, young master. [Come, Glo. Weapons! Here? Here? What's the matter here? [man?]

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter, or a painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have
At suit of his grey beard,—[spot'd
KENT. Thou, wheresoe' zed thou, unnecessary letters?—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbol'ted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a 4jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

KENT. Ye are a sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

KENT. That such a slave as this should wear a sword, Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these, Like rats, oft bite the holy cords atwa'n [sion Which are too 'intrin'es't unloose; smooth every pas- That in the natures of their lords rebels; Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods; [Revege, affirm, and turn their 3halcyon breaks With every gale and vary of their masters, And knowing nought, like dogs, but following,— A plague upon your epileptic visage!

Smile 1 at my speeches, as I were a fool? Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain, I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fall you out? say that.

KENT. No contrivances hold more antipathy, Than I and such a knife. [his offence?

Corn. Why dost thou call him knife? What's KENT. His countenance lies me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.

KENT. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain: I have seen better faces in my time, Than 2 stand on any shoulders that I see Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow, Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect A saucy roughness, and constrains the barb Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he; An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth: For they will take it, so 'tis not, he's plain. These kind of knives I know, which in this plainness Harbor more craft, and more corrupter ends, Than twenty silly ducking observants, That stretch their duties nicely.

Corn. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity, Under th' allowance of your grand aspect, Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire On ill-fearing Piusbus front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

KENT. To go out of my dialect, which you recommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Glo. Never gave him any.

It please'd the king, his master, very late, To strike at me upon his misconstruction; When he, compact, and flattering his displeasure, Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd, And put upon him such a deal of man, That wothl'd him, got praises of the king For him attempting who was self-embold'd; And, in the fleasement of this dread exploit, Drew on me here again.

KNT. None of these rogues, and cowards, But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks! You stubborn ancient knave, you reverence bragget, We'll teach you—

KNT. Sir, I am too old to learn.

Call not your stocks for me; I serve the king, On whose employment I was sent to you: You shall do small respect, show too bold malice Against the grace and person of my master, Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks! As I have life and honor, there shall he sit till noon. [Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.

KNT. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog, You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knife, I will. [Stocks brought out.

KNT. This is a fellow of the self-same color Our sister speaks of.—Come, buy away the stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so. His fault is much, and the good king his master Will check him for't: your purpos'd low correction Is such, as basest and condemned'at wretchest, For pilferings and most common trespasses, Are punish'd with. The king must take it ill, That he, so slightly valued in his messenger, Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse, To have her gentleman abused, assaulted, For following her affairs.—Put in his leg—

KNT. is set in the Stocks

1 'Is their fool," i. e., is a fool to them.
SCENE IV.—Before Gloster’s Castle.

Enter Lear, Fool, and a Gentleman.

Lear. ’Tis strange that they should so depart from And not send back my messenger. [Home.

Gent. As I learn’d, The night before there was no purpose in them Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master! [Waking.

Lear. Hn.

Fool. Mak’st thou this shame thy pastime? Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! look; he wears a cruel garter. Horses are tied by the head; dogs, and bears, by the neck; monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs. When a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden® neither stocks, [mistook, Lear. What’s he, that hath so much thy place To set thee here? Kent. It is both he and she; Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, no; they would not. Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do’t; They could not, would not do’t: ’Tis worse than murder To do upon respect such violent outrage. [der, Resolve me with all modest haste which way Thou might’st deserve, or they impose, this usage, Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home I did commend your highness’ letters to them, And was receiv’d from the place that show’d My duty kneeling, came there a second post, Stew’d in his haste, half-breathless, panting forth From Goneril, his mistress, a salutation; Deliver’d letters, spite of interference, Which presently they read: on whose contents, They summon’d up their meiny, straight took horse; Commanded me to follow, and attend The leisure of their daughter, and gave me cold looks: And meeting here the other messenger, Whose welcome, I perceiv’d, had poison’d mine, (Being the very fellow which of late Display’d so saucily against your highness) Having more man than wit about me, drew: He mis’d the house with loud and coward cries. Your son and daughter fund this trespass worth The shame which here it suffers. [that way.

Fool. Winter’s not gone yet, if the wild goose fly Fathers, that wear rags, Do make their children blind; But fathers, that bear bags, Shall see their children kind.

Lear. Fortune, that serveth whose Ne’er turns the key to the poor.— But, for all this, ’tis follows, Thou shalt have as many dolors For thy daughters’ dear, As thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this “mother swells up toward my heart!”

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow, Thy element’s below.—Where is this daughter? Kent. With the earl, sir; here, within.

Lear. Follow me not.

Stay here. [Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you Kent. None? [speak of? How chance the king comes with so small a train? Fool. An thou hast been set the stocks for that question, thou hast well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool? Fool. We’ll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there’s no laboring i’ the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there’s not a nose among twenty but can smell him that’s stinking. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it. That sir, which serves and seeks for gain, And follows but for form, Will pack when it begins to rain, And leave thee in the storm. But I will tarry; the fool will stay, And let the wise man fly: The 1 foot turns knife that runs away, The 2 knife no fool, perdy.

KENT. Where heardst thou this, fool? Fool. Not I the stocks, fool.

\[Re-enter Lear, with GLOSTER.\]

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? They are weary? They have travell'd hard to-night? Mere * fetches, The images of revolt and flying off. Fetch me a better answer.

GLO. My dear lord, You know the fiery quality of the duke: How unremovable and fixed he is In his own course.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so. Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, Glo. Ay, my good lord. \[man?\] Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the duke?

[voice:] Would with his daughter speak, commands her ser- Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood! — Fiery? the fiery duke?—Tell the hot duke, that— No, but not yet;—may be, he is not well: Infamy doth still neglect all office, Whereo our health is bound: we are not ourselves, When nature, being oppressed, commands the mind To suffer with the body. I'll forbear; And am fallen out with my more headier will, To take the indispos'd and sickly fit For the sound man.—Death on my state! wherefore [Pointing to Kent.] Should he sit here? This act persuades me, That this * remotion of the duke and her Is 2 practice only. Give me my servant forth. Go, tell the duke and 'a wife, I'd speak with them, Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear me, Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum, Till it cry——" Sleep to death."

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. \[Exit Lear.\] O me! my heart, my rising heart! but down.

Fool. Cry to it, uncle, as the cockney did to the eels, when she put them i' the paste alive; she * knapp'd 'em o' the coxcomb with a stick, and cried, "Down, wantson, down!" was her brother, that in pure kindness to his horse butter'd his hay.

\[Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, and Servants.\]

CORN. Good morrow to you both.

REG. Hail to your grace! \[KENT is set at liberty.\] Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason I have to think so; if thou should'st not be glad, I would divorce thee from thy mother's tomb, Sepulchring an adultress, — O! are you free? \[To Kent.\]

*"Fetches," i. e., evasions. — "Remotion," i. e., retirement. — "Xresticis," i. e., artifices.

Some other time for that. — Beloved Regan, Thy sister's naught: O Regan! she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here.— [Points to his heart.]

I can scarce speak to thee: thou'lt not believe, With how depreav'd a quality—O Regan! —

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope, You less know how to value her desert, Than she to scent her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think, my sister in the least Would fail her obligation: if, sir, perchance, She have rend'd the riots of your followers, "Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end, As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir! you are old; Nature in you stands on the very verge Of her confine: you should be rul'd, and led By some discretion, that discerns your state Better than you yourself. Therefore, I pray you, That to our sister you do make return: Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness? Do you but mark how this becomes the mouth: "Dear daughter, I confess that I am old; Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg, \[Kneeling.\] That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food."

Reg. Good sir, no more: these are unsightly tricks. Return you to my sister.

Lear. Never, Regan. \[Rising.\] She hath abated me of half my train; Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue, Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.

All thy good vengeance of her! upon her ungrateful top! Strike her young bones, You taking airs, with lameness!

CORN. Fie, fie, fie!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding Into her scornful eyes! infect her beauty, \[flames\] You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun, To 'fall and blast her pride!

O the blest gods! So will you wish on me, when the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan; thou shalt never have my curse: Thy tender-hearted nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce; but thing Do comfort, and not burn. 'Tis not in thee To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train, To bid my hasty words, to stint my 'sires, And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt Against my coming in: thou know'st best \[prince of childhood, The offices of nature, bond of childhood, Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude; Thy half o' the kingdom thou hast not forgot, Wherein I thee endow'd. \[Pointing to the stocks.\]

REG. Good sir, to the purpose.

Lear. Who put my man in the stocks? \[To Corn.\] What trumpet's that?

\[Enter Oswald.\]

REG. I know'rt; my sister's: this approves her letter, That she would soon be here.—Is your lady come?

Lear. This is a slave, whose easy bondage 'pride Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows. — Out, varlet, from my sight!

CORN. What means your grace?

* Unnecessary is used here in the sense of necessities. — "To fall," i. e., to make fall; to humble. — A sike is a portion or allotment of food.
KING LEAR.

SCENE IV.

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope [heaven's! Thou didst not know on.—Who comes here? O Enter Goneril.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway * Allow obedience, if yourselves are old, Make it your cause: send down the part! Art not ashamed to look upon this beard?

To Goneril.

O Regan! wilt thou take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended? All's not offence, that indiscretion finds, And dotage terms so. O sides! you are too tough: Will you yet hold?—How came my man i' the stocks?

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so. If till the expiration of your month, You will return and sojourn with my sister, Dismissing half your train, come then to me: I am now from home, and out of that provision Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd! No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose To lose against the empery o' the air; To be a comrade with the wolf and I how! Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her? Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg To keep base life afoot.—Return with her? Persuade me rather to be slave and a humper To this detested groom. [Looking at Oswald.

Gon. At your choice, sir. Lear. I pray thee, daughter, do not make me mad: I will not trouble thee, my child: farewell. We'll no more meet, no more see one another; But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter; Or, rather, a disease that's in my flesh. Which I must needs call mine: I call it a boil, A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle, In my corrupted blood. But I will not chide thee; Let shame come when it will, I do not call it: I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot, Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove. Mend, when thou canst; be better, at thy leisure: I can be patient; I can stay with Regan, I, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so: I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister; For those that mingle reason with their passion, Must be content to think you old, and so— But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken? Reg. I dare avouch it, sir. What! fifty followers? Is it not well? What should you need of more? Yea, or so many, *sith that both charge and danger Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house, Should many people, under two commands, Hold eminy! 'Tis hard! almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendence From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to shock you,

We could control them. If you will come to me, (For now I spy a danger) I entreat you To bring but five and twenty: to no more Will I give place, or notice.

Lear. I gave you all. Reg. And in good time you gave it. Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries, But kept a reservation to be follow'd With such a number. What! must I come to you With five and twenty? Regan, said you so? Reg. And speak'st again, my lord; no more with me. Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favor'd, When others are more wicked; not being the worst Stands in some rank o' praise.—I'll go with thee: [To Goneril.

Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty, And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord. What need you five and twenty, ten, or five, To follow in a house, where twice so many Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one? Lear. O! reason not the need; our basest beggars Are in the poorest things superfluous flaws, Allow not nature more than nature needs, Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady; If only to go warm were gorgeous, Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st, Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,— You heavens, give me *but patience, patience I need! You see me here, you gods, a poor old man, As full of grief as age; wretched in both: If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts Against their father, fool me not so much To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger, O! let not women's weapons, water-drops, Stain my man's cheeks.—No, you unnatural bags, I will have such revenges on you both, That all the world shall—I will do such things:— What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be The terrors of the earth. You think, I'll weep; No, I'll not weep:—I have full cause of weeping; but this heart Shall break into a hundred thousand parts, Or ere I'll weep.—O, fool! I shall go mad. [Storm heard at a distance.

Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm. Reg. This house is little: the old man and 's people Cannot be well bestow'd. [rest;

Gon. 'Tis his own blame hath put himself from He must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his *particular, I'll receive him gladly, But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd. Where is my lord of Gloucester?

[Exeunt Lear, Goneril, Kent, and Fool.

Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame hath put himself from He must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his *particular, I'll receive him gladly, But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd. Where is my lord of Gloucester?

[Exeunt Lear, Goneril, Kent, and Fool.

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth.—He is return'd.

Glo. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack! the night comes on, and the bleak So very ruffled: for many miles about There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O, sir! to wiuful men,

That is, 'To be not the worst deserves some praise.'—

And what they may insinuate him to, being apt
To have his ears abused, wisdom bids fear. [night:

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A Storm, with Thunder and Lightning. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded, like the weather, most unequally.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curdled waves above the main, [hair,
That things might change or cease: tears his white
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world of man to set apart
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain. [couch,
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unconnected his maws,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Sir, I do know you,
And dare, upon the warrant of my note,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it be cover'd
With mutual cunning; 'twixt Albano and Cornwell;
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars
Thread'd and set high?) servants, who seem no less,
Which are to France the spies and spectators
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in sniffs and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but flurishments—
But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner.—Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,
And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you.

Kent. Gent. I will talk farther with you.

Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out talk, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,

(As fear not but you shall) show her this ring,
And she will tell you who that fellow is That yet you do not know. [Thunder.] Fire on this storm!
I will go seek the king. [say?
Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all
Yet; [pain
That, when we have found the king, in which your
That way I'll find, he that first lights on him,
Holla the other. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Heath. Storm continues.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage!
You cataracts and hurricanous spouts, [blow!
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the
Your sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vain-couriers to oak-deaving thunderbolts, [der,
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
Strike that the round totality of the world:
Crack nature's moulds, all germs spilt at once,
That make ingrateful man!

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Split, fire! spout, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, your elements, with unkindness;
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription; then, let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
A poor, inform, weak, and despis'd old man.
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That will with two pernicious daughters join
Your high-encourger'd battles 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put 'a head in has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house,
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall lose;—
So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe
What he his honour should make,
Shall of a corn cry wo,
And turn his sleep to wake.

—for there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience; I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece; that's a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir! are you here? Things that love

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves. Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of raining wind and rain, I never

SCENE IV.

KING LEAR.

Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry Th' affliction, nor the fear.

Lear.

Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwip'd of justice: hide thee, thou bloody hand;
Thou perjurer, and thou simulant of virtue
That art inconstant: cast off to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming
Hast practis'd on man's life: close pent-up guiltis,
Rive your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace.—I am a man,
More sin'd against, than shining.

SCENE IV.—A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:
The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure.  [Storm still.

Lear.

Let me alone.

Kent.

Good my lord, enter here.

Lear.

Wilt break my heart?

Kent.

I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

[Foal.

You think'st 'tis much, that this contentious
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater mainly is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear;
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free,
The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what heeds these stings of Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to't?—But I will punish home,—
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on;—I will endure,—
In such a night as this! O Regan! Goneril!—
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all—
O that way madness lies; let me shun that;
no more of that.

Kent.

Good my lord, enter here.

Lear.

Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease:
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in:
In, boy; go first.—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty;—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.

[Foal goes in.

Poor naked wretches, whereasoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O! I have taken
Too little care of this. Take physic, pompos;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou may'st shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg.

[Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half!
Poor Tom!

[Foal runs out from the Hovel.

Fool.

Come not in here, uncle; here's a spirit.
Help me! help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who's there?

Fool.

A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor

Tom.

* "Footed," i. e., on foot.—"Loop'd and window'd" signifies full of holes and apertures.
KING LEAR.  ACT III.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there! Come forth. [the straw?]

Enter Edgar, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Aw'ay! the foul fiend follows me! "Through the sharp Hawthorn blows the cold wind."—

Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee. Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend ants led through fire and through flame, through 'swamp and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his paw; set ratsbane by his porthole; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. —Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold.—O! do, do de, do de.—Bless thee from whirlwinds, sun-blasting, and *inking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. —There could I have him now,—and there,—and there again, and there.

*Strikes. Storm continues.

Lear. What! have his daughters brought him to this pass?—Call![Could 'st thou have nothing? Didst thou give them! Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all ashamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues, that in the pendulous air Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters! Kent. He hath no daughters, sir. [nature

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters. —Is it the fond fiend, that did discard him? Should have thus little mercy of their flesh!—Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot Those *pelicant daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:— Hallo, hallo, loo, loo!—

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend. Obey thy parents; *keep thy word; do justice; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been!

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled his hair, with golden gloss in my cap, served the base of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spoke words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramouried the Turk: fable of heart, light of *ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth; wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the cracking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to woman; keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of phletches, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. —"Still through the Hawthorn blows the cold wind;"— says sumum, ma, ha no nonny. Dolphin my boy, my boy; sessa! let him trot by.

[Storm still continues.]

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. —Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast the bone that makes it flesh. —

"Taking," l. e., blazing with malignant influences.

"The young pelicans is failed to suck the mother's blood."

"It was the custom to wear gloves in the hat, as the favor of a mistress." —"Light of ear," l. e., ready to receive malitious reports.

no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume.—

—Ha! here's three *on's are sophisticated: thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. —Off, off, you lendings. —Come; unbutton here.

Fool. Try thee, nuncle, be contented; 'tis a naughty night to swim in. —Now, a little fire in a wide field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on's body cold. —Look! here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Filibertibiggeth: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the *pin, spits the eye, and makes the hollow-lip; midlews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Saint Withold footed thrice the cold; He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold; Bid her alight, And her troth plight, Pluck, wear, and aright thee! Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter Gloster, with a Torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. What's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, cuts cow-dung for salters; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mangle of the standing pool: who is whipped from tything to tything, and storked, punished, and imprisoned: who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

But mice, and rats, and such small deer,

Have been Tom's food for seven long years. Beware my follower.—Peace, Smulkin! peace, thou fiend!—

Glo. What! hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman; Mode he's call'd, and Mahn.

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile, That it doth hate what gets it. Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer To obey in all your daughters' hard commands; That I, in their subjection, be to lay hold, And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you, Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out, And bring you where both fire and food is ready. Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher. —What is the cause of thunder? [house

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer: go into the Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned. What is your study? [Theban.

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private. —[They talk apart.

Kent. Impart one more to go, my lord, His wits begin to unsettle.

Glo. Canst thou blame him? His daughters seek his death. —Ah, that good Kent!— He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man! Thou say'st, the king grows mad: I'll tell thee, friend, I am almost mad myself. I had a son, Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life, But lately, very late: I lov'd him, friend, No father his son dearer: true to tell thee,

* "The web and the pin," diseases of the eyes, resembling the entames.—"* Ardoni," l. e., amput. —"The water," l. e., the water-meat.
SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm-House, adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, FOOL, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impotence. The gods reward your kindness!

[Exit Gloster.

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Try, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Pr’ythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

LEAR. A king, a king!

FOOL. No: he’s a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son; for he’s a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

LEAN. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come whizzing in upon them.]

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He’s mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse’s heath, a boy’s love, or a whore’s oath.]

LEAR. It shall be done; I will arrange them Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;—

[To Edgar.

Thou, sayest sir, sit here. Now, you she foxes!—

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares—

Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?—

Come o’er the 4th bound, Bessy, to me:—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak, And she must not speak Why she darest not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdancerie cries in Tom’s belly for two white herring. Crook not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz’d: Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I’ll see their trial first.—Bring in the evi—

Thou rob’d man of justice, take thy place!—

[To Edgar.

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool. Bench by his side.—You are o’ the commission, Sit you too. [To Kent.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest, or wakest thou, jolly shepherd? Thy sheep be in the corn; And for one blast of thy minikin mouth, Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey.

LEAR. Arnaigh her first; ’tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honorable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

[To Kent.

Edg. Bless thy five wits!—

KENT. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now, That you so oft have boasted to retain? [much,

Edg. [Aside.] My team begin to take his part so They’ll mar my counterfoiling.

LEAR. The little dogs and all, Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them.—Avant, you curs! Be thy mouth or black or white, Tooth that poisons if it bite; Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel, grim, Hound, or spaniel, brach, or flym; Or boiball little, or trundle-tail, Tom will make them weep and wail: For with throwing thus my head, Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled. Do, de, de, de. See, see! Come, march to wakes and fairs, and market-towns.—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

LEAR. Then, let them anatoimize Regan, see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, If justicer for justice. A <source> is a brook or rivulet. Minikin was anciently a term of endearment. Tike and trundle-tail are species of mean dogs.

KING

LEAR.

ACT III.

EDGAR. I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments; you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise: draw the curtains. So, so, so; we'll go to supper if the morning: so, so, so, so.

Foot. And I'll go bed at noon.

Re-enter Gloster.

Glo. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master? [gone.

Kent. Here, sir: but trouble him not; his wis are

Glo. Good friend, I pr'ythee take him in thy arms; I have o'er-heard a plot of death upon him.

There is a litter ready; lay him in't, [meet

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:—

This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses, Which, if convenience will not allow,

Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master; Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.

Glo. Come, come, away. [Execut KENT, GLOSTER, and the Fool, bearing off the King.

Edg. When we our letters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes.

Who alone suffers, suffers most! the mind,

Leaving free things and happy shows behind;

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'er-ship,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

How light and portable my pain seems now, [Bow! When that which makes me bend, makes the king

When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,

In thy just proof, repeals and reconciles thee.

What will happen to-night, safe 'scape the king! Lurk, lurk. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedy to my lord your husband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed.

—Seek out the traitor Gloster. [Execut some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my disposal.—Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most *festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent between us. Farewell, dear sister,—farewell, my lord of Gloster, [Exit.

Enter Oswald.

How now! Where's the king?

Osw. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd him hence: Some five or six and thirty of his knights,

"The high noises," i.e., the great events that are approaching.—"Brewray," i.e., betray; discover.—"Festinate," i.e., quick; hasty.—"My lord of Gloster," i.e., Edmund, invested with his father's title.

Hot *questors after him, met him at gate; Who, with some other of the lord's dependants, Are gone with him towards Dover, where they boast To have well-armed men.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Reg. Excus' GONERIL, EDMUND, and OSWALD. —Go, seek the traitor Gloster.

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us. [Excus' other Servants

Though well we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice, yet our power Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May subscribe, but not control. Who's there? The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with Gloster.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his c'erkoy arms. [consider

Glo. What mean your graces?—Good my friends,

You are my guess: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.

Reg. Hard, hard.—O filthy traitor! Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.

Corn. To this chair bind him.—Villain, thou shalt find

[They bind him: REGAN plucks his beard.

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done

To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Gaunt. Naughty lady.

Will i' the morn—quickken, and accuse thee.

I am your host: With robbers' hands my hospitable favors

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the late *foisted in the kingdom?

[traitors

Reg. To whose hands Have you sent the lunatic king? Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down, Which came from one that's of a neutral heart, And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Want thou not charg'd at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yes, better thus, unknown to be contemned, Than still contemned and flatter'd. To be worst, The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune, Stands still in *esperance, lives not in fear: The lamentable change is from the best; The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then,

"To quit," l. e., to requite.—"The overture here means the opening, the disclosure."—"Meet the old course of death, and the fatal death, the natural death."—"The Bodman," i. e., the Bodlamite; the madman,—"in esperance," l. e., in hope.

Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace: The wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst, Ows nothing to thy blasts.—But who comes hither?—

Enter GLOSTER, led by an old Man.

My father, poorly led!—World, world, O world! But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee, Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord! I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone: Thy comforts can do me no good at all; Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir! you cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes: I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seen, Our *wants secure us; and our mere defects Prove our commodities.—Ah! dear son Edgar, The food of thy abused father's wrath, Might I but live to see thee in my touch, I'd say I had eyes again.

Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, "I am at the worst?" I am worse than o'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: the worst is not.

So long as we can say, "This is the worst." Old Man. Fellow, where goest? Glo. Is it a beggar-man? Old Man. Madam, and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg. I the last night's storm I such a fellow saw, Which made me think a man a wright: my son Came there into my mind; and yet my mind Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since. As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods; They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside.] How should this be?— Bad is the trade that must play foot to sorrow, Angering itself and others. [To him.] Bless thee, Glo. Is that the naked fellow? [master! Old Man. Ay, my lord. Glo. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone. If, for my sake, Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain, I the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love; And bring some covering for this naked soul, Whom I'ld entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir! he is mad. Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind. Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure; Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best parch that I have, Come on't what will. [Exit. Glo. Sirrah; naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold. [Aside.] I cannot daub it farther.

Glo. Come hither, fellow. Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.— [To him.] Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover? Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path. Poor Tom hath been seared out of his good wits: bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidict; Hobbitdance, prince of dullness; Mahu, of stealing; Mo'di, of murder; and Hilber-tibibet, of mopping and mowing, who since pos-

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier.—Heavens, deal so still! Let the *superfluous, and lust-ditected man, That *braves your ordinance, that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly; So distribution should undo excess, And each man have enough.—Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head Looks fearfully *in the confined deep; Bring me but to the very brink of it, And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear, With something rich about me: from that place I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm:

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of ALBANY's Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDGAR; OSWALD meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband
Not met us on the way.—Now, where's your master?

Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chagr'd. I told him of the army that was landed;
I do smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming;
His answer was, "The worse!" of Gloster's breach.
And of the loyal service of his son, [cry,
When I inform'd him, then he calle'd me sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out.
What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him;
What like, offensive.

Gon. Then, shall you go no farther.

It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs,
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;
Hasten his musters, and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff
Into my husband's hand. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,
If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress's command. Wear this: [giving a chain
Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edg. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster! [Exit Edmund.
O, the difference of man, and man!
To thee a woman's services are due:
My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord.

[Exit Oswald.

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the *whistle.

Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust, which the rude wind Blows in your face.—I fear your disposition: That nature, which commons its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will *silver and disbranch From her material sap, perfervce must wither,

---"The superfluous," i. e., the pampered.—In is put here for an—"Buy prove effects," i. e., may be consummated.
---"Do whist the whistle," i. e., worth calling for.—"Sil- ver," i. e., tear off.

And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more: the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;
Filitas savour but themselves. What have you done I
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence the head-logg'd bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madd'd
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefitted?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
It will come.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!

That bear'st a check for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honor from thy suffering; that not know'st,
Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd;
Ere they have done their mischift. Where's thy drum?
France spreads his banners in our noiseless land;
With plumed helm thy slayer bends threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and criest,
"Alack! why does he so?"

Alb. See thyself, devil!

Proper deformity seems not in the fiend.

So herein, as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool! [shame,

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for
Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones: how'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord! the duke of Cornwall's
Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.

Alb. Gloster's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrall'd with remorse,
Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, thereat enrag'd,
Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead,
But not without that harmful stroke, which since
Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge?—But, O poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.

This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer:
[Opening it.

'Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life. Another way,

The news is not so tart. [To him.] I'll read, and answer.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his
He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord, twas he inform'd against
And out of the house, on purpose that their punishment
Might have the freer course.

---"My blood," i. e., my passion; my inclination.
SCENE V.  KING LEAR.

Alb.  Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king,
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend; Tell me what more thou knowest.  [Exit.

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter Kent, and a Gentleman.

Kent.  Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back, know you the reason?

Gent.  Something he left imperfect in the state, Which since his coming forth is thought of; which Imposed to the kingdom so much fear and danger, That his personal return was most requir'd, And necessary.

Kent.  Whom hath he left behind him general?

Gent.  The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent.  Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent.  Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen Over her passion, who, most rebel-like, Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent.  Made she no verbal question?

Gent.  'Faith, once, or twice, she heav'd the name of "father" Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried, "Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ladies! sisters! Kent! father! sisters! What?" the storm? if the night?
Let pity not be believed!"—There she shook The holy water from her heavenly eyes, And clamber'd moisten'd: then, away she started To deal with grief alone.

Kent.  It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our 4 conditions; Else one self mate and 4 mates could not legit
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent.  No.

Kent.  Was this before the king return'd?

Gent.  No, since.

Kent.  Well, sir, the poor distress'd Lear's i' the town,
Who sometime, in his better time, remembers What we are about, and by no means Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent.  Why, good sir?

Kent.  A sovereign shame so elevates him; his own unkindness,
That stripp'd her from his beneficence, turn'd her To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights To his dog-hearted daughters; these things sting His mind so venomously, that burning shame Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent.  Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent.  Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you Gent.  "Tis so they are about. [heard not? Kent.  Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear, And leave you to attend him. Some dear cause Will in concealment wrap me up awhile:
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me.  [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Tent.

Enter Cordelia, Physician, and 2 French Soldiers.

Cor.  Alack! 'tis he: why, he was met even now As mad as any madman seen: singing aloud:
Crow'd with rank 5 fumiter, and furrow weeds,
With hoar-docks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers, Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth; Search every acre in the high-grown field, And bring him to our eye.  [Exit an Officer.]—What can man's wisdom,
In the restored his bereaved sense?
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him Are many simples operative, whose power Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor.  All bless'd secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remit,
In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for him;
Lest his ungodly rage dissolve the life That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess.  News, madam: The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor.  'Tis known before; our preparation stands In expectation of them.—O dear father! It is thy business that I go about,
Therefore great France My mourning, and 4 important tears, hath pitied.
No 5 blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right.
Soon may I hear, and see him!  [Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Regan and Oswald.

Reg.  But are my brother's powers set forth?

Osw.  Ay, madam.

Reg.  Himself in person there?

Osw.  Madam, with much ado:
Your sister is the better soldier.  [home?

Reg.  Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at Osw.  No, madam.

Reg.  What might import my sister's letter to him?

Osw.  I know not, madam.

Reg.  'Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being out,
To let him live: where he arrives he moves All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to despatch His 6 nighted life; moreover, to despy The strength o' the enemy.
Osw.  I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg.  Our troops set forth to-morrow: stay with us;
The ways are dangerous.

Osw.  I may not, madam;

<ref>"Question," i. e., discourse; conversation.—"That is, "Let pity not be supposed to exist." " And clamar moisten'd," i. e., accompanied her outeries with tears.—"Conditions," i. e., dispositions.—"One self mate and mate," i. e., the selfsame husband and wife.</ref>
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.
Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you Transport her purposes by word? Belike, Something—I know not what. I'll love thee much; Let me unsail the letter.
Osw. Madam, I had rather—Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband, I am sure of that; and, at her late being here, She gave strange _currences, and most speaking looks To noble Edmund. I know, you are of her bosom.
Osw. I, madam?Reg. I speak in understanding; y'are, I know it: Therefore, I do advise you, take this _note: My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd, And more convenient is he for my hand, Than for your lady's. You may gather more. If you do find him, pray you, give him this; And when your mistress hears thus much from you, I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her: So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor, Preferment falls on him that cuts him off. _Exeunt._

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.
_Enter Gloster, and Edgar dressed like a Peasant._

Glo. When shall I come to the top of that same hill? _Edg._ Do you climb up it now? look, how we labor. Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.
_How do you hear the sea?_
*Horribly steep._

Glo. So may it be, indeed. Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speakest In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.
_Edg._ Y'are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I Better of my garments.
Glo. Methinks, y'are better spoken. _Edg._ Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still.
_How feoul, And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low! The crows, and crows, that wing the middle air, Show scarce so gross as beetles; half way down Hangs one that gathers _samphire_; dreadful trade! Methinks, he seems no bigger than thy head. The fishermen, that walk upon the beach, Appar, like mice; and yond' tall anchoring bark, Diminish'd to her _cock_; cock, a buoy Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge, That on this unnumber'd idle pelves chases, Cannot be heard so high.—I'll look no more; Leave thy brain turn, and the deficient sight _Topple down headlong._

Glo. Set me where you stand.
_Edg._ Give me your hand; you are now within a foot Of th' extreme verge: for all beneath the moon Would I not leap upright.
Glo. Let go my hand.
_Her friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel Well worth a poor man's taking: fairies, and gods, Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off! Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.
_Edg._ Now fare you well, good sir._

---

---

Glo. With all my heart.
_Edg._ Why do I trifle thus with his despair; Is done to cure it.
Glo. O, you mighty gods! This would I do renounce, and in your sights Shake patiently my great affliction off: If I could bear it longer, and not fall To quarrel with your great opposition, My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—Now, fellow, fare thee well.
_He leaps, and falls along._

_Edg._ And yet I know not how conceit may rob The treasury of life, when life itself Yields to the _thief:_ had he been where he thought, By this had thought been past. _Alive, or dead! Ho, you, sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak! Thus might he pass indeed;—yet he revives.
_What are you, sir?_
Glo. Away, and let me die.
*Edg._ Hadst thou been taught but gossamer, feathers, So many fathom down precipitating, Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost breathe; Hast heavy substance: bleed'st not; speak'st not; art Ten maus at _each make not the altitude, _[sound._ Which thou last perpetually fell: Thy life is a miracle. Speak yet again.
Glo. But have I fallen, or no?
_Edg._ From the dread summit of this chalky _bourn._ Look up a height: the _shril-gorg'd_ lark so far Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.
Glo. Ahuck! I have no eyes.—Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit, To end itself by death? _Twas yet some comfort, When nature could beguile the tyrant's rage, And frustrate his proud will.
_Edg._ Give me your arm: _[Helping him up._ Up:—so;—how is't? _Feet you your legs? You stand._
Glo. Too well, too well.
_Edg._ This is above all strangeness. Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that Which parted from you?
Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.
_Edg._ As I stood here below, methought, his eyes Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses, Horns _whelk'd, and wond'_ like the emerald sea: It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father, Think that the _clearest_ gods, who make them honors Of man, can no impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.
_Edg._ I do remember, in the same _bourn_ forth I'ld hear Affliction, till it do cry out itself  "Enough, enough!" and die. That thing you speak of, I took it for a man; often 'twould say, "The fiend, the fiend!" he led me to that place.
_Edg._ Bear _free_ and patient thoughts._—But who comes here?
_Enter Lear, fantastically dressed with _Strawns and Flowers._

Lear. The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.
Lear. No, thou side-piercing sight!
Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's _yard._—Look, look! a mouse. Peace, peace!—this piece of toasted cheese will do. There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant. Bring up the brown *bills. O, well-flown, bird!—it the clout, t' the b*clout: helm!—Give the *word.

---

---

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Generil!—with a white beard!—They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say "ay," and "no," to every thing I said!—"Ay!" and "no," too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter, they told the thunder would not peace at my boding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me every thing; 'tis a lie, I am not gue-proof.

Glo. The *trick of that voice I do well remember: Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes. I pardon that man's life: what was thy cause?

Lear. Thou shalt not die: die for adultery? No: The wren goes to, and the small gilded fly Does lecher in my sight.
Let consumption thrive; for Gloster's bastard son Was kinder to his father's daughters, my daughters Got 'twixt the lawful sheets. To't, *luxury, bell-mell, for I lack soldiers.

Lear. Behold yond simpering dame, Whose face between her forks preaught snow; That *minxes virtue, and does shackle the head To hear of pleasure's name; The kingly shoe, nor the soiled horse, goes to't With a more riotous appetite.
Down from the waist they are counteours, Though women all above:
But to the girdle do the gods inherit, Beneath is all the fiends: there's hell, there's darkness, there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—be, be, he! pah! pah! Give me wine, ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first: it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou remember me?

Lear. I'll love—Read thou this challenge: mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report; it is,
And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What! with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, no! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: ye see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears; see how yond' justice rul'd upon yond' simple thief. Harl, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?
Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou might' best behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office.
Thou stumble, hold thy bloody hand! [back; Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own
Thou holty lust't to use his in that kind [crozener.
For which thou whipp'st her. The wearer hangs the Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes, and furn'd gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold,
And the strong lince of justice hurtles breaks:
And when it rises, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.
None doth offend, none, I say, none; I'll *able'em:

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power
To seal th' accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurril politician, seem

[now! To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now, now,
Pull off my boots: harder, harder; so.

Edg. O, matter and *imperincery mix'd;
Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloster:
Thou must be patient. We came crying hither;
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air
We wawl, and cry. I will preach to thee: mark me.

Glo. Alack! alas the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great stage of fools.—*g To a good plot.

It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe
A troop of horse with felt: I'll put it in proof;
And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman with Attendants.

Gent. Of! here he is: lay hand upon him.—Sir, Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What! a prisoner! I am even
The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon,
I am ent to the brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing.

Lear. No seconds? All myself?
Why, this would make a man, a man of *salt,
To use his eyes for garden-water-pots,
Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—

Lear. I will die bravely,
Like a snug bridegroom. What! I will be jovial.
Come, come; I am a king, my masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a royni one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, no you get it, you shall get it by running. So, so, sa, sa.

[Exit: Attendants follow.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch, Past 3 speaking in a king!—Thou hast one daughter, Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears that, Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favor,
How near's the other army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main desery
Stands on the hourly thought.

The brown bills: I. e., the battle-axes. — The clout, I. e., the white mark for archers to aim at. — The word, I. e., the watchword. — The trick, I. e., the manner. — The jinckes is the polecat. — To equity is to look against.

b i'll able'em: i. e., i'll support, uphold them.—im perincery means here something not belonging to the subject.—a man of salt is a man of tears.—That is, The main body is expected to be described every hour.
KING LEAR.

ACT IV.

Enter Oswald.

Osw. A prochain’d price! Most happy!

That eyeless head of thine was first fram’d flesh
To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy traitor,
Brieﬁly thyself remember!—the sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Edg. Ch’ill not let go, sir, without varther ’casion.

Osw. Let go, slaye, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your ’gainst, and let poor Volk pass. And ch’ud ha’ been swagger’d out of my life, ’twould not ha’ been so long as ’tis by a vortnight. Nay, come not near the old man; keep out, ch’ud ve’ry, or Ise try whether your escondre or my ballow be the harder. Ch’ill be plain with you.

Osw. Out, dunghill! Edg. Ch’ill pick your teeth, sir. Come; no materror your founs.

[They fight; and Edgar strikes him down.

Osw. Slave, thou hast shain me.—Villain, take my
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body; [purse.

And give the letters, which thou ﬁnd st about me,
To Edmond earl of Gloucester; seek him out, And the British party.—O, unlimate death! [Dies.
Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,
As badness would desire.

Glo. What! is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.—

Let’s see his pockets: these letters, that he speaks of,
May be my friends.—He’s dead: I am only sorry
He had no other death’s-man. —Let us see:—
Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us not:
To know our enemies’ minds we rip their hearts,
Their papers more lawful.

[Reads.] “Let our reciprocal vows be re mem-bered. You have many opportunities to cut him off,
If your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done, if he returns the conqueror; then am I the physician, and his bed
my jail, from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labor.”

Your (wife, so I would say) “affectionate servant,
Gentil.”

O, unextinguish’d blaze of woman’s will!

A plot upon her virtuous husband’s life;

And the exchange, my brother!—Here, in the sand,
There I’ll rake up, the post unsanctiﬁed
Of murderous leeches; and in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practic’d duke. For him tis well,
That of thy death and business I can tell,

Glo. The king is mad: how stiﬀ is my vile sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenuous feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distinct;
So should my thoughts be sever’d from my griefs,
And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves. [Drum afar of. Edg. Give your hand. Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.

Come, father; I’ll bestow you with a friend.

EXTREM.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp. Lear
On a Bed, asleep; Doctor, Gentleman, and others, attending: Enter Cordelia and Kent.

Cor. O thou good Kent! how shall I live, and work,
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg’d, madam, is o’er-paid
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp’d, but so.

Cor. Be better suited: These weeds are ’memories of those worser hours.

I pr’yther, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam; yet to be known shortens my wain intent;
My bow I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be’t so, my good lord.—How does the king?

[To the Physician.

Doc. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O, you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
Th’ unmum’d and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Doc. So please your majesty,
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern’d by your knowledge, and proceed
P’ the sway of your own will. Is he array’d?

Doc. Ay, madam; in the braviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Kent. Good madam, be by when we do awake him:
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well. [Music.

Doc. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music
there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challenge’d pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos’d against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder star? In

The most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lighting? to watch (poor perdu!)
With this thin helm? Mine enemy’s dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my ﬁre; and wast thou fair, poor father,
To lovel thee with swine, and Rogers forlen.

*’The post unsanctiﬁed,’ i. e., the unconsecrated burial-place.—1 The Duke of Albany.—4 ‘Sited,’ i. e., dressed.

Memorial,—’Child-changed,’ i. e., changed by his children.—’Four perdu!’ The allusion is to the forlorn hope in a army, called in French, enfans perdus.—’This thin helm,’ i. e., this thin covering of hair.
KING LEAR.

In short and musty straw? Alack, alack! 'Tis wonder, that thy life and wis at once Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with Drums and Colors, Edmund, Regan, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold; Or whether since he is advised by augury To change the course: He's full of alteration, And self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who exits.]

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,

You know the goodness I intend upon you:

Toll me, but truly, but then speak the truth, Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honor'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's way To the 'forefended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct, And honor'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honor, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her. Dear my lord, Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not.

Sic, and the duke her husband,—

Enter Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister Should loosen him and me.

[Aside.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be met.

Sir, this I hear,—the king is come to his daughter, With others, whom the rigor of our state Forget'th to cry out. Where I could not be honest, I never yet was valiant: for this business, It toucheth us, as France invades our land, Not holds the king, with others, whom, I fear, Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy;

For these domestic and particular broils

Are not the question here.

Alb. Let us, then, determine

With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us!

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. O, ho! I know the riddle. [Aside.]—I will go.

Enter Edgar, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so

Hear me one word.

[poor.]

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exeunt Edmund, Régan, Gonerel, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound

For him that brought it: wretched though I seem, I can produce a champion, that will prove What is avouched there. If you miscarry,

Your business of the world hath so an end,

And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

[Going.]

Edg. Stay, till I have read the letter.

---

"Abus'd," I e. imposed upon. "To make him even o'er," I e. to reconcile to his apprehension. "The arbitrement," I e. the decision.
KING LEAR. ACT V

Edg. I was forbid it. When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, And I'll appear again. [Exit.]

Abb. Why, fare thee well: I will overthlook thy paper. [Exit.

RECTOR EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view: draw up your powers. Here is the guess of their true strength and forces By diligent discovery: [Skewing a Paper:] but Is now urg'd on you. [your haste

Abb. We will greet the time. [Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love: Each to the other, of the other, as the string Are of the archer. Which of them shall I take? Both' e'en! or neither! Neither can be enjoy'd, It both remain alive: to take the widow

Expectantes, makes mad, her sister Goneril! And hardly shall I carry out my side, Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use His confidence for the battle; which being done, Let her who would be rid of him devise His speedy taking off: As for the mercy Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia, The battle done, and they within our power, Shall never see his pardon; for my state

Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarm within. Enter, with Drum and Colors, Lear, Cordelia, and their Forces; and excaud.

Enter EDGAR and GLOSTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree For your good host; pray that the right may thrive. If ever I return to you again.

Pray bring you comfort.

Glo. Crave go with you, sir! [Exit EDGAR.

Alarm; afterwards a Retreat. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man! give me thy hand; away! King Lear hath lost he, and his daughter taken. Give me thy hand; come on.

Glo. No father, sir: a man may rot even here. Edg. Warrant in all thoughts again! Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither:

Ripeness is all. Come on.

Glo. And that's true too. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in convent, with Drum and Colors, EDMUND; Lear and Cordelia, as Prisoners; Captains, Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard, Until their greater pleasures first be known, That are to enclose them.

Car. We are not the last. Who, with best meaning, have incurred the worst. For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down; Myself could else outstrip false fortune's frown. Shall we not see those daughters, and these sisters! Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison: We two have sinn'd, and well, in the cage: When thou dost ask me t'becking, I'll kneel down, And ask of thee forgiveness. So we'll live, And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too.

Who loses, and who wins; who's in, who's out; And take upon't the mystery of things,

As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out, In a new prison, marks and sects of great ones, That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away. Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee! [Embracing her.

He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven, And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes; The thongs shall devour them, flesh and blood. Ere they shall make us speak: we'Il see them starve first.

Take thou this note: [Giving a Paper.] go, follow them to prison.

One step I have advance'd thee; if thou dost As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way To noble fortunes. Know thou this, that men Are as the time is; to be tender-minded Does not become a sword. Thy great employment Will not bear a question: either say, thou'lt do't, Or thrive by other means.

Capt. Edm. I'll do't, my lord.

Edg. About it: and write happy, when thou hast Mark.—I say, instantly; and carry it so. [Done. As I have set it down.

Capt. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oun's; If it be man's work, I will do it. [Exit Captain.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Goneril, Regan, Officers, and Attendants.

Abb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain, And fortune led you well. You have the captives, Who were the opposites of this day's strife: We do require them of you, so to use them, As we shall find their merits, and our safety, May equally determine.

Edm. Sir. I thought it fit

To send the old and miserable king

To some retention, and appointed guard; Whose age has charms in it, whose tide more, To push the common bosom on his side; And turn our impressed fancies in our eyes, Which do command them. With him I sent the queen:

My reason all the same; and they are ready To-morrow, or at farther space, t' appear Where you shall hold your session. At this time, We swear, and bleed: the friend bath lost his friend;

And the best quarrel, in the host, are cure'd By those that feel their sharpness.—

The question of Cordelia, and her father, Requires a fitter place.

Abb. Sir, by your patience, I hold you but a subject of this war, Not a brother.

Rev. That's as we list to grace him?

Mothinks, our pleasure might have been demanded, Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers, Bore the 1 commission of my place and person; The which immediate may well stand up, And call itself your brother.

Glo. No more:

*The scrofula is a loathsome disease. Fall is skin. — 'Poor question.' i.e., admit of debate. — Strain is here used for race, descent. — 'Improved lances.' i.e., hallowed with presence. — Commission, i.e., authority. — Immediate, i.e., authority to act on his own judgment. —
In his own grace he doth exalt himself, more than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights, by me invested, he composes the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Gon. Regal, holla! holla!

Threw oval you told so look'd but a-quaint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else should I answer

From a full-fowling stomach. — General, take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony:

Dispose of, that is to the walls are thine.

Witness the world, that I create thee here

My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

[To Edmund.]

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason. — Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,

This gilded serpent. [Pattern to Gov.] — For your claim, fair sir,

I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she subcontracted to this lord,

And I, her husband, contradict your bans.

If you will marry, make your love to me,

My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude! [sound:]

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster. — Let the trumpet

If none appear to prove upon thy person,

Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,

There is my pledge. [Throwing down a Glove.] I'll prove it on thy heart,

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less

Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick! O, sick!

Gon. [Aside.] If not, I'll ne'er trust poison.

Edm. There's my exchange: [Throwing down a Glove] what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies.

Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,

On him, on you, who not I will maintain

My truth and honor firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho! —

Edm. A herald, ho! a herald! Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,

All levied in my name, in my name

Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.

[Exit Regan, led.

Enter a Herald.

Come bither, herald. — Let the trumpet sound,

And read out this.

C apt. Sound, trumpet. [A Trumpetsounds.

Herald reads.

"If any man of quality, or degree, within the lists of the army, will maintain upon Edmund, supposed earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet. He is bold in his defence."

Edm. Sound! —

Her. Again.

[1 Trumpet.

Her. Again.

[2 Trumpet.

Her. Again.

[3 Trumpet.

[Trumpet answers within.

Enter Edgar, armed, preceded by a Trumpet.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears

Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her. What are you?

Your name? your quality? and why you answer

This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost;

By treason's tooth bare-grown, and canker'd-bitten:

Yet am I noble, as the adversary

I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself: what say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword,

That if my speech offend a noble heart,

Thy arm may do thee justice; here is mine:

[Drawing.

Behold, it is the privilege of mine honors,

My oath, and my profession. I protest,

Man, thy strength, thy skill, youth, and eminence,

Despite thy vector sword, and fire-new fortune,

Thy valor, and thy heart, thou art a traitor:

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;

Conspiring against this high fictitious prince

And, from the extremest upward of thy head,

To the descent and dust below thy foot,

A most toad-spoiled traitor. Say thou, "No."

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereby I speak,

Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;

But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue says some o' th' way of breathing breathes,

What safe and nicely I might well be day.

By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn.

Back do I toss these reasons to thy head;

With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;

Which, for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,

Where they shall rest for ever. — Trumpets, speak!

[Alarums. They fight. Edmund falls.

Alb. O, save him! save him!

Gon. This is more practice, Gloster.

By the laws of arms, thou hast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,

But o'er-rided and beguiled.

Alb. Sit not, your mouth, dame; or with this paper shall I stop it? — Hold, sit!

Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil.

[She snatches at the Letter.

Gon. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine: Who can arraign me so't!

Most monstrous!

Know'st thou this paper?

Gon. Ask me not what I know.

[Exit Goneril.

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her.

[Exit an Officer.

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have I done,

And more, much more; the time will bring it out:

'Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou,

That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt noble,

I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;

' — Say, or essay, is a sample, a taste. — That is, What I might safely delay, if I styled punctiliously. — Practise, i. e., straggan.
KING LEAR.

ACT V.

If more, the more thou liest wrong'd me.

[Taking off his Helmet.

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague us:

The dark and vicious place where thee he got
Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true;

The wheel is come full circle: I am here.

Edm. Methought, thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness. I must embrace thee;
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee, or thy father.

Edg. Worthy prince, I know't.

Edm. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord.—List a brief tale;
And, when 'tis told, O, that my heart would burst!—

The bloody proclamation to escape,
That follow'd me so near, (O, our lives' sweetness!
That with the pain of death we'd hourly die,
Rather than die at once!) taught me to shift
Into a madman's rags, I 'tis a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd; and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, sn'd him from despair;

Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,

Unto some half hour past, when I was arm'd,

Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,

I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,

(Ah! too weak the conflict to support)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,

Bursted smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good; but speak you on:
You look as if you had something more to say.

Edm. If there be more be more woful, hold it in,

For I am almost ready to dissolve,

Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but 'another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity.

Whist I was big in clamar, came there a man,

Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shun'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw me on my father;

Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting,
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack; twice, then, the trumpets sounded,
And there I left him tranc'd.

Edn. But who was this?

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Fallow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody Knife.

Gent. Help, help! O help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;

It came even from the heart of—O! she's dead:

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poisoned; she hath confess'd it.

Edm. I was contriv'd to them both: all three
Now marry in an instant.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead!—

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,

Touches us not with pity.

[Exit Gentleman.

Enter Kent.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Alb. O! it is he.

The time will not allow the compliment,
Which various manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master eye good night:

Is he not here?

Edm. Great thing of us forgot!

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's the Son that this object, Kent?

[The Bodies of Gonewill and Regan are brought in.

Kent. Alack! why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was below'd:

The one the other poison'd for my sake,

And after slew herself.

Edm. Even so.—Cover their faces,

The present grief:—some good I mean to do,

Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—

Be brief in it;—to the castle; for my writ

Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia.

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run! O, run! [send

Edg. To whom, my lord?—Who has the office?

Thy token of reprise.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword,

Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit Edgarm.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison,

And to lay the blame upon her own despair,

That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile.

[Edmund is borne off.

Enter Lear with Cordelia dead in his Arms;

Edgar, Officer, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O! you are men of Stones;

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so

That heaven's vault should cracking.—She's gone for ever.

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;

She's dead as earth.—Lend me a looking-glass;

If that her breath will mist or stain the 5 shine,

Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Full, and cease!—Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,

It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows

That ever I have felt.

Kent. O, my good master! [Kneeling.

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all! I

Might have sav'd her; now, she's gone for ever.—

Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!

What's th'o' thou say'st?—Her voice was ever so soft, Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman.—

I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

* "But another," i. e., but I must add another.
KING LEAR.

SCENE III.

To him our absolute power.—To you your rights,
With 'boot, and such addition, as your honors
Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservings.—O! see, see! [life:
Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more,
Never, never, never, never, never!—
Pray you, undo this button: thank you, sir.—
Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—her lips,—
Look there, look there!—[He dies.
Edg. He faints.—My lord, my lord!—
Kent. Break, heart; I pr'ythee, break!
Edg. Look up, my lord.
Kent. Vox not his ghost: O! let him pass: he hates him,
That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gone, indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long:
He but usurp'd his life.
All. Bear them from hence. Our present business
Is general woe.—Friends of my soul, you twain.
[To KENT and EDGAR.
Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain.
KENT. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go:
My master calls me; 'Tis must not say, no.
All. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we, that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.
[Exeunt, with a dead March.

* "With boot," i. e., with increase, advantage.
DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Roderigo in choler, and Iago.

Rod. Tush! never tell me, I take it much un—

Iago. Shood! but you will not hear me:

If ever I did dream of such a matter, abhor me.

Rod. Thou toldst me thou didst hold him in thy hate,

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,

Off-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man,

I know my price: I am worth no worse a place;

But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,

Evades them, with a bombast "circumstance,

Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;

And, in conclusion,

Nounsuits my mediators; "For cotirse," says he,

"I have already chose my officer." And what he was?

Forssoth, a great arithmetician,

One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,

A fellow almost damed in a fair wife;

That never set a squadron in the field,

Nor the division of a battle knows

More than a spinster; unless the bookish" theorie,

Wherein the "taged consuls can propose

As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,

Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had th' election;

And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof,

At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds,

Christian and heathen,—must be "be-lee'd and calm'd

By debtor and creditor, this "counter-caster:

He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,

And I, God bless the mark! his Moor-ship's ancients.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

[ service.

Iago. But there's no remedy: 'tis the curse of Preferment goes by "favor and affection,

"Theorie," i.e., theory.—"The taged consuls," i.e., men of the gown, or Iago; mere civilians.—"Must be be-lee'd," i.e., must be put on the heeward side, and therefore calm'd.—"Counter-caster," a contemptuous term for an arithmetician.—An ancient was an ensign, a standard-bearer.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Scene 1.

Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir t' the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself,
Whether I am not just $\frac{1}{2}$ terms am *affect'd
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him, then.

Iago. O, sir! content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking $\n$ knife,
That doth, doing on his own observations, Shews out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender; and when he's old, cashier'd:
Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are, Who, earn'd in forms and usages of duty, Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves, And, throwing but show of service on their lords, Do well thrive by them; and when they have lin'd their coats, Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul; And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir, It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In knowling him, I follow him:
Heaven is my judge, not for I love and duty, But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate The native act and figure of my heart In compliment extern, 'tis not long after But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For danger to peck at: I am not what I am.
Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips 4 owe, If he can carry't thus!

Iago. Call up his father: Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight, Proclaim him in the streets: incense her kinmen; And though he in a fertile climate dwell, Plague him with flies; though that his joy be joy, You must still show such changes of vexation on, As it may lose some color.

Rod. Here is his father's house: I'll call aloud. Iago. Do: with like chamorous accent, and dire As when, by night and negligence, the fire [yll, Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What he! Brabantio! signior Brabantio, ho! Iago. Why! signior Brabantio, ho! Brabantio! thieves! thieves! thieves! Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags! Thieves! thieves! thieves!

Enter Brabantio, above, at a Window.

Iago. What is the reason of this terrible summons? What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Iago. Wherefore ask you this?

Iago. Zounds! sir, you are robb'd; for shame, put on your gown:
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul:
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram Is tapping your white ewe. Arise, arise! Awake the snorting creatures with the bell, Or else the devil will make a grand ladsire of you.

Arise, I say.

Iago. What, have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my name?

Iago. Not I: Affind't, 2 i. e., bound by relationship.

Rod. My name is Rodorigo.

Iago. What worse welcome:
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors. In honest perusal, thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee: and now, in madness,
Being full of supper and distempering draughts, Upon malicious bravery dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Iago. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit and my place have in them power To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Iago. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is My house is not a grange. [Venice; Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. Zounds! sir, you are one of those, that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse: you'll have your nephews near to you; you'll have couriers for cousins, and genets for germans.

Iago. What so profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am, one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Iago. Thou art a villain.

Iago. This thou shalt answer: I know thee, Rodorigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I speak If 'tbe your pleasure, and most wise consent, (As partly, I find, it is) that your fair daughter, At this odd and even full watch o' the night, Transported with no worse nor better guard, But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier, To the gross claps of a lascivious Moor, If this be known to you, and your allowance, We then have done you bold and sucy wrongs; But if you know not this, my manners tell me, We have your rebuke. Do not believe That from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter, if you have not given her leave, I say again, hath made a gross revolt,
Laying her to the Moor; what, thyself, and fortunes,
On an extravagant and wheedling stranger, Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself: If she be in her chamber, or your house, Let loose on me the justice of the state For thus deluding you.

Iago. Strike on the tinder, ho!

Iago. Give me a taper!—call up all my people! This accident is not unlike my dream; Belief of it oppresses me already.

Light, I say! light! [Exit from above.

Iago. Farewell, for I must leave you:
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as if I say I shall)
Against the Moor: for, to do I know the state,— However this may gill him with some check,—
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars (Which even now stand in act) that, for their souls,
Another of his 9 fathom they have none,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love, [him,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find
Lead in the 9 Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. [Exit.

Enter BRABANTIO, and SERVANTS with Torches.

Br. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despised 9 time
Is now. Pray you, head on. — Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her? — O, unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, say'st thou? — Who would be a father? —
How didst thou know 'twas she? — O! thou deceit'st Past thought. — What said she to you? — Get more tapers!
Raise all my kindred! — Are they married, think you? Rod. Truly, I think, they are.

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them set. — Are there not charms,
By which the property of youth and maidenhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing? — Rod. Yes, sir; I have, indeed.

Br. Call up my brother. — O, that you had had her! —

Some one way, some another. — Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?
Rod. I think, I can discover him, if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Br. Pray you, head on. At every house I'll call;
I may command at most. — Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night. —
On, good Roderigo; — I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — The Same. Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and ATTENDANTS, with Torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity
Sometimes, to do me service. Nine or ten times
I had thought to have 4 yerk'd him here, under the
9. 'Tis better as it is. [rills.
Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honor,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did fail hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? for, be sure of this,
That the 9 magnifico is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential,
As 9 double as the duke's: he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint, or grievance,
The law (with all his might t' enforce it on)
Will give him colour.

Oth. — Let him to his spite: My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall cut-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
Which, when I know that boasting is an honor,
I shall promptuate, I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege; and my i demerits
May speak, unbonneted, to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: for know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my 9 unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine. — [yonder?
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come
Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends:
You are best go in.

Oth. Not 1; I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. — Is it they?
Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter Casio, and certain OFFICERS with Torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you, friends.
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And he requires your haste, post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine.
It is a business of some heat: the galley's
Have sent a dozen 9 sequent messengers,
This very night, at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls, run'st and met, [for
Are at the duke's already. You have been hotly call'd
When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate sent above three several 9 quests,
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?
Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a board
9 canack:
If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.
Iago. He's married.

Cas. To whom?

Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to — Come, captain, will you go?
Oth. Have you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.
Iago. It is Brabantio. — General, be 9 adviz'd:
He comes to bad intent.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers, with Torches and Weapons.

Oth. Hollo! stand there!
Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Br. Down with him, thief! [They draw on both sides.
Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.
Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years,
Than with your weapons. [my daughter?
Br. O, thou foul thief! where hast thou stow'd
Dare'st thou, thou hast enchanted her;
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound,
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd
The wealthy 9 curled darlings of our nation,

9 "Men of royal siege," l. e., men who have set upon royal thrones. — "Demersis for merita." — "Unhoused," l. c., rowned; free from domestical cares. — " sequent," i. e., succesive. — " Quests," l. c., messengers. — " A canack was a ricely-laden vessel. — " Be advis'd," l. c., be cautious.
" Opposite," l. c., averes. — "It was the fashion for galantns to wear curled or frizzled hair."}
THE MOOR OF VENICE.

SCENE III.-The Same. A Council-Chamber.

The Duke, and Senators, sitting in state; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news, That gives them credit.

Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd: My letters say, a hundred and seven galleys. Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

Sen. But though they jump not on a just account, (As in these cases, with the same reports, There is a difference) yet do they all confirm A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus. Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment. I do not so secure me in the error, But the main article I do approve In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within.] What ho! what ho! what ho! Enter an Officer, with a Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Now, the business?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes: So was I bid report here to the state, By signor Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change? Sen. This cannot be, By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant, To keep us in false gaze. When we consider The importunity of Cyprus to the Turk, And let ourselves again but understand,
My very noble and approve'd good masters, That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter, It is most true; I have married her, The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech, And little bless'd with the act phrase of peace; For since those arms of mine had seven years' plith, Till now, some nine moons wasted, they have us'd Their dearest action in the tented field; And little of this great world can I speak, More than pertains to feats of broil and battle; And, therefore, little shall I grace my cause, In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patty will a vessel unwarish'd tale deliver? [Dience, Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms, What conjuration, and what mighty magic, (For such proceeding I am charg'd withal) I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold; Of spirit so still and quiet, that her mean Blue is at herself; and she—by spite of nature, Of years, of country, credit, every thing,— To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on? It is a judgment main'd, and most imperfect, That will confess perfection so could err Against all rules of nature; and must be driven To find out practices of cunning hell, Wherein I found you, [Edme.] Consider again, That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood, Or with some drug conjur'd to this effect, He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof: Without 'twit more evidence and overt test, These are such habits, and poor likelihoods Of mean and seeming, you prefer against him. I see. But, Othello, speak! Did you by indirect and forced courses Subdue and poison this young maid's affections? Or came it by request, and such fair question As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you, Send for the lady to the Sagituary, And let her speak of me before my father: If you do find me foul in her report, The trust, the office, I do hold of you, Not only take away, but let your sentence Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither. Otho. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place. [Enter Iago and Attendants. And, till she come, as truly as to heaven I do confess the vices of my blood, So justly to your grave ears I'll present How I did thrive in this fair lady's love, And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello. Otho. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me; Still question'd me the story of my life, From year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes, That I had pass'd. I ran it through, even from my boyish days, To the very moment that he bade me tell it: Wherewith I spake of most disastrous chances, Of moving accidents, by flood, and field; Of hairbreadth escapes; th' imminent deadly breach; Of being taken by the insolent foe, And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence, And portance in my travel's history:

Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle, Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven, It was my hint to speak, such was the process; And of the Cannibals that each other eat, The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads Do grow beneath their shoulders. To this, I tell, Would Desdemona seriously incline: But still the house affairs would draw her thence; Which ever as she could with haste despatch, She'd come again, and with a greedy ear Devour up my discourse. Which I observing, Took once a plant hour; and found good means To do more hereafter a prey to earnest heart, That I would all my pilgrimage dilate. Whereof by parcels she had something heard, But not b intentionally: I did consent; And often did beguile her of her tears, When I did speak of some distressful stroke, That my youth suffer'd. My story being done, She gave me for my pains a word of sighs: She said, *'twas strange; *'twas passing charming. *'Twas pitiful,' *twas wondrous pitiful: strange; She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me; And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her, I should but teach him how to tell my story, And should but want a man.—There is this hint I speak; She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd, And I lov'd her, that she did pity them. This only is the witchcraft I have us'd: Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think, this tale would win my daughter to. Good Brabantio, Take up this mangled matter at the best: Men do their broken weapons rather use, Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak: If she confess that she was half the woor, Destruction upon my head, if my bad blame Light on the man.—Come hither, gentle mistress: Do you perceive in all this noble company, Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father, I do perceive here a divided duty. To you, I am bound for life, and education: My parents and education both do learn How to respect you; you are the lord of duty; I am hitherto your daughter; but here's my husband; And so much duty as my mother show'd To you, preferring you before her father, So much I challenge that I may profess Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. And be he with you—I have done.— Plead it your grace, on to the state affairs: I had rather to adopt a child, than get it. —Come hither, Moor: I here do give thee that with all my heart, Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart I would keep from thee. —For your sake, jewel, I am glad at soul I have no other child, For thy escape would teach me tyranny, To hang clogs on them—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak of yourself; and say a sentence, Which, as a state, or step, may help these lovers

Scene III.

The Moor of Venice.

Into your favor.
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended.
By seeing the worst, which hate on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone.
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.

Chief.

We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
I hear the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears;
But he must be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes. [Chief to the robber, that steals something from the

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus beguile us:
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
I hear the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears;
But he must be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes. [Chief to the robber, that steals something from the
He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators, Hath made the filthy and steel conch of war
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do not agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardness; and do undertake
The present wars against the Ottoman.
Most humbly, therefore, bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reference of place, and exhibition,
With such accommodation and resort,
As levels with her breeding.

Duke.
Be at her father's.
Bra. You can never have it so.
Oth. Nor I.

Duke.

Duke.
That did I love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued
Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind,
And to his honors, and his wars parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interment shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords! beseech you, let her will Have a free way.
Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not.
To please the palate of my appetite;

Nor to comply with! the young affects of heat,
(To me defunct) and proper satisfaction; transport your serious and great business near,
And be not free and hounstoo to her mind:
And heaven defend your counsels, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
When she is more than I. No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid's foil with wanton dross,
My speculative and active business,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skilllet of my helm,
And all indigent and base adversities;
Make head against my reputation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for him to stay, or going.

Duke. At nine! the morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall hear our counsels to you;
With such things else of quality and respect,
As do import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty, and trust;
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.
Good night to every one.—And, noble signior,
[To Brabantio.] If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.
1 Sen. Aiden, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.
Bra. Look, Moor, how thou those eyes to see:
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee
[Exit Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
If prythee, let thy wife attend on her,
And bring her after in the best advantage.
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour.

Oth. The Moor is with me.

Oth. My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I prythee, let thy wife attend on her,
And bring her after in the best advantage.

Duke. At nine! the morning here we'll meet again.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
If prythee, let thy wife attend on her,
And bring her after in the best advantage.

Oth. The Moor is with me.

Oth. The Moor is with me.
tles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme; supply it with one kind of herbs, or distract it with another; either to have it strew with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our cruel stings, our bumbling lusts, whereof I take this, that you call—love, to be a sect, or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drown thyself! drown cats, and blind puppies. I profess me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable inestimable; I could never better stand thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favor with an usurped beard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona shall long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and this was a true answer to the instruction; put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as colocynthia. She must change for youth: when she is sati'd with his body, she will find the error of her choice. She must have his money; therefore, put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring barbarian and a superful Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way; seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me. Go, make money. I have told thee often, and I re-teil thee again and again, to the Moor: my curse is thine heart; this hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time, which will be delivered. Traverse; go: provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adon.

Rod. Where shall we meet me the morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell; put money enough in your purse. Good morrow, Etc. Roderigo.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my dexter
He has done my office: I know not if 'twere true:
Yet I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for laurety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man: let me see now;
To get his place, and to plume up my will
In double knavery.—How, how?—Let's see:—
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram'd to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by the nose,
As asses are.—
I have't:—it is engender'd:—hell and night
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.
[Exeunt."

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. A Platform.

Enter Montano and Two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?
1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Decry a sail. [Exeunt; 2 Gent. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloft at
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
If it hath raffled'sd upon the sea,
What rips of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortar's? what shall we hear of this?
2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-shall'd shaker, with high and monstrous
Seems to cast water on the burning 'bear, [mane,
And quench the guards of th' ever-fixed pole.
I never did like molestation view
On the enarched flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not insheeter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads! our wars are done.
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designment halts: a noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and suffurance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. * The ship is here put in:
A Florentine, Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of Comfort
Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly,
And pray the Moor be safe; for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heaven he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands

* "Will do as if for surely." i. e., will act as if I were certain to the contrary.—"Dissemble for disposition.—Segregation is separation, separation.—The burning bear," etc.—"Enarched," i. e., angry.—"Designament," i. e., purpose; intention.
Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello.
Even till we make the main, and th' aerial blue,
And enjoin reg'ard.

3 Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio, and several Islanders.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor.—O! let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.
Mon. Is he well shipp'd?
Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert, and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeit'd to death,
Stand in bold e'ere.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise?

Mess. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry, 'a sail.'

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

[Gun heard.]

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:
Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall.

[Exit.]

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general viv'd?
Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiv'd a maid,
That paragonic description, and warlike fame;
One that excels the quirks of blossom'ing pens,
And in th' essential vesture of creation,

[In.]

Does bear all excellency.—How now! who has put Re-enter Second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient of the general.
Cas. He has had most favorable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guill'test keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal naturings, letting go safely
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's cap-
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
AScene's enchantment.—Great Jove! Othello guard,
And swell thy sail with thine own powerful breath,
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pacts in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort.—O, behold!

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore.
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.

[They kneel.

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O! I fear — How long you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and shores
Parted our fellowship.

[Within.] A sail, a sail!

But, hark! a sail.

[Gun heard.]

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.

[Exit Gentleman.]

Good ancient, you are welcome.—Welcome, mistress.

[To Emilia.]

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners: 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would you give her so much of her lips,
As of her tongue she o'er bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still, when I have just to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue as safe in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.
[doors.]

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of Bells in your parlors, wild cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your ills, devils being offended,
Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your
Des. O, be upon thee, thy tongue an airy
[beads.]

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What would'st thou write of me, if thou should'st praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't,
For I am nothing, if not m'critical.
[harbor.]

Des. Come on; essay.—There's one gone to the Cas. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.
Come; how would'st thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it, but, indeed, my invention
Comes from a great and bottomless well:
It plucks out brains and all; but my muse labors,
And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.

[witty?

Des. Well pleas'd! How, if she be black and Iago. If she be black, and therefore have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;
For even her folly helps her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes, to make fools laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish therunto,
But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst
But what praise could'st thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the • touch of very maligne itself?
Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;
Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;
Never lack'd gold, and yet never went gay;
Fled from her wish, and yet said,—' now I may,'
She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly;
She that as late was never so frail.
To change the cool's head for the salmon's tail;
That she could think, and ne'er disclose her mind,
See suitors following, and not look behind;
She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,—
Des. To do what?
Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.
Des. O, most lame and impotent conclusion—
Do not learn of him, Emilia, though be thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal censurer?
Cas. He speaks boome, madam; you may relishim more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

[\v Talks apart with Desd.]
Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I ensare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her; do; I will • gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the Sir in. Very good; well kisst! an excellent court-tesy! 'tis so indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would, they were oyster-pipes for your sake.
—[A Trumpet heard.] The Moor! I know his trompet.
Cas. 'Tis truly so.
Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.
Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O, my fair warrior!—
Des. My dear Othello!—
Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,
To see you here before me. O, my soul's joy!—
If after tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow, till they have waken'd death;
And let the laboring back climb hills of seas,
Olympus-high, and duck again as low
As hell's from heaven. If it were now to die,
'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear,
My soul hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid,
But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!—
Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers:—
I cannot speak enough of this content;
It stops me here; it is too much of joy.
And this, and this, the greatest discords be,
That e'er our hearts shall make!
Iago. [Aside.] O! you are well turnd now; But I'll set down the pegs that makes this music,
As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.—
Now, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle—
Hungry, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
I prattle out of k fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts.—I pr'ythee, good Iago,
Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers.
Bring thou the master to the citadel:
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.
Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbor.
—Come hither.—If thou be'st valiant—as they say base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of k guard.
—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.
Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies; and will she love him still for prating as neglectful and indiscreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favor, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in.
Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor;
very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforseted position) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does? a knave very voluble; no farther company, thee, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: a subtle slippery knave; a fainder out of occasions; that has an eye to stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: a devilish knave! besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him of his who and green minds look after; a pes-tilent complete knave, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her: she is full of most blessed p condition.
Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor; bless'd pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.
Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index, and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! when the mutualities so marshall the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion.
Fish!—But, sir, by you ruled me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you tonight;

Well desired, i. e., much solicited by invitation.—
*"O make a head," i. e., without method, hang it,
i. e., listen to me. —The court of guard is the place where the guard musters.—"Lay thy finger," i. e., on thy mouth, to stop it, while listening to a speaker.—"You are pregnant," i. e., plain; evident.—"Salt," i. e., inane.—"Green," i. e., unripe; immature.—"Condition," i. e., qualities; disposition of mind.
for the command, I'll lay't upon you. Cassio knows you not:—I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or rashly taking his discipline; or from what other cause you please, which the time shall more favorably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler,and,haply, with his tramcheon may strike at you:
provoketh him, that he may; for even out of that will
I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a short journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportu-

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries afloat. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
The Moor—lowdight that I endure him not,—
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too;
Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure, I stand accountable for as great a sin)
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the justifull Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof
Both like a poisonous mineral grow's my inward,
And nothing can, or shall, content my soul,
Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife;
Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—
If this poor brach of Venice, whom I 'tis
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,—
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank & gerb,—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too:—
Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,
For making him egregiously an ass,
And practising upon his peace and quiet,
Even to madness. Tis here, but yet confus'd:
Knavery's plain face is never seen, till us'd. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a Proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and vali-

tant general, that upon certain tidings now arrived, imported the mere perdiction of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials.

So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed.
All offices are open; and there is full liberty of

a. To go to market. b. i. e., throw away all one's money. c. To be alert, quick, and watchful. d. i. e., by drinking.

SCENE III. THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard-to-night:
Let's teach ourselves that honorable stop,
Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to.'

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good night: to-morrow, with your earliest,
Let me have speech with you. —Come, my dear love:
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;

[To Desdemona.

That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you. —
Good night.

[Exeunt Oth., Des., Cassio, &c.]

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; "tis not yet ten o'clock. Our general "cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, whom let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she's a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a pane of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And, when she speak's, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well conquer'd to their sheets! Come,

lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O! they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here. I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels: the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't, but it doth dislike me. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him,

With that which he hath drunk to-night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence [Roderigo, As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool,

Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side out

To Desdemona hath to-night curst herself.

[Enter Iago, with blowings cups,

c. i. e., Silly mixed with water. d. "It dislike me," i. e., I do it with dislike, or unwillingly.
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of Am I to put our Cassio in some action [drunkards,
That may offend the isle.—But here they come.
If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter Cassio, with him Montano, and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Tis fore heaven, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. What wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Sings.

And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier's a man;
A life's but a span;
Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys! [Wine brought.

Cas. 'Tis fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in putting; your Dune, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your Englishman.

Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear.
With that he call'd the tailor—clown.

He was a night of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine old cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things.—Well, heaven's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It is true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general,
nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay; but, by your leave, not before me: the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient.—Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs,—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's to look to our business.
Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand.—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then; you must not think,
then, that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters: come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow, that is gone before:

He is a soldier, fit to stand by Caesar
And give direction; and do but see his vice.
'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as th' other: 'tis pity of him.
I fear, the trust Othello puts in him,
On some evil time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horoscope a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second,
With one of an 'ingrat infirmity.
It were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well, and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But bank! what noise?

[Cry within,—Help! Help!—Re-enter Cassio, pursuing Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knife,—teach me my duty?

I'll beat the knife into a wreckage bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dest thou prate, rogue?

[Striking Roderigo.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir, or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drink!

Iago. Away, I say! [Aside to Rod.] go out, and cry a mutiny. [Exit Rod.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen!—
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—
Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed!

Bell rings.

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diable, ho!

The town will rise: God's will! lieutenant, hold!
You will be sham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. Zounds! I bleed still: I am hurt to the dead. [He faints.

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant!—sir, Montano,— gentlemen!—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold, hold! the general speaks to you: hold, for shame! [This?

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence art thou
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl!
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—

★ That is, 'If success favor my schemes.'—* "A rouse," I. e., a little more than enough.— "Canakin" is a little can, or cup.— "Almain," I. e., German.—* "Do you justice," I. e., drink as much as you can do.—* "Peer," I. e., follow.—

* "Lown," I. e., clown.
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the idle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—
Hark! Iago, that look so dear, doth grive,
Speak, when began this? on thy life, I charge thee.
Iago. I do not know:—friends all but now, even
In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom [now
Divesting them for bed; and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitt'd them)
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition boldly. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this pervious broke;
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs, that brought me to a part of it. [got?
Oth. How came it, Michael, you were thus — for
Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.
Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The worst to me, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: what's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you. [eme,
While I spare speech, which some now offends
Of all that I do know; nor know I ought
By me that's said or done amiss this night, Unless
self-charity be sometime a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgment quelled,
Assays to lead the way. If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you
Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twain'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall in a town be, and a man in war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court of guard and safety?
'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affli'd, or leagued in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.
Iago. Touch me not so near.
I had rather this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determin'd sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause:
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Leat by his clamor (as it so fell out)
The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot,
Ourned my purpose; and I return'd, the rather
For that I heard the clink and full of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which, till to-night,
I ne'er might say before. When I came back,
(For this was brief) I found them close together,
At blow and thrust, even as again they were,

When you yourself did part them.
More of this matter can I not report—

Enter Desdemona, attended.
Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.—
Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon.—

Lead him off. [Montano is led off.
Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence them who this vile distraction,
Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldier's life,

Des. What, the matter?

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?
Cas. Ay, past all surgery.
Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!
Iago. Repute, reputation reputation! O! I have lost my reputation.
I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial.—My reputation, Iago, my reputation!
Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most insignificant thing; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog, to affright an impertinent lion. Sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I suppose he is to be dealt with, than to deceive so good a commander, with so light, so drunken, and so indirect an officer. Drink! and speak "parrot!" and squabble! swagger! swear! and discourse futian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—

Devi. Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?
Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O God! that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!
Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered?
Cas. I hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath; one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a monomer. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.
Cas. I will ask him for my place again: he shall tell me, I am a drunkard. Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and pre-ently a beast! O strange.—Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil.
Iago. Come, come; good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used: exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think, you think you love you.
Cas. I have well approved it, sir,—I drink!
Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do.
Our general's wife is now the general:—I may say in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and devotion of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; impart her; she'll help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter, and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.
Cas. You advise me well.
Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.
Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.
Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant;
I must to the watch.
Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.
Iago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain,
When this advice is free I give, and honest,
Provable to thinking, and, indeed, the course
To win the Moor again! For 'tis most easy
Then mine:—the virtuous Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit: she's framed as fruitful
As the free elements. And, then, for her
To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his baptism,
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,—
His soul is so enfefted to his love,
That she may make, unmaké, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I, then, a villain,
To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
Directly to his good?—Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now; for whilsts this honest fool
Pies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,—
That she repels him for his body's lust;
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor:
So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodness make the net,
That shall enmesh them all. How now, Rodrigo!
[Enter Roderigo.]
RRod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a bound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent: I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and, I think, the issue will be— I shall have so much experience for my pains, and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.
Iago. How poor are they, that have not patience!
What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?
Thou know'st, we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does 't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashier'd Cassio.
Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe:
Content thyself a while.—By the mass, 'tis morning;
Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Rod.] Two things are to be done.
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress.
I'll set her on:
Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him 'jump' where he may Cassio find
Soliciting his wife.—Ay, that's the way:
Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.

[Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.
Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains:
Something that's brief; and bid good-morrow to the general.

[Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they squeak if the nose thus?
Mus. I. How, sir, how?
Clo. Are these, I pray you, called wind instruments?
Mus. I. Ay, marry, are they, sir.
Clo. O! thereby hangs a tail.
Mus. I. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?
Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you,
for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away. Go; vanish into air; away.

[Exeunt Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Prythee, keep up thy quillrets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there is one Cassio entreats her a little favor of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem so to notify unto her. [Exit.

1 Jump, I. e., just at the time. — 2 Quilleta, I. e., nice distinctions.
Enter Iago.

Cas. Do, good my friend,—in happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, to send in to your wife: my suit to her, I know, that she will to virtuous Desdemona procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently; and I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor out of the way, that your converse and business may be more free. [Exit.

Cas. Why, I humbly thank you for't. I never knew a Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good-morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry for your displeasure; but all will soon be well. The general and his wife are talking of it, and she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies, that he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus, and great vallinity, and that in wholesome wisdom he might not but refuse you; but, he protests, he loves you, and needs no other suitor but his likings, to take the safest occasion by the front, to bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—if you think fit, or that it may be done,—Give me advantage of some brief discourse with Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in: I will bestow you where you shall have time to speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot, and by him do my duties to the state: that done, I will be walking on the works; repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord; I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we seet? Gent. We wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do all my abilities in thy behalf. [husband, Emil. Good madam, do: I know it grieves me as if the case were his. [Cassio, Des. O! that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt, but I will have my lord and you again as friendly as you were. Cas. Bounteous madam, whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, he's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O! sir! I thank you. You do love my lord; you have known him long, and be you well assured, he shall in strangeness stand no farther off than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady, that policy may either last so long, or feeb upon such nice and waterish diet, or breed itself so out of circumstance, that I, being absent, and my place supplied, my general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that: before Emilia here, I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee, if I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it to the last article: my lord shall never rest; I'll watch him to time, and talk him out of patience; his bed shall seem a school, his board a shirt; I'll interwine every thing he does with Cassio's suit. Therefore, be merry, Cassio; for thy solicitor shall rather die, than give thy cause away.

Enter Othello and Iago, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease; unft for mine own purpose.

Des. Well, do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How, now, my lord! I have been talking with a suitor here, a man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good, my lord, if I have any grace, or power to move you, his present reconciliation take: For if he be not one that truly loves you, that errs in ignorance, and not in cunning, I have no judgment in an honest face. I pr'ythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled, that he hath left part of his grief with me, to suffer with him: Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other Des. But shall't be shortly? [time. Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you. Des. Shall it be to-night at supper? Oth. No, not to-night. Des. To-morrow dinner then? Oth. I shall not dine at home: I meet the captains at the citadel. [morn; Des. Why then, to-morrow night? or Tuesday on Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn: I pr'ythee, name the time, but let it not exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent; and yet his trespass, in our common reason, (Save that, they say, the wars must make examples Out of our best) is not almost a fault to incur a private check. When shall he come? Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul, what you could ask me that I should deny, or stand so hammering on. What! Michael Cassio, that came a wooing with you, and so many a time, when I have spoken of your displeasingly, Hath ta'en your part, to have so much to do to bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,— Oth. Pr'ythee, no more: let him come when he will deny thee nothing. [will, Des. Why, this is not a boon; "Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves, 4 Hawks are famed by keeping them from sleep.—"A shrift," i. e., a confession.—"Reconciliation," i. e., a confession.—"Caseing here signifies knowledge.—"Our best," i. e., our best men.—"Hammering," i. e., hesitating.
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm, Or sue to you to do a pecuniary profit
To your own person: nay, when I have a suit
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of a poise and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to the straight — you; Des. Emilia, come.—Be it as your fancies teach What'er you be, I am obedient.

[Exit, with EMILIA.

Oth. Excellent  plague! Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee, and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my Know of your love? [lady,
Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
No further harm.

Oth. What? Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with it. Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed! ny, indeed:—discern'st thou aught
Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord?
Oth. Honest? ny, ny, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think ?
Iago. Think, my lord!

Oth. Think, my lord!
By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought
Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something.
I heard thee say but now,—thou lik'dst not that,
When Cassio left my wife: what didst not like?
And, when I told thee, he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou criedst, " Indeed!"
And didst instruct and purge thy brow together,
As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think, thou dost;
And, —for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
And weight'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,—
Therefore, these stops of tine fright me the more;
For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
Are tricks of custom; but in a man that's just,
They are close deletions, working from the heart,
That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,
I must be sworn, I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or, those that be not, would they might seem none!
Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why, then, I think Cassio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this.
I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,

As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts
The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me:
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, they are vile and false,
As where's that palace, whercin't foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Kneel, and law-days, and in session sit
With meditation unlawful.

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago;
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,—
Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
(As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not)—that your wisdom yet,
From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance.
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?
Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear my
Is the immediate jewel of their souls: [lord,
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something,
nothing:
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he, that fashions from me my good name,
Robes me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha! Iago.
Iago. O! beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster, which doth make
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss,
Who, certain of his fife, loves not his wrestler;
But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet fondly loves!

Oth. O misery! Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough;
But she, who's, I think, as poor as that,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy! —

Oth. Why? why is this?
I think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? Not: to be once in doubt,
Is once to be resolved. Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such  and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous,
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous;
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: no, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,
Away at once with love, or jealousy.
Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason

—Lects are courses of inquiry. — Conceive, i. e., conceive.
—Imagine, i. e., imagine. — Fineless, i. e., endless; boundless.
— Exsufficate, i. e., whisper. — Matching thy inference, i. e., such as you have mentioned.
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Beware of me. I speak not yet of proof:
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio:
Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to't.
I know our country disposition well:
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience
Is, not to leave it undone, but keep't unknown.
Oth. Dost thou say so?
Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And, when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.
Oth. And so she did.
Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought, 'twas witchcraft.—But I am much to blame;
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.
Oth. That I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.
I hope, you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love.—But, I do see you are mov'd—
I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.
Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech shall fall into such vile success,
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy friend.
My lord, I see you are mov'd.
Oth. No, not much mov'd.—
I do not think but Desdemona's honest. [so!]
Iago. Long live she so; and long live you to think
Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,— Iago. Ay, there's the point:—ns,—to be bold with you,
Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends.
Foll! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—
But pardon me; I do not in suspicion
Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fail to match you with her country forms,
And happily repent.
Oth. Farewell, farewell.
If more than dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago.
Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.
Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature,
Doubts, Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.
Iago. My lord, I would, I might entreat your honor [Returning.
To scan this thing no farther; leave it to time.
Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place,
(For sure, he fills it up with great ability)
Yet if you please to hold him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him and his means.

Note, if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehemence importunity:
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
(As worthy cause I have to fear I am)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honor.
Oth. Fear not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.
Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities with an learned spirit.
Of human dealings: if I do prove her haggard,
Though that her
jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That
chamberers have; or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years—yet that's not much—
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loath her. O, curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapor of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' use. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the mean;
Tis destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is hate to us,
When we do
quicken. Desdemona comes:

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.
If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself.—
I'll not believe it.
Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner and the generous islanders,
By you invited, do attend your presence.
Oth. I am to blame. [Well?]
Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.
Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.
[Offers to bind his Head.
Oth. Your napkin is too little;
[Lets fall her Napkin.
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
[Exeunt Oth. and Des.
Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin.
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it)
That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give't Iago: what he will do with it,
Heaven knows, not I; I nothing, but to please his fantasy.

Enter Iago.
Iago. How now! what do you here alone?
Emil. Do not you chide, I have a thing for you.
Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common thing.
Emil. Has it?
Iago. To have a foolish wife.
Emil. O! is that all? What will you give me now
For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief?
Emil. What handkerchief?

Self-bounty, i.e., inherent generosity; issues, i.e., consequences; success, i.e., result; A will, i.e., an inclination; a desire; His means, i.e., his means of reinstating himself.
Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.
Iago. Hast stolen it from her?
Emil. No, 'faith: she let it drop by negligence;
And, to th' advantage, I, being here, took't up.
Look, here it is.
Iago. A good wench; give it me.
Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest
To have me fetch it?
Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatching it.
Emil. If it be not some purpose of import,
Give't me again: poor lady! she'll run mad,
When she shall lack it.
Iago. Be not unknown on't; I have use for it.
Go! I leave me.
[Exit Emilia.
I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it: triues, light as air,
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste;
But with a little act on the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—

Enter Othello.

Look, where he comes! Not puppy, nor mandrake—
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, [Gorgo,
Shall ever medicize thee to that sweet sleep,
Whom thou dost yesterday.
Oth. Ha! ha! false to me? to me?
Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.
Oth. Avant! be gone! thou hast set me on the scent: better to be much abus'd,
Than but to know't a little.
Iago. How now, my lord?
Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?
I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.
Iago. I am sorry to hear this.
Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known.—O! now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquili mind; farewell content;
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue:—farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trumpet,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fire,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And O! you mortal engines, whose rude threats
'Tis immortal Jove's dread clamors counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone.
Iago. Is it possible? My lord?
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore:
Be sure of it: give me the oculur proof,
[Taking him by the Throat.
Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
Than answer my wak'd wrath.
Iago. Is it come to this?
Oth. Make me to see't: or, at the least, so prove it,
That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop,
To hang a doubt on, or woe upon life!

"To th' advantage," I. e., opportunity.—"Be not acknowledged on:" I. e., seem as if you knew nothing of the matter.
"Mandrake" or the mandrake is strongly soopers.
"Ow'dst," I. e., possessed.—"Pioneers," I. e., the vlet of the camp.

"All remorse," I. e., all tenderness of nature; all pity.
SCENE IV.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

S21

That so demonstrate thinly.

Oth.

I'll bear her all to pieces.

Iago.

Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done;
She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth.

I gave her such a one: 'twas my first gift.

Iago.

I know not that; but such a handkerchief:
(I am sure it was your wife's) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth.

If it be that,—

Iago.

If it be that, or any that was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth.

O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!
One poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now do I see 'tis true.—Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven: 'tis gone.—

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!

Yield up, O Love! thy crown, and hearted throne,
To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
For 'tis of 'apice' tongues!

Iago.

Fray, be content.

Oth.

O, blood, Iago, blood!

Iago.

Patience, I say: your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth.

Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er knows retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the cold Davenport, and the Helvetic point;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up.—Now, by yond marble heaven,
In the due reverence of a sacred vow
[Kneeling.

I here enjoin my words.

Oth.

Do not rise yet.—

[Kneeling.

Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
You elements that clip us round about!
Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service. Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me 'remorse,
What bloody work doth oe'er.

Oth.

I greet thee loving,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the instant put thee to't.
Within these three days let me hear say,
That Cassio's not alive.

Iago.

My friend is dead: 'tis done at your request;
But let her live.

Oth.

Darn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago.

I am your own for ever.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des.

Do you know, sirrah, where the lieutenant
Cassio lies?

Clo.

I dare not say, he lies any where.

Des.

Why, man?

Clo.

He is a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des.

Go to. Where lodges he?

"Hearted throne," i.e., the heart on which thou wast enthroned.—"F𝐫𝐚𝐧𝐩𝐢𝐠" is freight, or load.—"C𝐚𝐩𝐚𝐛𝐥𝐞," i.e., capacious; comprehensive.

"Clip," i.e., embrace.

"Execution," i.e., employment; exerciser.—"Remorse,"
I.e., work not of cruelty to others, but of tenderness, compassion for him.

"And by them answer," i.e., and by them, when answered, form my answer to you.—"The cruzado was a Portuguese coin, bearing the impression of a cross.—"A charner," i.e., an enchanter.
Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies. She, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wife,
To give it her. I did so; and take heed on’t:
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose or give’t away were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is’t possible?

Oth. 'Tis true: there’s magic in the web of it.

A sibyl, that had number’d in the world
The sun to course two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew’d the work;
The worms were hallow’d that did breed the silk,
And it was dyed in "mummy," which the skilful
Conserv’d of maidens’ hearts.

Des. Indeed! is’t true?

Oth. Most veritable: therefore look to’t well.

Des. Then, would to heaven that I had never seen
Oth. Ha! wherefore? [it!]

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?

Oth. Is’t lost? is’t gone? speak, is it out of the Des. Heaven bless us! [way!]

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were?

Oth. How?

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch’t, let me see’t.

Oth. Why, so I can, sir; but I will not now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit:
I pray, let Cassio be receiv’d again:—
[goes.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind mis.–

Des. Come, come;

You’ll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief—

Des. I pray, talk of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief—

Des. A man that, all his time,

Had found his good fortunes on your love;

Sh’d dangers with you—

Oth. The handkerchief—

Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit Othello.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I no’er saw this before.

Sure, there’s some wonder in this handkerchief:
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,
They belch us.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Look you! Cassio! and my husband.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do:
And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what’s the news with you?

Cass. Madam, my former suit. I do beseech you,
That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the office of my heart,
Entirely honor: I would not be delay’d.
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpose’d merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a forc’d content,
And shift myself upon some other course,
To fortune’s alms.

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,

My advocacy is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favor, as in humor, alter’d.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best,
And stood within the ’blank of his displeasure,
For that false speech. You must a while be patient;
What I can do, I will; and more I will,
Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now;
And, certainly, in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Pulled his only brother;—and can he be angry?
Something of moment, then: I will go meet him.

There’s matter in’t, indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I pr’ythee, do so. [Exit Iago.] Something, sure, of state,—

Either from Venice, or some unhapp’d practice,
Must be divulged here to him.

Hath puddled his clear spirit; and, in such cases,
Men’s natures wrangle with inferior things,
Though great ones are their object. "Tis even so;
For let our finger ache, and it induces
Our other healthful members ev’n to that sense.
Of pain: nay, we must think, men are not gods;
Nor of them look for such observances.
As fit the "bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was (unhandsome warrior as I am)
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find, I had suborn’d the witness,
And he’s indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as you think,
And no concealment, nor no jealous toy,
Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day! I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer’d so;
They are not ever jealous for a cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster,
Begot upon itself, born on itself.
[mind!]

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello’s
Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio, walk hereabout:
If I do find him fit, I’ll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?

Bian. How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

Cas. I faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.

Cas. What keep a week away? seven days and nights?

Bian. Eight score hours! and lovers’ absent hours,
More tedious than the dial eight score times?

O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;

Cas. I have this while with leaden thoughts been press’d;
But I shall, in a more convenient time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,

[Giving her Desdemona’s Handkerchief.

Take me this work forth.

Bian. O, Cassio! whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend;
To the felt absence, now, I feel a cause.

a "In mummy," i. e., in the balsamic liquor in which mummies are preserved.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Othello and Iago.

Oth. Will you think so?

Iago. Think so, Iago?

Oth. To kiss in private?

Iago. An unauthoriz'd kiss.

Oth. Or to be naked with her friend abed, an hour, or more, not meaning any harm?

Iago. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?

It is hypocrisy against the devil:

That they mean virtuously, and yet do so,

The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a venial sin;

But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,

She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectess of her honor too:

May she give that?

Iago. Her honor is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft, have it not: but,

For the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.

Thou saidst,—O! 'tis comes o'er my memory,

As doth the raven o'er the infected house;

Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.

Thou saidst,—O! 'tis comes o'er my memory,

As doth the raven o'er the infected house;

Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say,—as knaves be such abroad,

Who having, by their own importunate suit,

Of voluntary doting of some mistress,

Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose

But they must blab—

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assured,

No more than he'll unwear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. 'Faith, that he did.—I know not what he did.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Cassio.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they belie her. Lie with her! that's full —Handkerchief, — confessions, — handkerchief! —To confess, and be hanged for his labor.—

First, to be hanged, and then to confess!—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such

'slumbering passion, without some instruction. It is not words, that shake me thus:—Pish! —Noses, ears, and lips.—Is it possible?—Confess!—Handkerchief?—O devil! —

Iago. Work on,

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;

And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,

All guiltless, meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!

Enter Cassio.

Iago. My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio!

Cas. What's the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy:

This is his second fit; he had one yesterday

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear.

The liquor must have his quiet course,

If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,

Breaks out to savage madness. Looks, he stirs:

Do you withdraw yourself a little while,

He will recover straight: when he is gone,

I would on great occasion speak with you.—

Iago. How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven.

Would you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast, then, in a populous

And many a civil monster.

[city.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;

Think, every bearded fellow, that's but yok'd,

May draw with you: there's millions now alive,

That nightly lie in those unproper beds,

Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better.

O! 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,

To lip a wanton in a secure couch,

And to suppose her chaste... Not let me know;

And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O! thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;

Confin'e yourself but in a patient list.

Whilst you were here, o'erwhelmed with your grief,

(A passion most unmitting such a man)

Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,

And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;

Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;

The which he promis'd. But 'encaxe yourself,

And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,

That dwell in every region of his face;

For I will make him tell the tale anew,

Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when

He hath, and is again to 'cope your wife:

I say, but mark his gesture.—Marry, patience;

Or I shall say, you are all-in-all in spleen,

And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?

I will be found most cunning in my patience;

But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

a "Unproper," i. e., common: "In a patient list," i. e., within the bounds of patience.—"Encave,"i. e., conceal.

b "Cope," i. e., meet; entertain.
Iago. That's not amiss; but yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

[Othello retires.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca, a housewife, that by selling her desires, buys herself bread and clothes; it is a creature, that doth on Cassio, as 'tis the trumpet's plague, to beguile many, and be beguiled by one. He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain from the excess of laughter:—here he comes.—

Re-enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad; and his unbookish jealousy must construe Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behavior, Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worse, that you give me the addition, Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Fly Desdemona well, and you are sure on't. Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power, [Speaking lower.

How quickly should you speed?

Cas. Alas, poor caififi!

Oth. Look, how he laughs already!

[Aside.

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, 'tis faith, she loves.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.

[Aside.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him To tell it o'er. Go to; well said, well said.

[Aside.

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her: Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph o'er me? do you triumph?

[Aside.

Cas. I marry her!—what, a 'customer'? I pray thee, hear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so. They laugh that win.

[Aside.

Iago. 'Faith, the cry goes, that you shall marry

Cas. Pr'ythee, say true.

[her.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well.

[Aside.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is importuned I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me: now he begins the story.

[Aside.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the seashore with certain Venetians, and thither came this bawdle; and, by this hand, she falls thus about my neck:—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gesture imports it.

[Aside.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me; so hales, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Now he tells, how she plucked him to my chamber. O! I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to.

[Aside.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitcheon! marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work?—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and know not who left it there. This is some mixt's token, and I must take out the work? There, give it your husband, wherever you find it, I'll take it out no work out.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now, how now!

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

[Aside.

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for.

[Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. 'Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street elsewhere.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very speak to you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more.

[Exit Cassio.

Oth. [Advancing.] How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Oth. O, Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing.—A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night, for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O! the world hath not a sweeter creature; she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is.—So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O! She will sing the savageness out of a bear.—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O! a thousand thousand times. And then, of so gentle a condition.

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain:—but yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago! the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her a patent to offend; for if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Iago. I will chop her into messes.—Ouckold!

Iago. O! 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovoce my mind again.—This night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it piasces; very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker.

You shall hear more by midnight.

[Trumpet within.

Oth. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same!

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,

*Of so gentle a condition," i. e., of so sweet a disposition. —"Patent," i. e., privilege.
Could neither grace, nor pierce.

Lod. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

Lod. He's that he is: I may not breathe my censure.

What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,—

Lod. I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What! strike his wife? Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; yet would I

That stroke would prove the worst. [know.

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,

And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me, to speak [him;

What I have seen and known. You shall observe

And his own courses will denote him so,

That I may save my speech. Do but go after,

And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiv'd in him.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and her together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard

Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Oth. What! did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out of the way?

Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor

Emil. Never, my lord. [nothing

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,

Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,

Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wreath have put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse,

For if she be not honest, chaste, and true,

There's no man happy; the purest of their wives

Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither—go—

[Exit Emilia.

She says enough;—yet she's a simple bawd,

That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,

A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:

And yet she'll kneel, and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter Emilia with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes:

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy is this?

Oth. Some of your function, mistresse:

[To Emilia.

Leave procurers alone, and shut the door;

Cough, or cry him, if any body come:

Your mystery, your mystery;—may, despatch.

[Exit Emilia.

Des. Upon my knee, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words, [Kneel.

But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true

And loyal wife. [Rite.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
Should fear to seize thee: therefore, be double
Swear thou art honest. [dismal;
Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.
[False?
Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? How am
Oth. O Desdemona!—away, away, away!
Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do ye weep?
Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord?
If, haply, you my father do suspect the life
An instrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him,
Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas’d heaven
To try me with affliction; had he rain’d
All kinds of sores, and shame, on my bare head;
Steepl’d me in poverty to the very lips;
Given to captivity and my utmost hopes;
I should have found in some part of my soul
A drop of patience: but, alas! to make me
A fixed figure, for the hand of scorn
To point his slowly moving finger at;
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:
But there, where I have garnier’d up my heart,
Where either I must live, or bear the life
The trumpet from the which my current runs,
Or else dries up; to be discarded thence,
Or keep it as a cistern, for fool toads
To knot and gender in!—t urn thy complexion there,
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp’d cherubin;
Ay, there, look grim as hell!
Des. I hope, my noble lord esteems me honest,
To write what with upon? What committed?
Committed?—O thou public commoner! I
Should make very forces of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modestly,
Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed?
Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks:
The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
It bash’d within the hollow nine of earth,
And will not hear it. What committed?—
Impudent strumpet!
Des. By heaven you do me wrong.
Oth. Are you not a strumpet?
Des. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preserve this vessel for my lord,
From any other, foul, unhawth, touch,
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.
Oth. What, not a whore?
Des. No, as I shall be saved.
Oth. Is it possible?
Oth. I cry you mercy, then;
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
That married with Othello.—You, mistress,
Re-enter Emilia.
That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell; you, you, ay, you;
We have done our course; there’s money for your pains.
I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel.
[Exit.

Emil. Alas! what does this gentleman conceive?

How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?
Des. Faith, half asleep.
Emil. Good, madam, what’s the matter with my
Des. With whom? [lord?
Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.
Des. Who is thy lord?
Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.
Des. I have none: do not talk to me, Emilia; I cannot weep; nor answer have I none.
What should go by water. Therefore, to-night
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember;
And call thy husband hither.
Emil. Here is a change, indeed! [Exit.
Des. ’Tis meet I should be us’d so, very meet.
How have I been behav’d, that he might stick
The smallest opinion on my least misdeed?

Re-enter Emilia, with Iago.
Iago. What’s your pleasure, madam? How is it with you? [dashes,
Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young
Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.
Iago. What’s the matter, lady?
Emil. Alas! Iago, my lord hath so bewhird her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
As he cannot bear.
Des. Am I that name, Iago?
Iago. What name, fair lady?
Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.
Iago. He call’d her whore: a beggar in his drink,
Could not have laid such terms upon his e. call’d.
Iago. Why did he so?
Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none such.
Iago. Be not sosecret, do not weep. Alas the day!
Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,
Her father, and her country, and her friends,
To be call’d whore? would it not make one weep?
Des. It is my wretched fortune.
Iago. Besheershim for it!
How comes this trick upon him?
Des. Nay, heaven doth know.
Iago. I will be hang’d, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some e. begging, cozening slave, to get some office,
Have not devis’d this slander; I’ll be hang’d else.
Iago. Fie! there is no such man: it is impossible.
Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!
Emil. Let her pardon him, and hell gnaw his bones!
[company?
Why should he call her, whore? who keeps her
The Moor’s abus’d by some most villainous knave,
Some base, notorious knave, some scurvy fellow,—
O, heaven! that such companions thou hast unfolded,
And put in every honest hand a whip,
To lash the rascals naked through the world,
Even from the cast to the west!
Iago. Speak within door.
Emil. O, fie upon them! some such squire he was,
That turn’d your wit the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.
Iago. You are a fool; go to.
Des. O good Iago!
What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:
* * *
night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass.

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello’s place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no! he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; whereon none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello’s place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry: and thither will I go to him: he knows not yet of his honorable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it; but go along with me: I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear farther reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Oth. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no farther.

Des. O! pardon me; ’twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good-night; I humbly thank your honor. Your honor is most welcome. [Indoors.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?

Des. O! Desdemona,—

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he, he will return b'incontinent.

He hath commanded me to go to bed.

And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his biddings: therefore, good Emilia, give me my nightly wearing, and adieu; We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve it. That even his stubbornness, his checks, and frowns,— Pr'ythee, unpin me,—have grace and favor in them. Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All is one.—Good 2 faith, how foolish are our If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me In one of those same sheets. Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call’d Barbara:

a "In discourse of thought," L. e., in the discourse range of thought.—b "The addition," L. e., the title.—c "Doff'd me," L. e., put off me off.—d "Fob'd," L. e., cheated; tricked.—e "Intendment," L. e., intention.
She was in love; and he she loved prov'd mad,
And did forsake her; she had a song of—willow,
An old thing—twas, but it express'd her fortune,
And she died singing it: that song, to-night,
Will not go from my mind; I have much to do,
Not to go hang my head all at one side,
And sing it like poor Barbara. 'Pr'ythee, despatch.
Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?
Des. No, unpin me here.—
This Lodovic is a proper man.
Emil. A very handsom man.
Des. He speaks well.
Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.
Des. A poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree.
[Song]
Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Willow, willow, willow:
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmurd her moans;
Willow, willow, willow:
Her soft tears fell from her, and softened the stones;

Lay by these.—
Sing willow, willow, willow.

'Pr'ythee, hee thee; he'll come anon.—
Sing all a green willow must be my garland.
Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—
Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is it that knocks?
Emil. It is the wind.
Des. I call'd my love false love; but what said he Sing willow, willow, willow: [then]
If I court 'no women, you'll cover with wo men.
So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;
Doth that bode weeping?
Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.
Des. I have heard it said so.—O, these men, these men!—
Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emilina,—
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?
Emil. There be some such, no question.
Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the Emil. Why, would not you? [world? Des.]
No, by this heavenly light.
Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light:
I might do't as well i' the dark.
Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?
Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'tis a great price
For a small vice.
Des. 'In truth, I think thou wouldst not.
Emil. In truth, I think I should, and undoe's, when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of law, nor for grosses, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but, for the whole world,—why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.
Des. Beshow me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.
Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and, having the world for your labor, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many
To the vantedge, as would store the world they play'd for.
But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults, If wives do fall. Say, that they shak their duties, And pour our treasures into foreign laps; Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they strike us, Or scant our former having in despite, Why, we have gall; and, though we have some grace, Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know, Their wives have sense like them: they see, and smell,
And have their palates, both for sweet and sour, As husbands have. What is it that they do, When they change us for others? Is it sport? I think, it is; and doth affection breed it? I think, it doth. Is't charity, that thus errs? It is so too: and have not we affections, Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have? Then, let them use us well; else, let them know, The ills we do, their ills instruct us to. [send,
Des. Good night, good night: heaven me such uses Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home.
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow.
It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons.
'Tis but a man gone: forth, my sword; he dies.

[Stands back.
Iago. I have rubb'd this young guy almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio, Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my game: live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I m' boss'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold to me: there stand I in much peril.
No, he must die:—be't so; I hear him coming.

[Retiring.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gait; 'tis he.——Villain, thou diest.
[Running forward, and making a pass at Cassio.
Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my cont is better than thou know'st;
I will make proof of thine.

[Drags, and wounds Roderigo.

"To the vantedge," i.e., to boast; over and above,—
"Our former having," i.e., our former allowance of expense. — "Sense," i.e., sensation. — "Bare," i.e., unsubstantial. — "A quid pro quo," used figuratively for a low fellow. — "To the sense," i.e., to the quick. — "Boss'd," i.e., fished.
Scene 1.

The Moor of Venice.

Rod. O! I am slain.
[Enter Iago, starts forward, cuts Cassio behind in the Leg, and exit.]

Cas. I am main'd for ever.—Light, ho! murder! murder! murder! [Falls.]

Enter Othello, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio,—Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. It is even so.

Cas. O, help! ho! light! a surgeon!

Rod. 'Tis he.—O brave Iago! honest, and just,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong;
Thou teachest me.—Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest fate lies:—strumpet, I come.

2 Fort of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted.
[Exit Othello.]

Enter Lodovico and Grattiano, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch! no passage! murder! murder!

Iago. 'Tis some mishance; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark!

Iago. O, wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groans.—It is a heavy night.

These may be counterfeit:—let's think it unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. No body come then, shall I bleed to death.

Enter Iago, unarmed, with a light.

Lod. Hark!

Iago. [Reads a letter.]

Lod. What weapons?

Iago. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this, that cries out murder thus?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Grat. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O! I am spoilt; undone by villains:
Give me some help. [This is a signal for a stealthy entry.]

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done
Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!—
What are you there? come in, and give some help.
[To Lodovico and Grattiano.]

Iago. O, help me! here.

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain! [Iago seizes Rodorigo.]

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!—

Iago. Kill men in the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town!—Ho! murder! murder! murder!
What may you be? are you of good, or evil?

Man. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Sighnor Lodovico!

Iago. Help, sir. [Lodovico strikes him.]

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Cassio? Cassio?

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Man, heaven forbid!—Light, gentlemen! I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is't that cry'd?

Bian. O my dear Cassio! My sweet Cassio!

O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio! [pect

Iago. O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you sus—
Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No. [Seek ye.]

Gra. I am sorry, to find you thus: I have been to Iago. Lend me a garter.—so.—O, for a chair,

To bear him easily hence!—

Bian. Alas! he faints.—O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury.—

Patience a while, good Cassio.—Come, come.

Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no?

[Looking at Rod.]

Alas, my friend, and my dear countryman,
Rodorigo no.—yes, sure. O heaven! Rodorigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Iago. Signior Grattiano! I cry you gentle pardon;
These bloody accidents must excuse my manners
That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Rodorigo.

Iago. He, he, 'tis he.—O! that's well said;—the chair.

[Enter chair brought.]

Some good man bear him carefully from hence;
I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you, mistress, [To Bianca.

Save you your labor.—He that lies slain here, Cassio,
[You?

Was my dear friend. What malice was between
Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Iago. What, look you pale?—O, bear him out
O' the air.—[Cassio and Rod. are borne off.

Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale, mistress,
Do you perceive the ⁴ gasiness of her eye?—

Nay, an you stir:—we shall hear more anon.—

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her;
Do you see, gentlemen? may, guiltiness will speak,
Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Alas! what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark
By Rodorigo, and fellows that are scarp'd;
He's almost slain, and Rodorigo dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio! Cassio.

Iago. This is the fruit of whom,—P'r'ye, Emilia,
Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.—

What! do you shackle at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shackle not.

Iago. O! did he so? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. O, fie upon thee, strumpet!—

Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest,
As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I? fie upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlewomen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd.—

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.—

Emilia, run you to the citadel,
And tell my lord and lady what hath hap'd.—

Will you go on, I pray?—This is the night. [Aside.

That either makes me, or ⁴ fordoes me quite.
[Exeunt.]

⁴ Gashtiness for ghastliness. ⁴ Fortdoes, i.e., ruins; destroys.
Othello, I but

Yet I'll not shed her blood;

Nor fear that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.

Put out the light, and then—put out the light?

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,

I can a fire in thy former light restore,

Should I repent me; but once put out thy light,

Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,

I know not where is that Promethean heat,

That can thy light re-bume. When I have pluck'd

I cannot give it vital growth again,

If the rose, it needs must wither:—I'll smell it on the tree.—

[Othello kisses her.]

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade
Justice to break her sword!—One more, one more.

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,

And love thee after.—One more, and this the last:

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,

But they are cruel tears: this sorrow's heavenly;

It strikes, where it doth love.—She wakes—

Des. Who's there? Othello?—

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?—

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?—

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime,

Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,

Solicit for it straight—

Des. Als, my lord! what may you mean by that?—

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by:

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;

No, heaven! forfend, I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?—

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then, heaven

Have mercy on me!—

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Humph!—

Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal then,

When your eyes roll so. Why I should fear, I know

Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.—

Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.—

Ahs! why gnaw you so your nether lip?

Some bloody passion shakes your very frame:

These are portents; but yet, I hope, I hope,

They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!—

Des. I will so. What's the matter? [thee,

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov'd, and gave

Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!—

So, for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,

Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:

Therefore, confess thee freely of thy sin;

For to deny each article with oath,

Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong conception,

That I do groan with't. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord, have mercy on me!—

Oth. [I say, amen.]—

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did

Offer you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,

But with such general warranty of heaven

As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,

And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,

A murder, which I thought a sacrifice.

I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;

I never gave it him.—Send for him hither;

Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—us'd thee.

How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd.

Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't.

Des. His fear interprets them.—What! is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge

Had stomach for them all.

Des. What! ho is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, trumpeter! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, trumpeter!

Des. Kill me too-morrow; let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,

There is no pause.

But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late. 9

Des. O Lord, Lord, Lord!  [He smothereth her.

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho!—

Oth. My lord, my lord!—

Oth. [quite dead!]

Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead! not yet I,

That am cruel, am yet merciless;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—

So, so! 6

[Stabs her.

Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my lord!—

Oth. [Whose there?]—

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord! I would speak

With word with you.

Oth. Yes,—'tis Emilia,—By and by.—She's dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death;

The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?

Still as the grave.—Shall she come in? Were't good?

I think she stirs again:—no.—What's the best?

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:

My wife! my wife! what wife!—I have no wife;

O is inpersuadable, O heavy hour!—

Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse

Of sun and moon, and that th' afflictive globe

Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you, I may speak

With you.

Oth. What? my lord!—

Oth. I had forgot thee. O! come in, Emilia.—

Soft,—by and by,—let me the curtains draw—

Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

Unlock the Door.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. O, good my lord! yonder's foul murder done.

Oth. What! now?—

Emil. But now, my lord!
Oth. It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more near the earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian,
Call'd Roderigo.

Oth. No; Roderigo kill'd?

And Cassio kill'd?

Emil. No; Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice:—
Help! Help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!

[Going to the bed.

Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!
Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O! who hath done

This deed?

Oth. Nobody; I myself; farewell:
Command me to my kind lord. O farewell! [Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report a truth.

Oth. She's like a liar gone to burning hell:
'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. Of! the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil.

Oth. She turn'd to hell, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say that she was false: O! she was heavenly true.

Oth. Cassio did her; ask thy husband else.

O! I was damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity.—Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysoleye,
I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration, woman? I say,
y thy husband.

[4 love.

Emil. O mistress! villainy hath made mocks with My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman;
I say, thy husband: dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart:
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

[2 Threatening her.

Emil. Do thy worst;

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace! you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,
As I have to 'churt. O gull! O dot!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives.—Help! help, ho! help!
The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter?—How now, general!

Emil. O! are you come, Iago? you have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man;
He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false.
I know, thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain.

Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more
Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie.—
She false with Cassio!—Did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.

[To speak.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound
My mistress here lives murder'd in her bed.

All. O, heaven! offend!

Emil. And, if your reports have set the murder on Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villain! villainy! villainy!
I think upon't,—I think,—I smell't;—O villainy!
I thought so then,—'Twill kill myself for grief;—
O villainy, villainy!—in the room at home.

Iago. What! are you mad? I charge you, get you

Emil. Good gentleman, let me have leave to speak;
Tis proper I obey him, but not now.—
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O!

[Following on the ground.

Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar,
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O! she was foul.

[Starting up.

I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly

Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed: Cassio confess'd it;
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognizance and pledge of love
Which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand;
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out:—I hold my peace,
sir? no;
No, I will speak as liberal as the wind.

Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

[Drawing.

* Error here means 'wandering'; deviation from her course.

“ Folly,” i.e., wantonness; unchastity.
“ Iteration,” i.e., repetition.
“ Hath made mocks with love,” i.e., hath played upon the weakness of a violent passion.
“ More can I bear than you dare execute,” King Henry VI, Part II.
Emil. I will not. [Iago offers to stab Emil.]

Gra. Fie!

Your sword upon a woman? [speech of Emilio.] O thou dull Moor! That handkerchief thou found by fortune, and did give my husband:

For often, with a solemn earnestness,

(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle.)

To beg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore! [They hold him.] Emilio. She give it Cassio! no, alas! I found it, and I did give't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest.

1 [Stabs her, and exit instantly.]

Emilio. By heaven, I do not; I do not, gentlemen. O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool Do with so good a wife? 2

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven, But what serve for the thunder?—Precious villain! Gra. The woman falls: sure, he has kill'd his wife.

Emilio. Ay, ay, O, lay me by my mistress' side! Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. This is a notorious villain. Take you this weapon, Which I have here recover'd from the Moor. Come, guard the door without: let him not pass, But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain, For 'tis a dammed slave.

[Exit Montano and Gratiano.]

Oth. I am not valiant neither, But every puny whipster gets my sword, But why should honor outlive honesty? Let it go all.

Emilio. What did thy song bode, lady? Harl, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan, And die in music:—Willow, willow, willow.— Moor, she was chaste: she lov'd thee, cruel Moor: So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true, So speaking as I think, I die.—I die. [Dies.]

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber, It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.— O! here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak to me, Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter Gratiano.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon: A better never did itself sustain Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day, That, with this little arm, and this good sword, I have made my way through more impediments Than twenty times your stop,—But, O vain boast! Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now.

Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd; Here is my journey's end, here is my 1 butt, And very sea-mark of my utmost sail. Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear; 2 Man but a rush against Othello's breast, And he retires.—Where should Othello go?— Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-stor'd 3 wench! Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at comb. This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven, And fiends will snatch at me. Cold, cold, my girl; Even like thy chastity.—O, cursed slave! Whip me, ye devils,

From the possession of this heavenly sight! Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur! Wash me in steep-down guls of liquid fire!

4 O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead? O! O! 5

Enter Lodovico and Cassio.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man? Oth. That's he, that was Othello: here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

6 Enter Montano with Iago, bound, and Officers. Oth. I look down towards his feet;—but that's a fable:

If thou that be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Enter Othello wounds Iago.]

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I'll have thee live; For, in my b'sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello! that wert once so good, Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave. What shall be said to thee? Oth. Why, any thing.

An honorable murderer, if you will: For nought I did in hate, but all in honor. Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy. Did you and he consent in Cassio's death? Oth. Ay.

From this time forth I never will speak word. Lod. What! not to pray?

Oth. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n, Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter, Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;

[Producing it.]

And here another: the one of them imports The death of Cassio to be undertook By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain! Cas. Most heathenish, and most gross! Lod. Now, here's another discontented paper,

[Producing it.]

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems, Roderigo meant to have send this damned villain; But that, belike, Iago in the interim Came in and satisfi'd him.

Oth. O, the pernicious 4 cauité!— How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief, That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber; And he himself confess'd, but even now, That there he dropp'd it, for a special purpose, Which he brought to his desire. O foul! foul! foul! Oth. Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter, How he upbraids Iago, that he made him Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came That I was cast: and even but now he spake, After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him, Iago kill'd him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us: Your power and your command is taken off, And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave, If there be any cunning cruelty,

4 "The Ice-brook's temper:" an allusion to the peculiar virtue in tempering sword-blades which the water of the brook or rivulet called Seth, in Celtiberia, was reputed to possess. — "By butt," I. e., my end.— "Lost fear," I. e., vain.— 4 "Man," I. e., person; aton. — "Wench," was formerly used in a good sense for a girl or young woman.— "Complt for account.
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state.—Come; bring them away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know it;
No more of that.—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice:
Then, must you speak
Of one that lov'd, not wisely, but too well;
Of one, whose hand, like the base Indian,
Threw a pearl away [eyes, richer than all his tribe;
Of one, whose subdued
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees.
Their medicinal gum.
Set you down this;
And say, besides, that in Aleppo once,
When a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself.

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that's spoke is mar't.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee:—no way but Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies on the Bed.

Cat. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon,
For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog!

Lod. More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea,
Look on the tragic loading of this bed; [To Iago.
This is thy work: the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid.—Griatiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you.—To you, lord governor,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain;
The time, the place, the torture:—O, enforce it!
Myself will straight aboard, and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. [Exeunt.

* The dogs of Spartan race were of the most fierce and savage kind.
* "Succeed," i.e., devolve; pass by inheritance.
* "The censure," i.e., the sentence; the judgment.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT III.—SCENE 9.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt. Octavia, sister to Cæsar, and Wife to Antony. Charmian, Attendants on Cleopatra. IRAS, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE, in several Parts of the Roman Empire.

ACT I.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes, That o'er the files and musters of the war Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn The office and devotion of their view Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,

* "Reneges," i. e., renounces.

And is become the bellows, and the fan, To cool a gipsy's lust. Look, where they come. Flourish. Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform'd into a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much. Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd. Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

b Triple is used here for third.—* "A bourn," i. e., a bound or limit.
SCENE II. ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. What?—Grates me:—the sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear, & them, Antony, Fulvia, perchance, is angry; or, who knows
If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, "Do this, or this;
'Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that; Perform't, or else we 1 doom thee."

Ant. How, my love! Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like,—
You must not stay here longer; your dismission
Is from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony.—
Where's Fulvia's  process? Caesar s, I would say?

Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen, Thou bluesth, Antony, and that blood of thine
Is Caesar's hommage: else so thy cheek pays shame.
When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds,—The messengers! Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide arch
Of the v'ang'd empire fall! Here is my space.
Kingdoms are clay: our dusty earth alike
Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life
Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair.

Embracing,
And such a twin can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to sweet,
We stand up peerless.

Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?—
I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony
Will be himself.

But stir'd by Cleopatra.—

Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with conference harsh:
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport to-night?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fly, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every passion  fiery strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd.
No messenger; but thine, and all alone,
To-night we'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it.—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt Ant. and Cleop., with their Train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slightly?
Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry,
That he approves the common ian, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas,  sweet Alexas, most anything Alexas, almost absolute Alexas, whose the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O! I knew this husband, which you, say, must charge his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer! Soothful! Sooth!

Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know things?—

Alex. Show him your hand.

Char. Is in nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Enter ENOBARBUS. Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough,
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. If make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Alex. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. Of means, in flesh:

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his presence; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Alex. You shall be more believing, than below'd.

Char. I'll find rather heat my liver with drinking.

Iras. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune. Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to Whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Alex. You can outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. Spectacular! I love long life better than figs.

Alex. You have seen, and proved a fairer former fortune,

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names.

'Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Alex. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fruitful every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think, none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, name; tell Iras here.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eso. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be, drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the overflowing Nilus presages famine.

Alex. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.
Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—'Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Alex. Your fortunes are alike.

Alex. But how? but how? give me particulars.

Char. I have said.

Alex. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend!
Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune.—O! let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee: and let her die too, and give him a worse; and let women follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold.

Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight, good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people; for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man lose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow

k Shall have no names," i. e., shall prove bastard.—

l Isis was an Egyptian goddess.
We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,
By 1 repetition souring, does become
The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;
The handful 2 would pluck her back, that shov'd her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off;
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,
My idleness doth hatch.—How now! Enobarbus!

Enter Enobarbus.
Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?
Ant. I must with haste from hence.
Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women. We see
How mortal an unkindness is to them: if they suffer
Our departure, death's the word.
Ant. I must be gone.
Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die:
It were pity to cast them away for nothing; though,
Between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing.
Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly:
I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer 3 moment. I do think,
There is mettle in death, which commits
Some loving act upon her, she hath such a celebrity in dying.
Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.
Eno. Alack, sir! no; her passions are made of Nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot Call her winds and waters, sighs and tears;
They are greater storms and tempests than almonds can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be,
She makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.
Ant. Would I had never seen her!
Eno. O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful Piece of works, which not to have been blessed
Wish'd would have discredit'd your travel.
Ant. Fulvia is dead.
Eno. Sir? —
Ant. Fulvia is dead.
Eno. Fulvia! Ant. And.
Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice.
When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man
From him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth:
Comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out,
There are members to make new. If there
Were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut,
And the case to be lamented: this might of works,
With compassion, your old smock brings forth a new petticot;
And, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.
Ant. The business she hath broached in the state
Cannot endure my absence.
Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's,
Which wholly depends on your abode.
Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall break
The cause of our expedition to the queen,
And get her leave to part: for not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touchers,
Do strongly speak to us, but the letters, too,
Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands
The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver,
Till his deserts are past) begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his dignities,
Upon his son: who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up

* Drawn for drove.—"Stiff." i. e., bard.—"Extended," i. e., over-run.—"Earing," i. e., tilling; ploughing.

* Upon far poorer moment," i. e., for less reason; upon a weaker motive.—"Expedience," i. e., expedition.
For the main soldier; whose quality, going on,
The sides of the world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which, like the conjuror’s hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent’s poison. Say, our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eun. I shall do it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who’s with him, what he
I did not send you. If you find him sad, [does:
Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am suddenly sick: quick, and return.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dear,
You do not hold the method to enforce
[ly,
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in [him.

Cleo. Thou testest; I like a fool, the way to lose
Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear:
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Antony.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose;—
Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall:
It cannot be thus long: the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—
Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me.

Ant. What’s the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there’s some good news.

What says the married woman?—You may go:
Would, she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say, ’tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you; here you are.

Ant. The gods best know,—
Cleo. O! never was there queen
So mightily betray’d; yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,— [true,

Cleo. Why should I think, you can be mine, and Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia! Riotous madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing!—

Ant. Most sweet queen,

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no color for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying,
Then was the time for words; no going then:
Eternity was in our lips, and eyes;
Bliss in our brows; bent; none our parts so poor,
But was a race of heaven; they are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn’d the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady!—

Cleo. I would, I had thy inches; thou shouldst
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen.

The strong necessity of time commands
Our services a while, but my full heart

Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o’er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approach to the port of Rome;
Equality of two domestic powers
Strength, Breeds scorpions faction. The hunted, grown to
Are newly grown to love: the condemn’d Pompey,
Rich in his father’s honor, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thir’d
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of heat, would purge
By any desperate chance. My more particular,
And that which most with you should save my
Is Fulvia’s death. [going,

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,
It does from childishness.—Can Fulvia die?

Ant. She’s dead, my queen.

Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read
The garboils she awak’d; at the last, best,
See, when, and where she died.

Cleo. O, most false love!—

Ant. Where was the sacred viands thou shouldst fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia’s death, how mine receive’d shall be.

Ant. Quoth he, no more be you to know
The purposes I hear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice: by the fire
That quickens Nilus’ slime, I go from hence,
Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war,
As thou affect’st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come.—

But let it be.—I am quickly ill, and well,
So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true 2 credence to his love, which stands
An honorable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.

I pr’ythee, turn aside, and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say, the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look
Like perfect honor.

Ant. You’ll heat my blood: no more.

Cleo. You can do better yet, but this is meekly.

Ant. Now, by my sword,—

Cleo. Be not forget.—Still he mends;
But this is not the best. Look, pr’ythee, Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chaise.

Ant. I’ll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.

Sir, you and I must part,—but that’s not it:
Sir, you and I have lov’d,—but there’s not it:
That you know well: something it is I would,—
Of my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Cleo. *Tis sweating labor
To hear such idleness so near the heart,
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you: your honor calls you hence;
Therefore, be deaf to my unpitted folly,

*"The conjuror’s," i. e., the horse’s: an allusion to the walrus error, that a koras-hair, dropped into corrupted water, would become animated.—b "I did not send you," i.
*Appear as if I did not send you," i.e., "in our brow’s bent," i.e., in the arch of our eyebrows.—"A rose," i.e., a knock or flavor.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT I.

And all the gods go with you! upon your sword
Sit laurel'd victory, and smooth success
Be strow'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go. Come;
Our separation so abides, and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away! [Exeunt.

Enter Octavius Cæsar, Lepidus, and Attendants.

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel; is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy,
More womanly than he; hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: you shall find
A man, who is the abstract of all faults
There that all men follow.

Lep. I must not think, there are
Evils to darken all his goodness:
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change,
Than what he chooses.

Cæs. You are too indulgent. Let us grant, it is not Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reek the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knives that smell of sweat: say, this becomes (As his composer must be rare indeed, [him,
Whom these things cannot blemish) yet must Antony
No way excuse his sojourns, when we do hear
That heavy weight in his [lightness.
If he fill'd his vacancy with voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Fall on him for't; but, to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state, and ours, 'tis to be chid
As we rate boys; who, being mature in knowledge,
Fawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every
Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
Hour, how 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears, he is behold of those
That only have fear'd Cæsar: to the 3 fleets
The 4 discounts repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. Mess. I should have known no less.
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were;
And the ebb'd man never lov'd, till never worth love,
Comes [loved by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
 Goes to, and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cæsar, I bring thee word,

Meneleus and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them; which they [ear and wound
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack 'blood to think on'; and a flush youth revolt.
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious vessels. When thou once
Wast bented from Modon, where thou slew'st
Hittus and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than stings could suffer: thou didst drink
The 8 state of horses, and the gilded [puddle,
Which beasts would cough at: 'tis palate then did
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge; [deign
You, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheers,
The burks of trees thou brows'dst: at the Alps
It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on; and all this
(It wounds thine honor, that I speak it now)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as [lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pity of him.

Cæs. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome. 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves the field; and, to that end,
Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cæsar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To front this present time.

Cæs. Mess. Till which encounter,
It is a business too. Farewell. [mean time
Lep. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir; I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian! Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha!—

Give me to drink 4 mandragora.

Char. Why, madam? Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time,
My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch, Mardian—

Mar. What's your Highness' pleasure?
Cleo. Mar. Not now to hear thee sing: I take no pleasures, save an eunuch has. 'Tis well for thee, [sure

That, being 4 unsemnificant, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?
Mar. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing,
But what in deed is honest to be done;
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.
Cleo.
O, Charmian!
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he? Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? O, happy horse to bear the weight of Antony! Do bravely, horse, for 'wot'st thou whom thou mov'st? The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm And 'bargonet of men.—He's speaking now, Or murmuring, "Where's my serpent of old Nile!" For so he calls me. Now I feed myself With most delicious poison—think on me, That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black, And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar, When thou wast here above the ground, I was A morsel for a monarch; and great Pompey Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow:
There would be anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas.
Alex.
Soeverign of Egypt, hail!
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony? Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath With this tinct gilded thee.—
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?
Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen, He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,— This orient pearl:—his speech sticks in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.
Alex. Good friend, quoth he, Say, "the firm Roman to great Egypt sends This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot, To mend the petty present, I will piece Her opalent throne with kingdoms: all the east," Say thou, "shall call her mistress." So he nodded, And soberly did mount an arm-girt steed, Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke Was hoastfully dumb'd by him.
Cleo. What! was he sad, or merry?
Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes Of hot and cold: he was nor sad, nor merry.
Cleo. O well-divided disposition.—Note him, Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:
He was not sad, for he would shine on those That make their looks by his: he was not merry, Which seem'd to tell him, his remembrance lay In Egypt with his joy; but between both: O heavenly mingle!—Be'st thou sad, or merry, The violence of either thee becomes, So does it no man else.—Met'at thou my posts?
Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers. Why do you send so 4 thick?
Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony, Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.
Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian, Even hearken Caesar so?
Char. O, that brave Caesar!
Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.
Char. The valiant Caesar!
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth, If thou with Caesar paragon again
My man of men.
Char. By your most gracious pardon, I sing but after you.
Cleo. My sullay days,

When I was green in judgment:—cold in blood,
To say as I said then!—But come, away:
Get me ink and paper;
He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina. A Room in Pompey's House.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.
Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.
Mene. Know, worthy Pompey, That what they do delay, they not deny.
Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays
The thing we sue for.
Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.
Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope
Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors: Caesar gets money, where He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.
Menas. Caesar and Lepidus
Are in the field: a mighty strength they carry.
Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.
Menes. From Silvius, sir.
Pom. He dreams: I know, they are in Rome togethers,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy warm lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both:
Lay up the libertine in a flood of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks,
Sharpen with clayless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may prelude his honor,
Even 'till a Leth' de' dullness.—How now, Varrius?

Enter Varrius.
Varrius. This is most certain, that I shall deliver
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected; since he went from Egypt, 'tis
A space for farther travel.
Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear.—Menas, I did not think,
This amorous surfeiter would have don'd his helm
For such a petty war: his soldiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er hast-wearied Antony.

Menas. I cannot hope, Caesar and Antony shall well greet together:
His wife that's dead did trespasses to Caesar;
His brother walk'd upon him, although, I think,
Not mov'd by Antony.
Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser eminities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,

---"Crescent," i. e., increasing; growing.—"Till for to.—
That is, 'A sufficient space of time has elapsed for a longer journey.'—"Don't," i. e., put on.—"I cannot hope," i. e.,
I cannot expect.
"Twere pregnant they should square between themselves;
For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords: but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions, and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be it as our gods will have’t! It only stands
Our lives upon to use our strongest hands.

Come, Menas. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in the House

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain’s
Gods, and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Caesar move him,
Let Antony look over Caesar’s head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearier of Antonius’ beard,
I would not shav’d to-day.

F. For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in’t.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion:
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter Antony and Ventidius.

Eno. And yonder, Caesar.

Enter Caesar, Menas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark ye, Ventidius.

Menas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A lenner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard: when we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds. Then, noble partners,
(The rather, for I earnestly beseech)
Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to the matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well.

Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus. [Shake hands.

Ces. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Ces. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Ces. Nay, then—

Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so;
Or, being concern you not.

Ces. I must be laugh'd at,
If, or for nothing, or a little, I
Should say myself offended: and with you
Chiefly if the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar,
What's was't to you?

Ces. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis’d?

Ces. You may be pleas’d to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befal me. Your wife, and brother,
Made wars upon me, and their contention
Was theme for you; you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business: my brother never

Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discard his authority with yours?

And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you’ll patch a quarrel,

Ant. No matter whole you have to make it with,
It must not be with this.

By laying defects of judgment to me; but
You patch’d up your excuses.

Ant. Not so; not so;

I know you could not lack, I am certain on’t,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause ’gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which I fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would not had her spirit in such another:
The third of the world is yours, which with a
Snaffle you may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to war with the women!

Ant. So much uncourable, her garboils, Caesar,
Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too) I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

Ces. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did give my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,

He fell upon me, ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feast’d, and did want
Of what I was ’t the morning; but, next day,
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask’d him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Caesar.

Ant. No, Lepidas, let him speak:
The honor’s sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack’d it. But on, Caesar;
The course of my oath. [them.

Ces. To lend me arms and aid when I requir’d
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then, when poison’d hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,

" 'Tis practis’d," i. e., did use unwarrantable arts or stratagems.—"T’ Question," i. e., subject of conversation.—
"Urge me in his act," i. e., use my name as a pretence for the war.—"Reports for reporters."—"With graceful eyes," i. e., with looks of approval,—"Fronted," i. e., opposed.—
"A snaffle," i. e., a bribe.—"Garboils," i. e., commotions.—"A missive," i. e., despatched.—"Message," i. e., conversation.—"The honor," i. e., the theme of honor, namely, the obligation of an oath.
I'll play the pensive to you; but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor vour power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvin,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine honor
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. "Tis nobly spoken.
Ant. If it might please you, I will undertake no farther
The 5 griefs between ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to 6 stone you.

Lep. Worthy spoken, Mecenas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wring in, when you have nothing else to do.
Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore, speak
Eno. Go to them; 'tis you considerate stone.

Ant. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The style of my speeches for it cannot be.
We shall remain in friendship, our 4 conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I know
What hoop should hold us staunch, from edge to edge
Of the world I would pursue it.

Ag. Give me leave, Caesar —

Cas. Speak, Agrippa.

If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserved: 2 for rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear
Agrippa farther speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetuity, amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men,
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All these jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing: truths would be tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would, each to other, and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
Not duty ruminated. Will Caesar speak?

Ant. Cas. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, "Agrippa, be it so,"
To make this good?

Cas. The power of Caesar, and
His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment! — Let me have thy hand:
Further this act of grace, and from this hour,
The 4 hearts of brothers govern in our loves,
And sway our great designs.

Cas. There is my hand,
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother

Ant. "Without it," i.e., without honesty.—"Griefs," i.e., grievances.—"To stone," i.e., to reconcile.—"Conditions," i.e., dispositions.

Ant. Did ever love so dearly: let her live
To join our kingdoms, and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great,
Of late upon me: I must thank him, only
Lost my remembrance suffer'll report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he?

Cas. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Cas. Great, and increasing; but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.
Would we had spoke together! Haste for it;
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Cas. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I'll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.[Flourish. Enter Caesar, Antony, and Lepidus.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecenas!
—my honorable friend, Agrippa!—

Agr. Good Enobabrus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are So well digested. You stay'd well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance;
And made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boarse roasted whole at a breakfast;
And but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had Much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she panted up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that
The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water, which they beat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth of gold so great
O'er-picturing that Venus, where we see,
The fancy out-work nature: on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With diverse-color'd fans, whose wind did seem
To blow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
And what they undid, f'did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her i' the eyes,

* "Square," i.e., true.—"And what they undid, did," i.e., and added to the warmth which they were intended to diminish.—"Tended her i' the eyes," i.e., waited upon her looks.
And made their hands adorings: at the helm
A seeming mermaid steer'd; the silken tackle
I smell with the touches of those flower-soft hands,
That yarlo frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd I'th market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to grace on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

Agr.

Rare Egyptian!
Ero. Upon her landing Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better he became her guest,
Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of "No!" woman heard speak,
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;
And for his ordinary pays his heart
For what his eyes eat only.

Agr.

Royal wench!
She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed;
He plough'd her, and she crop'd.
Ero. I saw her once
Hor'rytimes through the public street;
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Ero. Never; he will not.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety; other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry,
Where most she satisfies; for vilest things
Become themselves in her, that the holy priests
Bless her when she is riggish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.

Ero. Let us go.

Good Enobronbus, make yourself my guest,
Whilst you abide here.

Ero. Humbly, sir, I thank you.
[Exit]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in Cæsar's House

Enter Cæsar, Antony, Octavia between them; Attendants.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will some-
Divide me from your bosom.
[Times Octa. All which time,
Before the gods my knee shall bow with prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir.—My Octavia,
Read not my blinshes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square, but that to come [dy.—
Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear la-
Good night, sir.

Ces. Good night.
[Exit Cæsar and Octavia.

Enter A soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah: you do wish yourself in Egypt.

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in my motion, hope it not in my touch to do, but I'll lead you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me, whose fortune shall rise higher,
Cæsar's, or mine?

Sooth. Cæsar's.

---

Therefore, O Antony! stay not by his side:
Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cæsar's is not; but near him thy angel
Becomes afraid, as being o'erpower'd: therefore,
Make space enough between you.

Ant.

Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee: no more, but when to
If thou dost play with him at any game, [thee.
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds: thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him,
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant.

Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him.—

[Exit Soothsayer.

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;
And in our sports my better cunning fails
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds;
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his "quails ever
Bent mine, in hoynd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,

Enter Ventidius.

I 'st the east my pleasure lies.—O! come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia: your commission's ready;
Follow me, and receive it.
[Exit.

---

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no farther: pray you, has Your generals after.

Ant.

Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at Mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about:
You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. Agr.

Sir, good success!

Lep. Farewell.
[Exit.

---

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, 'moody food
Of us that trade in love,

Iras.

Passed. The music, ho!

Enter Mardian.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards: come, Charman.

Iras.

My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.
Cleo. As well a woman with an encauld play'd,
As with a woman.—Come, you'll play with me, sir! Mar.
As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though 'tis
Come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I'll come now—
Give me mine angle,—we'll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Two-fynd'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws, and as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah, ha! you've caught.

---

4 "Yarlo frame," i. e., readily perform.—5 "Riggish."
"Twas merry, when
You wagger'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which ho
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time,—O times!—
I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drank him to his bed;
Then, put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore my sword Philippian.

Enter 1 Eliss, a Messenger.

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,
Cleo. Antony's dead!—
If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress:
But well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My blest veins to kiss; a hand, that kings
Here lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold.

But, sirrah, mark, we use
To say, the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt, and pour
Down thy illuttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.
Cleo. Well, go to, I will;
But there's no goodness in thy face. If Antony
Be free, and healthful, why so tart a favor
To trumpet such good tidings? if not well,
Thou shoul'dst come like a fury crown'd with snakes,
Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will't please you hear me?
Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou speak'st:
Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, 'tis well;
Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.
Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Caesar.
Cleo. Thou't an honest man.
Mess. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.
Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—
Cleo. I do not like "but yet," it does elway
The good precedent; fie upon it! but yet!
"But yet" is as a goaler to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together. He's friends with Caesar;
In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam? no; I made no such report.

Chari. For what good turn?
Cleo. For the best turn i' the bed.
Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.
Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee!

[Strike him down.

Mess. Good madam, patience.
Cleo. What say you?—Hence.

[Strike him again.

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me: I'll unhair thy head.

[She hates him up and down.

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stedd in brine,
Smarting in lingering pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam,
I, that do bring the news, made not the match.
Cleo. Say, 'tis not so, a province I will give thee,
And make thy fortunes proud:—the blow thou hastad
Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage;
And I will 'boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.
Cleo. Rogue! thou hast liv'd too long.

[Draws a Knife.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run—
What mean you, madam? I have made no fault.

[Exit.

Chari. Good madam, keep yourself within your
The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt—
Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents!—Call the slave again:
Though I am mad, I will not bite him.—Call.

Chari. He is afraid to come.
Cleo. I will not hurt him.—
These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.—Come hither, sir.

Re-enter 2 Eliss, the Messenger.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news: give to a gracious message
An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell
Themselves, when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worsen than I do,
If thou again say, Yes.

Mess. He's married, madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam?
Cleo. O! I would, thou didst,
So half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made
A cistern for scald snakes. Go, get thee hence:
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou would'st appear most ugly. He is married?
I crave your highness' pardon.

Cleo. He is married?
Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend you;
To punish me for what you make me seem
Much unequal. He is married to Octavia.
Cleo! O! that his fault should make a knife of thee,
[hence:
That art not! What! thou'rt sure of?—Get thee
The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome,
Are all too dear for me: lie they upon thy hand,
And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger.

Chari. Good your highness' patience.
Cleo. In praising Antony, I have disgrac'd Caesar.
Chari. Many times, madam.
Cleo. I am paid for'st now.

Lead me from hence;
I faint.—O Iras! Charmian!—'Tis no matter.
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
Report the 6 feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The color of her hair: bring me word quickly.

[Exit Alexas.

Let him for ever go?—let him not—Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,

"Book," I. e., recompense.—"Within yourself," I. e., within bounds. — "The feature," I. e., the form.
The other way he's a Mars.—Bid you Alexas.

[To Marcius.]

Bring me word, how tall she is.—Pit me, Charmian,
But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

1 Flourish. Enter Pompey and Menas, at one side, with Drum and Trumpet: at another, Caesar, Lepidus, Antony, Enobarbus, Mecenas, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight.

Men. Most meet,
That first we come to words; and therefore have we
Our written pursues before us sent,
Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods.—I do not know,
Wherefore my father should revenges want,
Having a son, and friends; since Julius Caesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus & ghosted,
There saw you laboring for him. What was it,
That mov'd pale Caius to conspire? And what
Made the all-honor'd, honest, Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, counters of beauteous freedom,
To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it
Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden
The ang'd ocean fonts; with which I meant
To scourge th' ingratitude that despicable Rome
Counts on my noble father.

Men. Take your time. [sails;
Ant. Thou canst not 'fear us, Pompey, with thy We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st
How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed,
Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house;
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
For this is from the present how you take
The offers we have sent you.

Men. There's the point.
Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
When it is worth embrac'd.

Pom. To try a larger fortune.

Men. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: this 'greed upon,
To part with unack'd edges, and bear back
Tarres' undinted.

Cas. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand.
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Men. Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not
When it counts harf fortune casts upon my face,
But in my bosom shall the never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed.
I crave, our composition may be written,
And seal'd between us.

Men. That's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other, ere we part; and let draw lots who shall begin. [us

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot; but, first
Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Caesar
Grew fat with feasting there.

Men. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then, so much have I heard:
And I have heard, Apollodoros carried—

Eno. No more of that:—he did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?
Eno. A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now: how far'st thou, soldier?
Eno. Well;
And well am I like to die; for, I perceive,
Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand:
I never hated thee. I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behavior.

Eno. Sir, I never lov'd you much; but I have praise'd you,
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plinnes,
It nothing ill becomes thee.—
Aboard my galley I invite you all:
Will you head, lords?

Pom. [Exeunt Pompey, Caesar, Antony, Lepidus,
Soldiers and Attendants.

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—[Aside.]—You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me;
though It cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes; something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

*x What counts;" i. e., what scores, marks.—b "Composition," i. e., agreement.—c "Have known," i. e., have been acquainted.
Men. All men's faces are true, whatso'ever their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey deth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Caesar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Caesar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too; but you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity. Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still persuasion.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again; then, shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is: he married but his occasion here.

Ant. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our threats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—On Board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter Two or Three Servants, with a *Banquet.

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-colored.

1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.

2 Serv. As they pitch one another by the disposition, he cries out, 'no more!' reconciles them to his countenance, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this is it to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partisan I could not have.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A Senet sounded. Enter Cæsar, Antony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Officers.

Ant. Thus do they, sir. [To Cæsar.] They take the flow o' the Nile

* A conversation, i. e. behavior.—*A banquet here is a reflection, a desert.—Plants, besides its common meaning, is used here for feet.—*By the disposition, i. e., in a certain place.—*The partisan was a weapon between a pike and a halberd.

By certain scales i' the pyramid: they know, By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if deart, Or foison, follow. The higher Nilus swells, The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seed-man Upon the slime and ooze scatter's his grain, And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred, now, of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine!—A health to Lepidus. Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept: I fear me, you'll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptolemies' pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside.] Say in mine ear: what's that?

Men. [Aside.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech you. And hear me speak a word. [thee, captain, Pom. [Aside.] Forbear me till anon.—

This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile? Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs; it lives by that which nourisheth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What color is it of?

Ant. Of its own color too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so; and the eyes of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [To Menas, aside.] Go, hung, sir, hang! Tell me of that? away! Do as I bid you. Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. [Aside.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt arise from thy stool, [hear me, Pom. [Aside.] I think, thou'rt mad. The matter?

[ Walks aside. Pom. Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes. Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. What's else to say?—

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus, Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?

That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, And though thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well? Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup. Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthy Jove: Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky discipis, Is thine, if thou wilt have't.

Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these ^competitors Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable; [tore, And, when we are put off, fall to their threats: All 4 then is thine.

Pom. Ah! this thou should'rt have done, * Foison, i. e. plenty; abundance.—* Inclips, i. e. encloses embraces.—* Competitors, i. e. confederates.
And not have spoke on't. In me, 'tis villainy; In thee, 'tis been good service. Thou must know, 'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honor, Mine honor, it. Repent, that e'er thy tongue Hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown, I should have found it afterwards well done, But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside.] For this, I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more. Who seeks, and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd, Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus.
Eno. Fill, till the cup be hid.
Men. There's a strong fellow, Menas.
[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off Lepidus.
Men. Why? Eno. He bears The third part of the world, man: see'st not? Men. The third part, thou, is drunk: would it That it might go on wheels! [were all, Eno. Drink thou; increase the b reels.
Men. Come. Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast. Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the vessels, ho! Here is to Cesar. Ces. Yes. I could well forbear it. It's monstrous labor, when I wash my brain, And it grows fouler.
Ant. Be a child o' the time.
Ces. 1 Profess it, I'll make answer; but I had rather fast From all four days, than drink so much in one. Eno. Ho, my brave emperor! [To Antony. Shall we dance now the Egyptian Baccham, And celebrate our drink?
Pom. Let's hast, good soldier.
Ant. Come, let us all take hands, Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense In soft and delicate Lothie.
Eno. All take hands.— Make battery to our ears with the loud music; The while I'll place you: then, the boy shall sing; The 4 holding every man shall bear, as loud As his strong sides can volley.
[Music plays. ENOBARBUS PLACES THEM HAND IN HAND.

SONG, 2 BY THE BOY.
Come, thou monarch of the vine, Plump!y Bacche, with pink 5 eye: In thy o'ats our cares be drown'd; With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd; Cup us, till the world go round; The bur- Cup us, till the world go round! § den. Ces. What would you more?—Pompey, good night.—Good brother, Let me request you off: our graver business Frowns at this levity.—Gentle lords, let's part; You see, we have burnt our cheeks. Strong Enobarbus Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good Good Antony, your hand.

[night.—

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.
Ant. And shall, sir. Give's your hand.
Pom. O, Antony! [friends. You have my father's house.—But what is we are Come down into the boat. Eno. Take heed you fall not.—

Eno. These drums!—These trumpets, flutes! what!—
Let Neptune hear, we bid a loud farewell To these great followes: sound, and be hang'd! sound out!

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter Ventidius, as it were in triumph, with Silius, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead Body of Pacorus borne before him. Ven. Now, daring Parthia, art thou struck; and now Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death Make me revenger.—Bear the king's son's body Before our army.—Thy Pacorus, 1 Orodes, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil. Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm, The fugitive Parthians follow: spar through Media, Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither The routed fly: so thy grand captain, Antony, Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head. Ven. O Silius, Silius! I have done enough: a lower place, note well, May make too great an act; for learn this, Silius, Better to leave undone, than by our deeds acquire Too high a fame, when him we serve's away. Cesar and Antony have ever won More in their officers, than person: Sossius, One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant, For quick accumulation of renown, Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favor. Who does it the wars more than his captain can, Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition, The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of less Than gain which darkens him. I could do more to do Antonius good, But 'twould offend him; and in his offence Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou last, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword, Gains scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony? Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name, That magical word of war, we have effect'd; How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks, The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out of the field.

Sil. Where is he now? Ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste The weight we must convey with us will permit, We shall appear before him.—On, there! pass along.

[Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa, and Enobarbus, meeting.

Agr. What! are the brothers parted? [gone; Eno. They have despatch'd with Pompey: he is

1 Pacorus was the son of Orodes, king of Parthia.
The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps.
To part from Rome; Caesar is sad; and Lepidus,
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.
Eno. A very fine one. O, how he loves Caesar!
Agr. Lord! but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!
Eno. Caesar? Why, he's the Jupiter of the nonpareil!
Eno. Speak ye of Caesar? How! the nonpareil!
Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!
Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say,—Caesar;—go no farther. [praises.
Agr. Indeed, but he ply'd them both with equal honours.
Eno. But he loves Caesar best;—yet he loves
Antony.
[Cannot hol! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets
Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, lo!
His love to Antony. But as for Caesar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves.
Eno. They are his bards, and he their beetle.
So,— [Trumpets sound.
This is to horse.—Adieu, noble Agrippa.
Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Ant. No further, sir.
Cas. You take me from a great part of myself;
Use me well in't.—Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my fairest hand
Shall pass on thy approbation.—Most noble Antony,
Let not the piece of virtue, which is set
Betwixt us as the cement of our love,
To keep it builded, be the ram to batter
The fortress of it; for better might we
Have loved without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.
Cas. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the least cause
For what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep you,
And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends.
We will here part.
Cas. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well:
The elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirits all of comfort: fare thee well.

Oct. My noble brother!—

Ant. The April's in her eyes; it is love's spring,
And these the showers to bring it on.—Be cheerful.
Oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—
Cas. What, Octavia?
Ant. I'll tell you in your ear.
Oct. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart inform her tongue; the swain's down feather,
That stands upon the swell at the full of tide,
And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Caesar weep? [Aside to Agrippa.
Agr. He has a cloud in his face.

Eno. He were the worse for that, were he a horse;
So is he, being a man.

Agr. Why, Enobarbus,
When Antony found Julius Caesar dead,
He cried almost to roaring; and he wept,
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain. [rheum;
Then, that year, indeed, he was troubled with a
What willingly he did confound, he wail'd:
Believe 't, till I weep too.

*The Arabian bird was the phoenix. — " His shores," i.e., his springs—thus found for bond. — " The piece of virtue," i.e., Octavia. — " Curious," i.e., scrupulous; particular. — " Confound," i.e., destroy.

Cas. Na, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still: the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.
Ant. Come, sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.
Cas. Adieu; be happy.
Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!
Cas. Farewell, farewell. [Kisses Octavia.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?
Alex. Half afear'd to come.
Cleo. Go to, go to.—Come hither, sir.

Enter 1 Eliz. the Messenger.

Alex. Good majeesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,
But when you are well pleas'd,

Cleo. That Herod's head
I'll have: but how, when Antony is gone, [near.
Through whom I might command it?—Come thou

Mess. Most gracious majeesty,— Didst thou behold
Octavia?
Mess. Ay, dread queen.
Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome
I look'd her in the face; and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.
Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tongued, or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak: she is low—
Cleo. That's not so good: he cannot like her long.
Char. Like her? O Isis! 'tis impossible.
Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps;
Her motion and her station are as one:
She shows a body rather than a life;
A statue, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt
Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing,
I do perceive't.—There's nothing in her yet.—
The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Guess at her years, I pr'ythee.

Mess. Madam,
She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow!—Charman, hark.

Mess. And I do think, she's thirty. [round?
Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long, or Mess. Round, even to faultlessness. [are so.
Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that
Her hair, what color?
Mess. Brown, madam; and her forehead
As low as you would wish it.

Cleo. There's gold for thee:

Cleo. Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.
I will employ thee back again: I find thee
Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready:

* Station here means the act of standing.
Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit Messenger.]

Chas. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repeat me much,
That so I hourly him. Why, methinks, by him,
This creature's so such thing.

Char. Nothing, madam. [know.

Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,
And serving you so long! [Charman:
Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good
But it is naught matter; thou shalt bring him to me
Where I will write. All may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you, madam. [Execut.

SCENE IV.—Athen. A Room in Antony's House.

Enter Antony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,—
That were excusable, that, and thousands more
Of semblable import,—but he hath wagg'd
New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it
To public ear:
Spoke softly of me: when perform he could not
But pay me terms of honor, cold and sickly
He vented them: most narrow measure lent me.
When the best hint was given him, he 'but look'd,
Or did it from his 'teeth.

Oct. O, my good lord!
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, nor'er stood between,
Praying for both parts.

The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, "O, bless my lord and husband"—
Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
"O, bless my brother!" Husband win, win brother,
Frays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. So, Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honor,
I lose myself: better I were not yours,
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,
Yourself shall go between us: the mean time, lady,
I'll raise the preparation of a war
Shall 'stay your brother. Make your soonest haste:
So, your desires are yours.

Oct. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler: Wars 'twixt you twain would be,
As if the world should cleave, and slain men
Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going;
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. [Execut.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eros. How now, friend Eros?

Eno. There is strange news come, sir.

Eros. What, man?

Eno. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon

Pompey.

Eros. This is old; what is the 'success?

Eros, Caesar, having made use of him in the wars
'gainst Pompey, presently denied him, rivalry, would not let him partake in the glory of the action;
and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own 'appeal, seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no

And throw between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grind each other. Where is Antony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spars

The rush that lies before him; cries, "Fool, Lepidus!"
And threats the throat of that his officer,
That murder'd Pompey.

Eros. Our great navy's rigg'd, Eros.

For Italy, and Caesar. More, Domitius;
My lord desires you presently: my news
I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'Twill be naught;
But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in Caesar's House.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, and Mezentius.

Cas. Condemning Rome, he has done all this,

and more,

In Alexandria: here's the manner of it.
I the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cheoptra and himself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthron'd: at their feet sat
Cassatio, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issue, that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her
He gave the 'stablishment of Egypt; made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydian, And Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye? [ercise.

Cas. I the common show-place, where they ex-
His sons he there procl'm'd the kings of kings:
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia,
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd
Syria, Cilicia, and Phoenicia. She
In the 'blishments of the goddess Asia
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome he thus

Inform'd.

Agr. Who, 'quesy with his insolence
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Ces. The people know it; and have now receiv'd
His accusations.

Agr. Whom does he accuse? Caesar.

Ces. Caesar; and that, having in Sicily
Sexus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not 'rated him
His part o' the isle: then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping unrestrict'd; lastly, he frets,
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Ces. 'Tis done already, and a messenger gone.
I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;
That he his high authority abus'd, [quer'd,
And did deserve his change: for what have I con-
I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia,

"What is the success?" i.e., what follows? "Of him,"
i.e., of Lepidus.—"Rivalry," i.e., equal rank.—"Appeal" here signifies accusation.—"Quesy," i.e., sick;
disgusted.—"Reted," i.e., assigned.
And other of his conquer’d kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He’ll never yield to that.

Cas. Nor must not then, be yielded to in this.

Enter Octavia, with her Train.

Oct. Hall, Caesar, and my lord! hail, most dear Caesar!

Cas. That ever I should call thee cast-away!

Oct. You have not call’d me so, nor have you cause.

Cas. Why have you stol’n upon us thus? You come not Like Caesar’s sister: the wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and The neighs of horse to tell of his approach, Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way, Should have borne men, and expectation fainted, Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rain’d by your populous troops. But you are come A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented The fruition of our love, with which we unknown Is often held unkind’d: we should have met you By sea and land, supplying every stage With an augmented greeting.

Oct. Good my lord,

To come thus was I not constrain’d, but did it
Of my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepare’d for war, acquainted My grieved ear withal; whereon, I beg’d
His pardon for return.

Cas. Which soon he granted,

Being an obstruct ‘tween his lust and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Cas. I have eyes upon him, And his affairs come to me on the wind. Where is he now?

Cas. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her: he hath given his empire Up to a whore: they now are leveling The kings o’ the earth for war. He hath assembled Bocchus, the king of Lybia; Anchselus, Of Cappadocia; Philadelphia’s king, Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adalass: King Mithridates of Attica; king of Pont; Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king of Commagene; Seleucus, and Lycaonia, With a more larger list of sCEPTUkers.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched, That have my heart parted betwixt two friends, That do afflict each other!

Cas. Welcome hither. Your letters did withhold our breaking forth, Till we perceiv’d, both how you were ‘twrong’d, And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart: He ye not troubled with the time, which drives O’er your content these strong necessitates; But let determin’d things to destiny Hold unweigh’d their way. Welcome to Rome; Nothing more dear to me. You are aboard Beyond the mark of thought; and the high gods, To do you justice, make th’his ministers Of all the swords that love you. Best of comfort; And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam. Each heart in Rome does love and pity you: Only the adulterous Antony, most large In his abominations, turns you off, And gives his potent regiment to a trull, That noise it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir?

Cas. Most certain. Sister, welcome: pray you, Be ever known to patience. My dear sister’s! [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Antony’s Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Euphorbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast ‘praised my being in these wars, And say’st, it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it? [we

Cleo. If not denounce’d against us, why should not Be there in person.

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:—

If we should serve with horse and mares together, The horse were ‘merely lost; the mares would bear A soldier, and his horse.

Cleo. What is’t you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony; Take from his heart, take from his brain, from’s time, What should not then be spar’d. He is already Traduc’d for levity; and ’tis said in Rome, That Phœthius an eunuch, and your maids, Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot, That speak against us! A charge we bear! the war, And as the president of my kingdom will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it; I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done.

Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Cædidius.

Ant. I’st not strange, Cædidius, That from Tarentum, and Brundisium, He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea, And take him in Teryne?—You have heard on’t, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir’d, Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke, Which might have well become the best of men, To mount at slackness.—Cædidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! what else?

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For that he dares us to.

Eno. So hath my lord da’rd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Caesar fought with Pompey; but these offers, Which serve not for his vantage, lie shocks off, And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann’d; Your mariners are ‘mulitlers, repeaters, people Ingross’d by swift impress: in Caesar’s fleet Are those, that often have ’gainst Pompey fought. Their ships are ‘yare, yours, heavy: no disgrace Shall fill you for refusing him at sea, Being prepar’d for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away The absolute soldiership you have by land; Distract your army, which doth most consist Of war-mark’d footmen; leave unexecuted

*"Regiment," i. e., government, — "A trull," i. e., a harlot.—""Forpoke," i. e., spoken against.—"Merely," i. e., absolutely.—"Take in," i. e., take; subjunct.—"For that," i. e., because.—"Mulitlers," i. e.,ingross’d by swift im- press," i. e., pressed in haste,—"Yare," i. e., quick; nim- ble; ready.
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance, and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security:—
I'll fight at sea.
Ant. I have sixty 2 sails, Caesar none better.
Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn,
And with the rest, full-man'd, from the head of
Act
Beat th' approaching Caesar: but if we fail,
' Enter a Messenger.
We then can do't at land.—Thy business?
Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;
Cesar has taken Tuyrne.
Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;
Strange, that his power should 3 be.—Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse: we'll to our ship.
' Enter a Soldier.
Away, my 'Thesis!—How now, worthy soldier!
Sold. O, noble emperor! do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks. Do you mistrust
This sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyp-
And the Phenicians, go a ducking; we [tians,
Have used to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.
Ant. Well, well.—Away! [Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.
Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i the right.
Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows
Not in the power on't: so our leader's led,
And we are women's men.
Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?
Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justecius,
Pubicola, and Caliux, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's
Carries beyond belief.
Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions, as Begi'd all spies.
Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?
Sold. They say, one Taurus.
Can. Well I know the man.
' Enter a Messenger.
Mess. The emperor calls Canidius. [forth
Can. With news the time's with labor; and throws
Each minute some. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter Cæsar, Taurus, Officers, and others.

Can. Taurus! Taur. My lord. Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole:
Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescrip of this scroll:

3 [Giving it. [Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond' side o' the hill,
In eye of Caesar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

Enter Canidius, marching with his Land Army one Way over the Stage; and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, the other Way. After their going in is heard the Noise of a Sea-Fight.

Alarum. Re-enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold
The Antimuid, the Egyptian admiral, no longer.
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder:
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods, and goddesses, All the whole synod of them!
Eno. What's thy passion? Scar. The greater 2 can'tle of the world is lost
With very ignorance: we have kis'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.
Eno. How appears the fight? Scar. On our side like the 3 token'd pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yond' ribald 2 bag of Egypt,
Whom leprosy o'ertake! 'tis the midst o' the fight,—
When vantage, like a pair of twins, appear'd
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder;

4 The brize upon like a cow in June,
Holists sails, and flies.
Eno. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did sinken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being 6 loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Clups on his sea-wing, and like a doting mallard,
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her.
I never saw an action of such shame:
Experience, manhood, honor, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.
Eno. Alack, alack! ['Enter Canidius.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O! he has given example for our fight,
Most grossly, by his own, [night
Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why then, good Indians.'
Can. Towards Peloponnese are they fled.
Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What farther comes.
Can. To Caesar will I render
My legions, and my horse: six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.
Eno. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandrine. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon't;
It is unsh'md to bear me.—Friends, come hither,
I am so 4 lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever.—I have a ship
 Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Cæsar.

Att. Fly! not we.
Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cow-
To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolvd upon a course,
Which has no need of you; be gone;

2 The Antimuid was the name of Cleopatra's ship.
3 'Can'tle.' i. e., portion;— 'Token'd.' i. e., spotted.
4 'Carries.' i. e., gone. — 'Distractions,' i. e., detachments; separate bodies.— 'This jump,' i. e., this hazard.
1 'Sails,' i. e., ships:—'That his power should be,' i. e., that his forces should be there.— 'Thesis,' i. e., Cleopatra.—
SCENE XI. ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

My treasure's in the harbor, take it.—O!
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone: you shall Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray, you look not sad,
Nor make replies of bathe's: take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left.
Which leaves itself: to the sea side straightway:
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little; 'pray you now:
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost* command,
Therefore, I pray you. I'll see you by and by.

[Silent.]

Enter Eros, and Cleopatra, led by Charmian, and Iras.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him; comfort him.
Iras. Do, most dear queen.
Char. Do! Why, what else?
Cleo. Let me sit down.—O June!
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, sir!
Ant. O sir, fie, fie, fie!
Char. Madam,—
Iras. Madam: O good empress!—
Eros. Sir, sir.
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes—He, at Philippi, kept
His sword e'en like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt out lieutenant, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war; yet now—No matter.
Cleo. Ah! stand by.
Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen, Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him:
He is 4 unqualified with very shame.
Cleo. Well then,—sustain me:—O!
Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches:
Her head's decline'd, and death will seize her; *but
Your comfort makes the rescue.
Ant. I have offended reputation
By most unworthy swelling.
Eros. Sir, the queen.
Ant. O! whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes,
By looking back *what I have left behind
' Strood ' in dishonor.
Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful assias: I little thought,
You would have follow'd.
Ant. Egypt, thou know'st too well,
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after: o'er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou know'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.
Cleo. O, my pardon!
Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And pulter in the shifts of lowness, who
With half the bulk of the world play'd as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring fortunes. You did know,
How much you were my conqueror; and that
My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obe it on all cause.
Cleo. Pardon, pardon!
Ant. Fall not a tear, I say: one of them rates

All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me,—We sent our schoolmaster;
Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead.—
Some wine, within there, and our viands!—Fortune knows,
We scorn her most when most she offers blows.
[Exeunt.

SCENE X.—Cesar's Camp in Egypt.

Enter Cesar, Dolabella, Thyreus, and others.

Ces. Let him appear that comes from Antony.—
Know you him?
Dol. Cesar, 'tis his & schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck'd, when either
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
Not many moons gone by.

Enter Euphronius.

Ces. Approach, and speak.
Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Ces. Be it so. Declare thine office.
Eup. Lord of his fortunes he solace thee, and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessees his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The 'circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Ces. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience, nor desire, shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced & friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee.

Ces. Bring him through the bands.
[Exeunt Euphronius.

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time; despatch.
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,
[To Thyreus.

And in our name, what she requires: add more,
From thine invention, offers. Women are not
In their best fortunes strong, but want will peril
The no'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Cesar, I go.

Ces. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Cesar, I shall. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?
En. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?
En. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges

* "His schoolmaster," I. e., Euphronius, schoolmaster to Antony's children.— * His for its.— * "The cirche," I. e., the diadem; the crown.— * Friend here means paramour.— * "Becomes his flaw," I. e., conforms himself to this breach in his fortune.
Frighted each other, why should he follow?

The itch of his affecion should not then

Have *nick*d his captainship; at such a point,

When half to half the world oppos'd, he being

The mooted question. 'Twas a shame, no less

Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,

And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo.

Pr'ythee, peace.

Enter Antony, with Euphronius.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Emp. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy, so she

Will yield us up.

Emp. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—

To the boy Caesar send this griev'd head,

And he will fill thy wishes to the brim

With principalities.

Cleo.

That head, my lord!

Ant. To him again. Tell him, he wears the rose

Of youth upon him, from which the world should note

Something particular: his coin, ships, legions,

May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail

Under the service of a child, as soon

As i' the command of Caesar: I dare him, therefore,

To lay his gay comparisons apart,

And answer me declin'd; sword against sword,

Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

[Exit Antony and Euphronius.

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will

Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd i' the show

Against a sworder.—I see, men's judgments are

A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward

Do draw the inward qualities after them,

To suffer all alike. That he should dream,

Knowing all miseries, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness!—Caesar, thou hast subdued

His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att.

A messenger from Caesar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony!—See, my women!—

Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,

That kneel'd unto the bud.—Admit him, sir.

Eno. Mine honesty and I begin to square. [Aside.

The loyalty well held to fools does make

Our faith mere folly: yet he, that can endure

To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,

Does conquer him that did his master conquer,

And earns a place i' the story.

Enter Thyreus.

Thyr. Caesar's will?

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has,

Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master

Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know,

Whose he is, we are, and that's Caesar's.

Thyr. So.—

Then, thou most renowned: Caesar entreats,

Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,

Farther than he is Caesar.

Cleo.

Go on: right royal.

Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony

As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honor, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,

Not as deserv'd.

Cleo.

He is a god, and knows

What is most right. Mine honor was not yielded,

But conquer'd merely.

Eno. [Aside.] To be sure of that,

I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky,

That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for

Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit Enobarbus.

Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar

What you require of him? for he partly begs

To be desir'd to give. It much would please him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff

To lean upon; but it would warm his spirits,

To hear from me you had left Antony,

And put yourself under his shroud, who is

The universal landlord.

Cleo.

What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,

Say to great Caesar,

I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt

To lay my crown at a's feet, and there to kneel:

Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear

The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. *Tis your noblest course.

Wisdom and fortune combating together,

If thou at death, or what but what it can,

No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay

My duty on your hand.

Cleo.

Your Caesar's father oft,

When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,

Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,

As it ru'd kisses.

[Thyr. kisses her Hand.

Re-enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant.

Favors, by Jove that thunders!—

What art thou, follow?

Thyr. One, that but performs

The bidding of the fullest man, and worthless

To have command ob'yd.'

Eno. You will be whipp'd.

Ant. Approach, there.—Ah, you kite!—Now gods and devils!

Authority melts from me: of late, when I cry'd, "he!"

Like boys unto a mass, kings would start forth,

And cry, "Your will?" Have you no ears? I am

Enter Attendants.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.

Eno. "Tis better playing with a lion's whelp,

Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!

Whip him.—Were twenty of the greatest tributaries

That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them

So saucy with the hand of—she here, what's her name,

Since she was Cleopatra?—Whip him, fellows,

Till, like a boy, you see him crie his face,

And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony.—

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd,

Bring him again.—The Jack of Caesar shall Bear us an erand to him.—

[Exeunt Attends., with Thyreus.

You were half binsted ere I knew you! ha!

Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,

Forbidding the getting of a lawful race

And by a gem of women, to be abus'd

A" "In deputation," i. e., by deputy.—Alloboging for all-

*oblayed." —*Give me grace," i. e., grant me the favor.

*of taking kingdoms in," i. e., of conquering kingdoms.

"The fullest," i. e., the most complete and perfect.

*A muse," i. e., a scribble.—"This Jack," a term of contempt. —"Since she was," i. e., since she ceased to be.

"And answer me declin'd; i. e., and answer me in the decline of my age and power. —"Stag'd i' the show," i. e., exhibited to the public ear.—"A parcel of," i. e., of a piece with.—"To square," i. e., to quarrel.

Antony."
By one that looks on feeders?
Ant. You have been a boggler ever:
But when we in our viciousness grow hard,
(O misery on't) the wise gods see our eyes,
In our own fib drop our clear judgments; make us
Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut
To the confusion.
Cleo. O! is it come to this?
Ant. I found you as a morse, cold upon
Dead Caesar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment
Of Cæcious Pompey's; besides what hotter hours,
Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd; for, I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.
Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards,
And say, "God quit you!" be familiar with
My phylleflow, your hand; 1 that knigly seal,
And plighter of high hearts—O! that I were
Upon the hill of Basan, to outworn
The horned herd, for I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly were like
A halter'd neck, which does the langman thank
For being 2 yare about him.

2 Re-enter Attendants, with Thyrus.

Is he whipp'd?
1 Att. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. Cry'd he? and begg'd he pardon?
1 Att. He did ask favor.
Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou must not make his daughter: and be thou sorry
To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since
forth,
Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: hence-
The white hand of a lady fever thee;
Shake 2 but to look out. Get thee back to Cæsar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look, thou say,
He makes me angry with him; for he seems
Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easy 'tis to do,
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
My speech, and what is done, tell him, he has Hipparchus, my entranch'd bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to 3 quit me. Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes! begone! [Exit Thyrus.
Cleo. Have you done yet?
Ant. Abash! our terrene moon
Is now eclips'd, and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.
Cleo. I must stay his time.
Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his 3 points? 1
Cleo. Not know me yet.
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo. Ah, dear! if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven rain tender love,
And when I see in the source, and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it 4 determines, so
Disolve my life! The next Cæsurian smite,
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptian s.

1 "On feeders," l. e. on menials.—2 "Seal," l. e. close up.—3 "Luxuriously," l. e. wantonly.—4 "Yare," l. e. ready; ready.—5 To quit me, l. e. to require me; to repay me this insult.—6 "Terrene," i. e. earthly.—7 "One that ties his points," l. e. a mortal attendant.—8 "Determines," i. e. disapproves.—The next Cassarian, l. e. Cleopatra's son by Julius Caesar.

By the b discrediting of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!
Ant. I am satisfied
Cæsar sits down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our seer'd navy, too,
Have knit again, 2 to fleet threatening most unsafe.
Where hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou hear,
If from the field I shall return once more
Lady? To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
And my sword will earn our chronicle:
There's hope in't yet.
Cleo. That's my brave lord!
Ant. I will be treble-sin'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were 'nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now, I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come,
Let's have one other 4 candy night. —Call to me
All my sad captains: fill our bowls; once more
Let's mock the midnight bell.
Cleo. It is my birthday:
I had thought to have held it poor; but since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.
Ant. We will yet do well.
Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Ant. Do so; we'll speak to them; and to-night
I'll force
Queen;
The wine pipe through their scars.—Come on, my There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me, for I will contend
Even with his pestilent syche.
[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Attendants.

Eno. Now he'll outstate the lightning. To be further
Is to be frighted out of fear; and in that mood,
The dove will peck the 4 estridge: and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart. When valor preys on reason,
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Cæsar's Camp at Alexandria.

Enter Cæsar, reading a Letter; Agrrippa, Mecenas, and others.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and clads, as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger 1 combat,
He hath whipp'd with rods, dares me to personal
Cæsar to Antony; let the old ruffian know,
I have many other ways to die; mean time,
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's lanted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make 2 boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight. Within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done;
And feast the army: we have stor to do;
And they have earn'd the waste.—Poor Antony!
[Exeunt.

1 "The discrediting," l. e. the antithetic.—2 "Nice," l. e. soft; tender; wan.—3 "Gaudy," l. e. gaudy; festively.—4 "The estridge," l. e. the estridge falcon.—5 "Make boot," l. e. take advantage.
SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Eosbarbus, Chramian, Iris, Aelas, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius?

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not? [tune,

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better for-

He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,

By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,

Or bathe my dying honor in the blood

Shall make it live again. Won't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike; and cry, "Take all!"

Ant. Well said; come on.—

Call forth my household servants: let's to-night

Enter Servants.

Be bounteous at our meal.—Give me thy hand,

Thou hast been rightly honest: —so hast thou;

Thou,—and thou,—and thou:—you have serv'd me

And kings have been your fellows. [well,

Cleo. What means this?

Eno. 'Tis one of those odd tricks, which sorrow

Out of the mind. [shoots

Ant. And thou art honest too.

I wish I could be made so many men,

And all of you clapp'd up together in

An Antony, that I might do you service,

So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night;

Scant not my cups, and make as much of me,

As when mine empire was your fellow so;

And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. What does he mean?

Eno. To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night;

May be, it is the period of your duty:

Hapy, you shall not see me more; or if,

A mangled shadow: perchance, to-morrow

You'll serve another master. I look on you,

As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,

I turn you not away; but, like a master

Married to your good service, stand till death.

Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,

And the gods 'yield you for!'

Eno. What means this, sir,

To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep;

And I, an ass, am onion-cyd' for shame,

Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!

Now, the witch takes me, if I meant it thus.

Grace grow where those drops fall! My heart

You take me in too dolorous a sense, [friends,

For I spake to you for your comfort; did desire you

To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you,

Where rather I'll expect victorious life,

Than death and honor. Let's to supper; come,

And drown consideration. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Palace.
Enter Two Soldiers, to their Guard.

1 Sold. Brother, good night; to-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

2 Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumor. Good night to 1 Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter Two other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you. Good night, good night.

[The first Two place themselves at their Posts.

4 Sold. Here we: [They take their Posts.] and if

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope

Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,

And full of purpose.

[Music of Harbours under the Stage.

4 Sold. Peace! what noise?

1 Sold. List. list!

2 Sold. Hawk!

1 Sold. Music! the sir.

3 Sold. Under the earth.

4 Sold. It signifies, does it not?

3 Sold. No.

1 Sold. Peace! I say. What should this mean?

2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, [who Antony lov'd, Now leaves him.

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen

Do hear what we do. [They advance to another Post.

2 Sold. How now, masters!

3 Omen. How now!

How now! do you hear this? [Speaking together

1 Sold. Ay; I'st not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters! do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how it will give off.

3 Omen. Content: 'Tis strange. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Antony, and Cleopatra; Chramian, and others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armor, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armor, Eros!

Enter Eros, with Armor.

Come, good fellow, put 'mine iron on:—

If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her.—Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.

What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thon art

The armorer of my heart! —False, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la! I'll help.

Ant. Tho' thus it must be. Well, well;

We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow? Go, put on thy defences.

Eros. *Briefly, sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely.

He that unbolts this, till we do please

To doff it for our repose, shall have a storm.—

Thon fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a spite

More tight at this, than thou. Despatch.—O, love!

That thon couldst see my wars to-day, and know'st

The royal occupation! thon shouldst see

Enter an armed Soldier.

A workman in.—Good morrow to thee; welcome:

Thon look'st like him that knows a warlike charge.

To business that we love we rise betime,

And go to' with delight.

10 Sold. A thousand, sir, Early though't be, have on their riveted trim,

And at the port expect you. [Shout. Trumpets flourish.

11 "Take all," i.e., let the survivor take all; no composition; victory or death. — "A mangled shadow," i.e., scarce the shadow of what I was. — "Yield you," i.e., reward you.
Enter Captains, and Soldiers.

Who's the morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.
All. Good morrow, general.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.—So so; come, give me that: this way; well said.

Fare thee well, dame: whate'er becomes of me,
This is a soldier's kiss. Ridiculous, [Kisses her. And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more meekish compliment: I'll leave thee
Now, like a man of steel.—You, that will fight,
Follow me close; I'll bring you 'tis.—Adieu.

[Exeunt Antony, Eros, Officers, and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me. He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight!
Then, Antony,—but now,—well, on. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antony's Camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony! Ant. Would thou, and those thy scars, had once prevail'd
To make me fight at hand!

Sold. Hadst thou done so, the kings that have revolted, and the soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels. Ant. Who's gone this morning?

He shall not hear thee; or from Caesar's camp
Say, 'I am none of thine.'

Ant. What say'st thou?

Sold. Sir, he is with Caesar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him. Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it:
Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to him
(I will subscribe) gentle adieux, and greetings:
Say, that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master.—O! my fortunes have Corrupted honest men:—despatch.—Enobarbus! [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Caesar's Camp before Alexandria.

Flourish. Enter Caesar, with Agrippa, Enobarbus, and others.

Caes. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight.
Our will is, Antony be took alive;
Make it so known.

Agri. Caesar, I shall. [Exit Agrippa.

Caes. The time of universal peace is near:
Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd world
Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony

Is come into the field.

Caes. Go; charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the van,
That Antony may seem to spend his fury
Upon himself. [3 Exeunt all but Enobarbus.

Eno. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jeryn on Affairs of Antony; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar,

And leave his master Antony: for this pains
Cesar hath hang'd him:—Caius, and the rest
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honorable trust. I have done ill,
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Caesar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus:—the messenger
Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now
Unlooding of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus. I tell you true: best you safe'd the bringer
Out of the host; I must attend mine office,
Or would have done't myself. Your emperor
Continues still a Jove.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most.—O Antony! Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid
My better service, when my turpitude
Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart:
If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do't, I feel,
I fight against thee?—No: I will go seek
Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and Trumpets. Enter Agrippa, and others.

Agr. Retire; we have engag'd ourselves too far.
Caesar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Antony, and Scærus wounded.

Scær. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had driven them home
With clouts about their heads. [Skafts off.

Ant. Thou blest'st space. Scær. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire. Scær. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes. I have yet
Room for six or seven scotches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage
For a fair victory. [serves

Scær. Let us score their backs, and snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind:
'Tis sport to man a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valor. Come thee on.

Scær. I'll halt after. [Exeunt

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter Antony, marching; Scærus, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before,
And let the queen know of our gists.—To-morrow,
Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
That hath to-day escap'd. I thank you all,

* * * "Saf'd," i. e., made safe.—"Blows," i. e., swells.—* Our oppression, i. e., the force by which we are oppressed, or overpowered.—* Scotches," i. e., cuts.—* Our gists," i. e., our deeds, achievements.
For doughty-handed are you; and have fought
Not as you serv’d the cause, but as it had been
Each man’s, like mine: you have shown all Hectors.
Enter the city, clap your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
The honor’d gashes whole.—Give me thy hand:—

Enter Cleopatra attended.

To this great fairy I’ll commend thy acts; world! Make her thanks bless thee.—O, thou day o’ the Chain mine arm’d neck; leap thou, attire and all,
Through the rays of slumber to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue! com’st thou smiling from
The world’s great snake uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! though we have
Do something mingle with our younger brown; yet
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;

Pointing to Scarus.

Commend unto his lips thy favoring hand:—
Kiss it, my warrior:—he hath fought to-day,
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy’d in such a shape.

Cleo. I’ll give thee, friend,
An armor all of gold; it was a king’s.

Ant. He has deserv’d it, were it carbuncled
Like ‘growing Phæbus’ ear.—Give me thy hand:
Through Alexandria make a jolly march;
Bear our lack’d targets like the men that s owe them.
Had our great palace the capacity to camp this host, we all would jump together,
And drink carouses to the next day’s fate,
Which promises royal peril.—Trumpeters,
With brazen dir & blast you the city’s ear;
Make mingle with our rattling taborines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds to-gether,
Approving our approach.

Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Caesar’s Camp.

Sentinels on their Post. Enter Enobarbus.

1 Sold. If we be not reliev’d within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard. The night
Is shiny, and, they say, we shall embattle
By the second hour i’ the morn.

2 Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to us.

Eno. O! bear me witness, night,—
3 Sold. What man is this?

2 Sold. Stand close, and list him.

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon!
When we revolu’d shall upon record
Bear halest memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face report.—

1 Sold. Enobarbus!

3 Sold. Peace! Hark farther.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy!
The poisonous dump of night & dispoze upon me,

That life, a very rebel to my will,

May hang no longer on me: throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault,
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts, O Antony!

Nobler than my revolt is inauspicious,
Forgotten me in thine own particular,
But let the world make me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive.

O Antony! O Antony! —

2 Sold. Let’s speak to him. I Sold. Let’s hear him; for the things he speaks
May concern Caesar.

3 Sold. Let’s do so. But he sleeps.

1 Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet aforesleep.

2 Sold. Go we to him.

3 Sold. Awake, sir! awake! speak to us.

2 Sold. Hear you, sir?

1 Sold. The hand of death hath touch’d him. Hark! the drums

Do earnd the sleepy slumber. Let us bear him
To the court of guard; he is of note. Our hour
Is fully out. 3 Sold. Come on, then;
He may recover yet. — Exeunt, with the body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter Antony and Scarus, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea:
We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would, they’d fight i’ the fire, or i’ the air;
We’d fight there too. But this it is: our foot
Upon the hills adjoin’d to the city
Shall stay with us (order for sea is given,
They have put forth the haven,
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavor. — Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, and his Forces, marching.

Ces. But being charg’d, we will be still by land,
Which, as I take’t, we shall; for his best force
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage! — Exeunt.

Re-enter Antony and Scarus.

Ant. Yet they are not join’d. Where yond’ pine does stand,
I shall discover all: I’ll bring thee word
Straight, how ’tis like to go. — Exeunt.
Scar. Swallows have build’d
In Cleopatra’s sail their nests: the augurers
Say, they know not,—they cannot tell;—look grimly
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant, and dejected; and by starts
His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

[Aurum afar off, as at a Sea-Fight.
Re-enter Antony.

Ant. All is lost!

This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My fleet hath yield’d to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together (thou
Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn’d whore! ’tis
Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng’d upon my charn,
SCENE XII.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

I have done all.—Bid them all fly; be gone.

Enter Eros.

O sun! thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands.—All come to this!—The hearts
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Caesar; and this pine is bark'd,
That evetop'd them all. Betray'd I am,
O this false 'spell of Egypt! this great charm,—
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home;
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at b fast and loose,
Beguiled me to the very heart of loss.—
What, Eros! Eros!

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou spell! Avant!—
Cleo. Why is my lord encour'd against his love?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, for doits; and let Patient Octavia plough thy vantage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleo.]

If it be well to live; but better 'twere
Thou fell'st under my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho!—
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me,
Achilles, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me ledge Lichas on the horn of the moon;
And with these hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die:
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for't.—Eros, ho! [Exit.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Eros, and Mardian.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O! he is more mad
Than Tamon for his shield; the bror of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.

Char. To the monument! There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.
The soul and body rive not more in parting,
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument!—Mardian, go tell him I have shin myself;
Sny, that the last I spoke was, Antony,
And word it, pr'th'ere, pitiously. Hence,
Mardian, and bring me how he takes my death.—
To the monument! [Exeunt.

SCENE XII.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me.

Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometime, we see a cloud that's dragonish,
A vapor, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world, [signs;
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these

"My crownet," i. e., the crown of my endeavor.
"Fast and loose," a juggling game, practiced by the gipsies, now called playing at the bolt.—"Poor'st diminutives," i. e., for the smallest piece of money.—"Lichas, the boy that brought the poisoned shirt to Hercules."—"Embosh'd," i. e., foaming at the mouth.

They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That, which is now a horse, even with thought,
The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

Ant. My good k-nave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony.
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my k-nave,
I made these wars for Egypt, and the queen,
Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had mine,
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto
A million more, now lost: she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar's, and false play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph,—
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.—O, thy vile lady!

Enter Mardian.

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony;—
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy emuch! peace!—

Mar. She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Ant. Death of one person can be paid but once,
And that she has discharg'd it. What thou wouldst do,
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!
Then, in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips. She render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead, then?—Dead.

Mar. Unarm me, Eros: the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep.—That thou depart'st hence safe,
Does pay thy labor richly; go. [Exit Mardian.

Off, pack off:—
The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!
Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace.—
No more a soldier: bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne.—From me a while.—

Enter Eros.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and
Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture: since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no farther. Now all labor
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: soul then, and all is done.—
Eros! I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for me:
Where souls do cough on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly post make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the lantus be ours.—Come, Eros! Eros!

Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died
I have liv'd in such dishonor, that the gods
Detest my baseness, I, that with my sword
Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman more noble and mind'd
Than she, which by her death our Cesar tells,

"The rack dislimns," i. e., the fleeting clouds destroy the picture. —"K-nave was familiarly used for servant.—
"From," i. e., proceeding from. —"True continent," i. e., the thing that contains thee.—"All lengthly," i. e., all length or extension of life.
"I am conqueror of myself;" Thou art sworn, Eros, That when the exigent should come, (which now Is come indeed) when I should see behind me The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that on my command Thou then would'st kill me; do't; the time is come. Thou strik't not me, 'tis Caesar thou dost cheat. But color is thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me! Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts, Though enemy, lost aim, and could not? Ant. Eros, Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome, and see Thy master thus with pimpled'd arms, bending down His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd To penetrative shame; whilst the wheel'd I Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded His baseness that ensu'd?

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cur'd. Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir! pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once, Or thy precedent services are all But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come. Eros. Turn from me, then, that noble countenance, Wherein the worship of the whole world lies. Ant. Lo thee! (Turning his face from him.)

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then, let it do at once The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master, My captain, and my emperor, let me say, Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell. Ant. 'Tis said; man; and farewell. Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now? Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then.—[Falls on his Sword.]

Thus do I escape the sorrow Of Antony's death.

[Dies.]

Ant. Thrice nobler than myself! Thou teachest me, O victual Eros! what I should, and thou could'st not. My queen and Eros Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me A nobleness in record: but I will be A bridegroom in my death, and run into't As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar: to thus:

[Falling on his Sword.]

I learn'd of thee.—How! not dead! not dead!— The guard!—how?—O, dispatch me! Enter Dercetas and Guard.

Guard. What's the noise?

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O! make Of what I have begun. [an end Guard. The star is fallen. 1 Guard. And time is at his period. All. Alas, and woe! Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

2 Guard. Not I.

3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exeunt Guard. Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly. This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings, Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diodenes.

Dio. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diodem; there.

Dio. Lives he?

Dio. Most absolute lord, My mistress, Cleopatra, sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear Of what hath come to pass: for when she saw (Which never shall be found) you did suspect She had compos'd with Caesar, and that your rage Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead, But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come, I dread, too late.

[pr'ythee. Ant. Too late, good Diodem. Call my guard, I Diod. What, at the emperor's guard! The guard, Come; your lord calls. [what, ho!

Enter some of the Guard.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;
'Tis the last service that I shall commend you. 1 Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live All your true followers out. [to wear All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my followers, do not please sharp To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome Which comes to punish us, and we punish it, Scieving to bear it lightly. Take me up: I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends, And have my thanks for all. [Exeunt, bearing Antony.

SCENE XIII.—The Same. A Monument.

Enter, above, Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. O Charmian! I will never go from hence. Charm. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not. All strange and terrible events are welcome, But comforts we despise: our size of sorrow, Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great Enter, below, Diodenes.

As that which makes it.—How now! is he dead? Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead. Look out o' the other side your monument, His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, Antony, borne by the Guard.

Ant. Peace! Not Caesar's valor hath o'erthrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself. Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only I have importune death a while, until

"Compas'd," 1 c., arranged; agreed.

—Penetrative for penetrating,—"His baseness that ensu'd," l. c., the baseness of him that followed,—"The worship," l. c., the dignity; the honor.
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.—

I dare not, dear,
(Dear my lord, pardon) I dare not,
Least I be taken: not the imperious show
Of the full-fortun’d Caesar ever shall Be brooch’d with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe.
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And stiff condition, shall acquire no honor
De-marrying upon me.—But come, come, Antony,—
Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up.—
Assist, good friends.

Ant. O! quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here’s a port, indeed!—How heavy weighs
Our strength is all gone into heaviness, [my lord]
That makes me die; had I great Juno’s power,
The strong-wing’d Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove’s side. Yet come a little:—
Wishers were ever fools.—O! come, come, come;
[They draw Antony up.
And welcome, welcome! die, where thou hast liv’d;
Quicken with kisings: had my lips that power,
This would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight.

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.
Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,
That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,
Provok’d by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen.
Of Caesar seek your honor with your safety.—O!
Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentile, hear me.
None about Caesar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution, and my hands, I’ll trust;
None about Caesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end
Lament not sorrow at, but please your thoughts,
In feeding them with those my former fortunes,
Wherein I liv’d the greatest prince o’ the world,
The noblest; and do now not basely die,
Nor cowardly put off my helmet to
My countryman, a Roman by a Roman
Voluntarily vanquish’d. Now, my spirit is going; I can no more.

[Dies.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woot’s die? Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence
Is no better than a sty?—O! aye, my women,
The crown o’ the earth doth melt.—My lord!—
O! wither’d is the garland of the world,
The soldier’s pole is fallen: young boys, and girls,
Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon. 3

Char. O, quietness, lady! 4
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady!—
Iras. Madam!—

Char. O madam, madam, madam! Royal Egypt! 5

Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iris! 6
Cleo. No more, but e’en a woman; and commanded
By such poor passion as the maid that milks,
And does the meanest chores.—It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;

3 Cleopatra means that she dare not come down out of the monument to Antony.—"be brooch’d," i. e. oramented, adorned.—"Still condition," i. e. redute disposition.—"De-marring," i. e. looking gravely.—"Quicken," i. e. revive.—"Chare," i. e. chores.

4 To tell them, that this world did eqni their,
Till they had stolen our jewel. All’s but naught;
Patience is soothing, and impatience does
Become a dog that’s mad; then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us.—How do you, women? What, what! good cherce! Why, how now, Charmian! My noble girls!—Ah, women, women! look,
Our lamp is spent, it’s out.—Good sirs, take heart:—
'To the Guard below.

We’ll bury him; and then, what’s brave, what’s noble,
Let’s do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away:
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.

[Exit; those above bearing off Antony’s Body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Cæsar’s Camp before Alexandria.

Enter Cæsar, Agrrippa, Dolabella, Mecenas, Gallus, Proculeius, and others.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him, ’t that he mocks
The patience that he makes.

Dol. Cæsar, I shall.

Enter Dercetas, with the Sword of Antony.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that Appear thus to us? [dars

Der. I am call’d Dercetas.
Mark Antony I serv’d, who best was worthy
Best to be serv’d: whilst he stood up, and spoke,
He was my master, and I wore my life,
To spend upon his harrows. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I’ll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is’t thou sayst?

Der. I say, O Cæsar! Antony is dead.
Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack: the round world should have shook
Lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony
Is not a single doom: in the name by
A molety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cæsar;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hirded knife; but that self hand,
Which writ his honor in the acts it did,
Hath, with the cunning which the heart did lend it,
Split that self noble heart. This is his sword;
I robbed his wound of it: behold it, stain’d
With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends? The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honors

5 Weighed equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity; but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch’d.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror’s set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Cæs. O Antony!

1 Have I follow’d thee to this?—but we do lances

4 Frusturate for frustrate.—"But it is," i. e. if it be not.
ACT V.

Pro. Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Cle. Be of good cheer;
You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing.
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy, and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him i' the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitied
Of him that caused'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd.

Pro, and two of the Guard, ascend
the Monument by a ladder, and come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

Guard her till Caesar come.

To Proculius and the Guard. Exit Gallus.
Iras. Royal queen!
Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!
Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a Dagger.

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold! [Dissours her.
Do not yourself such wrong, who in this
Relied, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death, too,
That rides our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master's bounty, by
Th' undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O! temperance, lady
Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;
If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court,
Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me to the shewing variety
Of censoring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark nak'd, and let the water flies
Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror farther, than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculius,
What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

*His for his.——" Knave," i.e., servant.

Antony and Cleopatra. ACT V.
Pro. So, Dolabella, it shall content me best: be gentle to her.—To Caesar I will speak what you shall please, [To Cleopatra.

If you'll employ me to him. Cleo. Say, I would die. [Exit Proculus, and Soldiers.

Dot. Most noble empress, you have heard of me? Cleo. I cannot tell. Dot. Assuredly, you know me. Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known. You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams; Is't not your trick?

Dot. I understand not, madam. Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony: O, such another sleep, that I might see But such another man!

Dot. If it might please you,— Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein suck A sun, and moon, which kept their course, and lighted The little O, the earth.

Dot. Most sovereign creature,— Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd arm Crested the world; his voice was propertied As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends; But when he meant to quall and shake the orb, He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty, There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas, That grew the more by reaping: his delights Were dolphin-like; he said'sh all his back Above the element they liv'd in: in his livery were Walk'd crowns, and crowns; realms and islands As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Cleo. She, she, she,— Cleo. Think you there was, or might be, such a As this I dream'd of? [man Dot. Gentle madam, no. Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods: But, if there be, or ever were one such, It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants stuff To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite. Dot. Hear me, good madam. Your loss is as yourself, great; and you hear it As answering to the weight: would I might never O'ertake purs'd success, but I do feel, By the rebound of yours, a grief that s smiles My very heart at root. Cleo. I thank you, sir. Know you, what Caesar means to do with me? Dot. I am loth to tell you what I would you knew. Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,— Dot. Though he be honorable,— Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph? Dot. Madam, he will; I know't. Within. Make way there!—Caesar! Enter Caesar, Gallus, Proculius, Mecenas, Seleucus, and Attendants.

Ces. Which is the queen of Egypt? Dot. It is the emperor, madam. [Cleopatra kneels.

Ces. Arise, you shall not kneel. I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods Will have it thus: my master and my lord I must obey.

Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts:

The record of what injuries you did us, Though written in our flesh, we shall remember As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o' the world, I cannot project mine own cause so well To make it clear; but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties, which before Have often shamed our sex.

Ces. Cleopatra, know, We will extenuate rather than enforce: If you apply yourself to one intents, (Which towards you are most gentle) you shall find A benefit in this change; but if you seek To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall beware of yourself Of my good purposes, and put your children To that destruction which I'll guard them from, If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave. [and we

Cleo. And may through all the world: 'tis yours; Your scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels, I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued; 2[showing a paper.

Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus? Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak, my lord, Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd To myself nothing.—Speak the truth, Seleucus. Sel. Madam, I had rather seal my lips, than to my peril Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back? Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold, How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours, And should we shift estates, yours would be mine. The ingratitude of this Seleucus does Even make me wild.—O slave, of no more trust Than love that's hir'd!—What! guest thou back? thou shalt Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes, Though they had wings. Slave, soul-less villain, dog! O rare base!

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Caesar! what a womaning shame is this; That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, Doing the honor of thy lordliness To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Nay, good Caesar, That I some holy trills have reserv'd, Intravenous toys, things of such dignity As we give modern friends with; and say, Some nobler token I have kept apart For Livia, and Octavia, to induce Their mediation, must I be unfolded [me With one that I have bred? I ye gods! it smiles Beneath the fall I have. Prythee, go hence;

[To Seleucus.

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits Through t'ashes of mischance.—Worth thou a man, Thou wouldst'at have mercy on me.

Ces. Forbear, Seleucus. [Exit Seleucus.

"Project," i. e., delineate: shape; form.—" Rarely base," i. e., base beyond example.—"e," "Parool," i. e., add up. "His eye to," i. e., his pupils. "Increscent," i. e., tri- ding.—" Modern," i. e., common; ordinary.—" Livia and Octavia," Caesar's wife and sister.—" Wish for by. "} Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are *mis-thought
For things that others do; and when we fail,
We answer others' *merits in our name,
And therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledge'd,
Put we I the roll of conquest: still be it yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe,
Cesar's no merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sell. Therefore be chear'd;
Make not your thoughts your *prisons: no, dear
For we intend so to dispose you, as Queen; yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:
Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Cleo. Be noble to myself: but bark thee, Charmian.

Whispers Charmian.

Iras. Finish, good lady: the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hee thee again: I have spoken already, and it is provided;
Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will.

Re-enter Dolabella.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char. Behold, sir. [Exit Charmian. Dolabella?]

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,
Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Cesar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three days
You with your children will be send before,
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.

Cleo. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol.] Now,
Iras, what think'st thou? Thou, as an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown
In Rome, as well as I: mechanic slaves
With greasy aprons, rules, andammers, shall Uplift us to the view: in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vinegar.

Iras. The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain. Iras. Saucy licentors
Will catch at us, like strumpets: and scald rhymer
Ballad us out o' tune: the *quick comedians
Externally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels: Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra *boast my greatness
To the posture of a whore.

Iras. O, the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that is certain.

Iras. 'Twill never see it: for, I am sure, my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's the way To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most *assur'd intents.—Now, Charmian?

* "Mis-thought." I. e., thought wrong of. — * Merits for demerits. — That is, 'Be not a prisoner in imagination, when in reality you are free.' — *Quick," i. e., lively; quick-witted. — * Female characters were formerly played by boys.

Re-enter Charmian.

Show me, my women, like a queen: — go fetch
My best attire: — I am again for Cydnos,
To meet Mark Antony. — Sirrah, Iras, go.
Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed;
And, when thou hast done this 'charge, I'll give thee leave To play till dooms-day. — Bring our crown and all.
Wherefore's this noise? [Exit Iras. A noise within.

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow, That will not be denied his highness' presence:
He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. — How poor an instrument
You make a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: now from head to foot
I am marble-constant: now the *fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a Basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit Guard.]

Ist thou the pretty *worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal: those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died out?

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty, how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt.

— Truly, she makes a very good report of the worm;
but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do. But this is most fulsome, the worm's an *adder-worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence: farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell. [Clown sets down the Basket.]

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Clown. Take thou no care: it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not; but, truly, these same whorsons devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make, the devils mar nine.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone: farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth: I wish you joy of the worm.

[Exit.

Re-enter Iras, with a Robe, Crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have Immortal longings in me. Now, no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip.—
* Yare, yare, good Iras; quick.—M-thinks, I hear
Antony call: I see him rouse himself

"This charge," i. e., this charge — "Fleeting," i. e., in-costant; changeable.—"Worm" was used formerly to signify a serpent.—"Will do his kind," i. e., will set according to his nature.—* "Yare, yare," i. e., be nimble; be ready.
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come:
Now to that name my courage prove my title.
I am fire, and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.—So,—have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
Farewell, kind Charmian:—Iras, long farewell.

[Exit Antony; [Kisses them. IRAS falls, and dies.

Have I the aspick in my lips? Doth fail?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover’s pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir’d. Doth thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell’st the world
It is not worth leave-taking. [say,
Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain, that I may
The gods themselves do weep.

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He’ll make demand of her, and spend that kiss,
Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch, [She applies the Asp to her Breast.
With thy sharp teeth this knob *intrinsicate
Of life at once unite: poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and despatch. O! could’st thou speak,
That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass
Unpoliced!

Char. O eastern star!
Cleo. Peace, peace! Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?
Char. O, break! O, break!
Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle.—
O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too.—

[Applying another Asp to her Arm.

Why should I stay—

Char. In this wild world?—So, fare thee well.—
Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies
A less unparallel’d.—Downy windows, close;
And golden Phoebus never be behold
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown’s awry;
I’ll mend it, and then play—

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?
Char. Speak softly; wake her not.
1 Guard. Caesar hath sent—
Char. Too slow a messenger. [Applies the Asp.
O! come! asleep; despatch: I partly feel thee.
1 Guard. Approach, ho! All’s not well: Caesar’s beguil’d.[him.
2 Guard. There’s Dolabella sent from Caesar: call
1 Guard. What work is here?—Charman, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess
Descended of so many royal kings.
Ah, soldier!

[Dies.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?
2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this; thyself art coming
To see perform’d the dreaded act, which thou
So sought’st to hinder.

Within. A way there! a way for Caesar!

Enter Caesar, and all his Train.

Dol. O, sir! you are too sure an augurer:
That you did fear, is done.

Ces. Bravest at the last:
She tell’d us at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths!
I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?
I Guard. A simple countryman that brought her
This was his basket.

[figs.
Ces. Poison’d, then.
I Guard. O Caesar! This Charmian lived but now; she stood, and spake.
I found her trimming up the diadem
On her head mistress: tremulously she stood,
And on the sudden dropp’d.

Ces. O noble weakness!—
If they had swallow’d poison, ’twould appear
By external swelling; but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown:
The like is on her arm.

[leaves

I Guard. This is an aspick’s trail; and these fig-
Have slime upon them, such as the aspick leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Ces. Most probable,
That so she died; for her physician tells me,
She hath pur’d conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed,
And bear her women from the monument.
She shall be buried by her Antony:
No grave upon the earth shall *clip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is
No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,
In solemn show, attend this funeral,
And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity.

[Dexunt.

* "She tell’d us at," i.e., she conjectured.— 4 "Of grace," i.e., of graceful appearance.— 2 "A vent," i.e., an emission; a bow.— 2 "Blown," i.e., swelled; pulled.—1 "Pur’d conclusions," i.e., tried experiments.—1 "Clip," i.e., enfold.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden of Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns: our "bloods" No more obey the 'heavens, than our courtiers Still seem as does the king.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of a kingdom, whom He purposed to his wife's sole son, (a widow

That late he married) hath refer'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded; Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all Is outward sorrow, though, I think, the king Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. Nane but the king?

1 Gent. He that hath lost her, too; so is the queen, That most desir'd the match; but not a courtier, Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing Too bad for bad report; and he that hath her, (I mean, that married her,—alack, good man!— And therefore banish'd) is a creature such As, to seek through the regions of the earth For one his like, there would be something failing
SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter, after the slander of most step-mothers, Evil Eye'd unto you; you are my prisoner, but your jailor shall deliver you the keys that lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus, so soon as I can win the offending king, I will be known your advocate: marry, yet the fire of rage is in him; and 'twere good,

* "You speak him far," I. e., you praise him excessively.

... "That fated them," I. e., that formed their manners.

You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness, I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril. I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying the pangs of bair'd afflictions, though the king hath charg'd you should not speak together.

[Exit Queen.]

Ino. O dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband, I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing (Always reserve'd my holy duty) what his rage can do on me. You must be gone; and I shall here abide the hourly shot; of angry eyes; not comforted to live, but that there is this jewel in the world, that I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress! O, lady! weep no more, lest I give cause to be suspected of more tenderness than doth become a man. I will remain the loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth: my residence in Rome at one Philario's; who to my father was a friend, to me known by but letter. Thither write, my lady, and with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, though ink be made of gold.

[Exit Post.]

Queen. Be brief, I pray you: if the kind come, I shall inward know not how much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet I'll move him to walk this way. I never do him wrong, but he does buy my injuries to be friends, pays dear for my affections.

[Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave as long a term as yet we have to live, the loathness to depart would grow. Adieu! Ino. Nay, say a little: Were you but riling forth to air yourself, such parting were too petty. Look here, love: this diamond was my mother's; take it, heart; but keep it till you woo another wife, when Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how another?—You gentle gods, give me but this I have, and swear up my embraces from a next With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou here! [Putting on the Ring.]

While sense can keep it on. And sweetest, fairest, as I my poor self did exchange for you, to your so infinite loss, so in our triles I still win of you: for my sake, wear this: it is a manacle of love: I'll place it upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.]

Ino. O, the gods! when shall we see again?

[Enter Cymbeline and Lords.]

Post. Ahick, the king! Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight! if after this command thou k'st the court with thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away! Thou'rt poison to my blood.

* That is, 'I say I do not fear my father, so far as I may say so without breach of duty.'—That is, He by new kindness, in order to renew our unity, pays, as it were, for the injuries I have done him.—' Seal up,' i. e., reverse in, which the dead are wrapped.—While sense can keep it on,' i. e., while I have sensation to retain it.—Sec, I. e., see each other.—Fraught,' i. e., fill.
Post. — The gods protect you,
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. — O disloyal thing!
That should'st repair my youth, thou heapest
A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation;
I am senseless of your wrath: a touch more rare
Subdues all paus, all fears.

Cym. — Past grace? obedience?
Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace. [Queen.

Cym. — That might'st have had the sole son of my
Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a € puttock.
[my throne

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar would have made
A seat for baseness.

Imo. — No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. — O thou vile one!

Imo. — Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus.
You bred him as my play-fellow; and he is
A man worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. — What! art thou mad?
Imo. Almost, sir: heaven restore me! — Would I
A ne'erthelead's daughter, and my Leonatus [were
Our neighbor shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.

Cym. — Thou foolish thing! — They were again together: you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And peu her up.

Queen. — Beseech your patience. — Peace!
Dear lady daughter, peace! — Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some com-
Out of your best advice. [Fort

Cym. — Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly. [Exit.

Enter Pisanio.

Queen. — Fie! — You must give way:
Here is your servant. — How now, sir! What news?
Pis. — My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. — No harm, I trust, is done?
Pis. — There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. — I am very glad on't.
Imo. — Your son's my father's friend: he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile! — O brave sir! —
I would they were in Afric both together,
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back. — Why came you from your master?
Pis. — On his command. He would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When I pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. — This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honor,
He will remain so.

Post. — I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. — Pray, walk a while.
Imo. — About some half hour hence,
Pray you, speak with me. You shall, at least,
Go see my lord abroad: for this time, leave me. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Public Place.

Enter Cloen, and Two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt:
the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in;
there's noth abroad so wholesome as that you vest.
Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it—
Have I hurt him?

2 Lord. [Aside.] No faith; not so much as his patience.

1 Lord. Hurt him? his body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o'
the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. [Aside.] No: but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground.

2 Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have occans.—Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

2 Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and herself go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Imogen and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' the haven,
And question'st every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?
Pis. — It was, his queen, his queen!
Imo. Then wav'd he his handkerchief?
Pis. — And kiss'd it, madam.
Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I!
And that was all?
Pis. — No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep

*Anciently almost every sign had a motto, or some attempt at a witicism, underneath it:—"As offer'd mercy is," i. e., as the loss of intended mercy to a condemned criminal.
SCENE V.

CYMBELINE.

The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief, Still waving, as the sirs and stars of his mind Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on, How swiftly his slip.

Iamo. Thou should'st have made him As little as a crow, or less, ere left To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Iamo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but To look upon him, till the diminution Of space had point'd sharp as my needle; Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from The smallness of a gnat to air; and then Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisanio, When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam, With his next vantage. I did not take my leave of him, but had Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him, How I would think on him, at certain hours, Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear The shes of Italy should not betray Mine interest, and his honor; or have charg'd him, At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight, This encounter with me, without a tear For then I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father, And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north, Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

The queen, madam, Desires your highness' company. [spatch'd.—

Iamo. Those things I bid you do, get them done; I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

Enter Philario, Iachino, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain; he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of; but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments was tabulated by his side, and I to persevere by items.

Phil. You speak of him when he was less furnished, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he...

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And, then, his banishment.—

Iach. Ay, and the 1 apprehensions of those, that weep this lamentable divorce 2 and her 3 dowers, are 4 wonderfully to extend him; be it to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without 5 more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phil. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life.—

Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Briton. Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits with gentlewomen of your 4 knowing to a stranger of his quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than 2 story him in his own bearing.

French. Sir, we have 6 known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did 4 a stone my countryman and you: it had been pity, you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon the importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if not offend to say it is mended) my quar rel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likehood, have 7 confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think. 'Twas a contention in public, which may, without contrariety, suffer the report. It is enough I have an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable, than any the nearest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That is no longer now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind. Iach. You must not so far prefer her 7 ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nobility; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. Post. I put her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; * or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours; but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighboring ponds. Your ring may be stolen, too: so, of your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honor of my mistress, if in the holding or loss of that you term her frail, I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phil. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress; make her go back, even to the yielding, lad I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something, but I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I hasten it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not, you'll sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, I mean as a wantonness too.

Phil. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came too suddenly: let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate, and my neighbor's, on the approbation of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stand'st so steady: I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honor of hers, which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are so afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainted. But I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue: you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between us. My mistress exceeds in goodnesse the huggine of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match.

Here's my ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one.—If I bring you no sufficient testimony, that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistresse, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off,

"To convince," i. e., to overcome.—"Abused," i. e., deceived. The application: "I am the master of my speeches," i. e., I said no more than I meant.

and leave her in such honor as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours;—provided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles but with us.——Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make 2 good your vantage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unassayed, (you not making it appear otherwise) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand: a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain catch cold, and starve. I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exeunt Posthomen and Iachimo. French. Will this hold, think you?

Phil. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers: Make haste. Who has the note of them?

1 Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch.—[Exeunt Ladies. Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs? Cor. Pleeeth your highness, ay: here they are, madam: [Presenting a small Box. But I beseech your grace, without offence, (My promise there bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded me this most poisonous compouds. Which are the movers of a languishing death: But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question: have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distill preserves? yes, so, That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confessions! Having thus far proceeded, (Unless thou think'st me devilish) it's not meet That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compouds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but none human) To try the vigor of them, and apply Alloyments to their fact; and by them gather Their several virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.—Enter Pisanio.

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him Will I first work: he's for his master, And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio!— Doctor, your service for this time is ended: Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam; But you shall do no harm.

Queen. Hark thee, a word.—[She talks apart to Pisanio. Cor. 1 do not like her. She doth think, she has 2 "Conclusions," i. e., experiments. —"Alloyments," i. e., pullatives.—4 Act for action.
Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her notions with A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has Will stipify and dull the sense awhile; Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and dogs, Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect; and I the truer, So to be false with her. Queen. No further service, doctor. Until I send for thee. [Exit. Queen. Weeps she still, s'white thou? Dost thou think, in time She will not such a quench, and let instruction enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work: When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son, I'll tell thee on the instant thou art, then, As great as is thy master: greater; for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gone: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being, Is to exchange one misery with another, And every day that comes comes to decay A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect, To be depend on a thing that means? Who cannot be new-built; nor has no friends, [The Queen drops the Box: Pisanio takes it up and presents it. So much as but to prop him. — Thou take'st up Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labor. It is a thing I made, which hurt the king Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know What is more cordial?—say, I pray thee, take it; It is an earnest of a farther good. That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how The case stands with her: do'st as from thyself. Think what a chance thou hast of chancest on; but think How thou mist dost thy mistress still; to boast, my son, Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king To any shape of thy preferment, such As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly, Think all that thee on to this desert, am bound To lead thy merit richly. Call my women: Think on my words. [Exit Pis.] — A sly and constant knave, Not to be sink'd; the agent for his master, And the remembrancer of her, to hold The band fast to her lord. — I have given him that, Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her Of lillies for her suite; and which she after, Except she send her humor, shall be assur'd. Re-enter Pisanio, and Ladies. To taste of too. — So, so;—well done, well done. The violets, cowslips, and the primroses, Bear to my closet. — Fare thee well, Pisanio; Think on my words. [Exit Queen and Ladies. Pis. And shall do; But when to my good lord I prove untrue, I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you. [Exit. SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same. Enter Imogen. Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false; A foolish suitor to a wedded holy, That hath her husband banish'd:—O, that husband! My supreme crown of grief, and those repeated Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen, As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable Is the desire that's glorious; blessed be those, How mean so'er that have their honest wills, Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? Fie! Enter Pisanio and Iachimo. Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome Comes from my lord with letters. Iack. Change you, madam? The worthy Leontes is in safety, And greet's thy highness dearly. [Gives the Letter. Imo. Thanks, good sir. You are kindly welcome. Iack. All of her, that is out of door, most rich! [Aside. If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare, She is alone the Arbitre bird, and I. Have lost the wager. Boldness, be my friend: Arm me, audacity, from head to foot, Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight; Rather, directly fly. Imo. [Reads.] "He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust." So far I read aloud: But even the very middle of my heart Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully,— You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I Have words to bid you; and shall find it So in all that I can do. Iack. Thanks, fairest lady.— What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes To see this vaulted arch, and the rich scope Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones Upon 'th unnumber'd beach; and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul? Iack. What makes your admiration? Iack. It cannot be? the eye; for ames and monkeys, 'Twixt two such ahes, would chatter this way, and Contemn with shows the other: nor? the judgment; For idiots, in this case of favor, would Be wisely definite: nor? the appetite; Stuttery, to such went excellence applied, Should make desire vomit? to emptiness, Not so allur'd to feed. Imo. What is the matter, trow? Iack. The cloyed will, (That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, That taul both fill'd and running) ravaging first The limb, longs after for the garbage. Imo. What, dear sir, Thus raps you? Are you well? Iack. Thanks, madam, well.— Beseech you, sir, desire [To Pisanio. My man's abode where I did leave him; he Is strange and pensive. Pis. I was going, sir, To give him welcome. [Exit Pisanio. Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, be- Iack. Well, madam. [Seech you 1 Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope, he is, Iack. Exceeding pleasant; none, a stranger there, 'c The d-bale that's glorious," i.e., the station so much desired that is called glorious. — o 'Which seasons," i.e., which tempers, in & placant. — "With mows," i.e., with smiling mouth, — i.e., scarce and peevish; i.e., is foreign, and foolish, or silly.
So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Iach. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one,
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton
(Your lord, I mean) laughs from his free lungs, cries,
"O!"
Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish
For assur'd bondage?"

Iach. Will my lord say so?
Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with
It is a recreation to be by,
[laughter:
And hear him mock the Frenchman; but, heavens
Some men are much to blame. [know,

Iach. Not he, I hope.
Iach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;
In you,—which I account beyond all talents,—
Whilest I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Iach. What do you pity, sir?
Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Iach. Am I one, sir?
You look on me: what wreck discern you in me,
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What! To Hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I' the dungeon by a saff H

Iach. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—but
It is an officer of the gods to venge it
Not mine to speak on.

Iach. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me: pray you,
(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more)
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedy, or timely known,
The remedy then born) discover to me
What both you spurn and stop.

Iach. Had I this check
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeder's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here; should I (damn'd be thou)
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands
Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood as
With labor); then in-booping in an eye,
Base and illustrious as the smoky light
That's fed with stinting toil, it were fit,
Then all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Iach. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,

Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That, from my most reverent conscience, to my tongue
Charms this report out.

Iach. Let me hear no more.

Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fastest to an 4 empress
Would make the great at king double, to be partner'd
With tomboys, lir'd with that *self exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures,
That 5 pay with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff,
As well might poison men! Be reveng'd,
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recall from your great stock.

Iach. Reveng'd! How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,
(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse) if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is ruling varying winds?
In you, despite, upon your purse! Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close, as sure.

Iach. What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Iach. Away! I do 'content mine ears, that have
So long attended thee.—If thou wert honorable,
Wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st, as base, as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honor; and Solicit'st here a lady, that disdains
Thee and the devil alike.—What ho, Pisanio!—
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
A slyer stranger, in his court, to murt
As in a Romish stew, and to expound
His bosky mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio!—

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say;
The more that, still the mighty ladies of Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect goodness
Her assur'd credit.—Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever
Country call'd his; and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon,
I have spoke this, to know if your silence
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: and he is one
The truest manner'd: such a holy witch,
That lie enchant's societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Iach. You make amends.

Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honor sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mightly princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which, you know, cannot err. The love I bear him
Made me to 'fam you thus; but the gods made you,

4 An empery," i. e., sovereign command.—"*Self exbition," i. e., allowance; pension.—"To fan," i. e., to winnow.
Unlike all others, chafless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir. Take my power I the court for yours.

Iack. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is't?

Iack. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
(The best feather of our wing) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor:\nWhich I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form. Their value's great,
And I am something curious, being a stranger,
To have them in safe stowage: may it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly,
And pawn mine honor for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iack. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men; I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night,
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O! no, no.

Iack. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By lengthening my retu From Gaulia
I'ersh'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow.

Iack. O! I must, madam:
Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night;
I have i'vouch't my time, which is material
To see the tender of our present.

Iack. I will write.
Send your trunk to me: it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cloten, and two Lords, as from the Bowling-alley.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack upon an upcast, to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't: and then a whoreous jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2 Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; [Aside.] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction?
Would he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.
Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth.

—A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother. Every jack-slap hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a coak that no body can match.

2 Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too;
and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

2 Lord. It is not fit, your lordship should undertatake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger! and I not know on't?

2 Lord. [Aside.] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. [Aside.] Yet, are you a fool granted; therefore, your issues being foolish do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.[Exeunt Cloten and first Lord. That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this man! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son
Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Abs, poor princess!
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest,
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd;
A mother hourly coining plots: a wooer,
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make! The heaven hold firm
The walls of thy dear honor; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st stand
T enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Bed-Chamber; in one part of it, a great Trunk.

Imogen reading in her Bed; Helen attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman, Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours, then. Mine eyes are weak;
Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed.
Take not away the taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit & Helen.

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies, and the tempters of the night,
Guard me, beseech ye! [Sleeps.

That is, You are a coxcomb. — Companion, a word of contempt, as we now use fellow.
Enter Iachimo from the Trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man’s o’er-labor’d
Repairs itself by rest: our Tarquin thus [sense
Did softly press the ’rushes, ere he wak’n’d
The chastity he wounded. Cytherea,
How bravely thou came’st thy bed? fresh lily,
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss; one kiss!—Rabies unparagon’d!—

I Kissing her.

How dearly do’t.—Tis her breathing that
Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame o’ the taper
Bows toward her, and would under-peepe her lids,
To see the enclosed lights, now canonized
Under the windows; white and azure, he’d
With blue of heaven’s own swift.—But my design,
To note the chamber: I will write all down:—

3 Takes out his tables.

Such, and such, pictures:—there the window;—
such
Th’ adornment of her bed:—the arms, figures,
Why, such, and such;—and the contents o’ the story.
Ah! but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, t’ enrich mine inventory:
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her,
And be her sense but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off:—

[Taking off her Bracelet.

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard,—
’Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience doth within,
To the madding of her lord.—On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I’ the bottom of a cowslip: here’s a voucher,
Stronger than ever low could make: this secret
Will force him think I have picked the lock, and ta’en
The treasure of her honor. No more.—To what end?
Why should I write this down, that’s riveted,
Screw’d to my memory? She hath been reading late
The tale of Tereus; here the leaf’s torn’d down,
Where Philomel gave up.—I have enough:
To the truck again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that大纲
May thus the raven’s eye: I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

One, two, three,—time, time, time!

[Clock strikes.

Exit into the Trunk.

SCENE III.—An Ante-Chamber adjoining Imogen’s Apartment.

Enter Cloths and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in less, the most coldest that ever turned up here.

2 Lord. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot, and furious, when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It’s almost morning; is’t not?

2 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music o’ mornings; they say, it will pen-trate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we’ll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I’ll never give o’er. First, a very excellent good conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,— and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven’s gate sings,
And Phoebus’ gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On churlish flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise!

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the & better: if it do not, it is a fault in her ears, which horse-hairs, and calved vice, not the voice of ‘t am unpard’ en much to boast, can never mend.

[Exeunt Musicians.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern
Well not she forth?

[daughter?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she come-shauns no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new;
She hath not yet forget him: some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she’s yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king;
Who lets go by no vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly solicits, and be friended
With aptness of the season: make denials
Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspir’d to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your discretion tendis,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome:
The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that’s no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honor of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness foreshort on us,
We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress,
Attend the queen, and us; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym., Queen, Lords, and Mess.

Clo. If she be up, I’ll speak with her; if not,
Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave, ho!

[8 Calls.

I know her women are about her: what
If I do line one of their hands? ’tis gold
Which buys accommodation; oft it doth; and makes Diarm’s rangers, false themselves, yield up
Their deer to the stand o’ the stealer; and ’tis gold

"Consider your music the better," i.e., pay you more for it.—"With aptness of the season," i.e., with solicitations well timed.—That is, "We must extend towards himself our notice of his goodness, heretofore shown to us."
Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief!
Now, sweetheart, hangs both thief and true man: what Can it do not, and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me; for
I yet not understand the case myself.
By your leave.

[Knocks.

Enter a Lady.
Lad. Who's there, that knocks?
Clo. A gentleman.
Lad. Aye, I is a faith,
"Sprited," the it
"Clipped," e.,

No more?
Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.
Lad. Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?
Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?
Lad. Ay, To keep her chamber.
Clo. There's gold for you: sell me your good report.
Lad. How! my good name? or to report of you
What I shall think is good?—The princess—

Enter Imogen.
Clo. Good morrow, fairest; sister your sweet hand,
Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thunks,
And scarce can spare them.
Clo. Still, I swear, I love you.
Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.
Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent,
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith,
I shall unfold equal discountesy
To your best kindness. One of your great knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.
Clo. To leave you in your madness? 'twere my sin:
I will not.
Imo. Fools are not mad folks.
Clo. Do you call me fool?
Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so "verbal: and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
(To accuse myself) I hate you; which I had rather
You felt than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against
Obedience, which you owe your father.
For the contract you pretend with that base wretch,
(One, bred of ninfs, and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps of the court) it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties,
(Yet who than he more mean) I to knit their souls
(On whom there is no more dependency)
But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd a knot,
Yet you are car'd from that enragement
By the consequence of the crown, and must not fail
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A building for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.
Imo. Profane fellow! Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base

To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Clo. The souf-dig rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but 'clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisario!—

Enter Pisario.
Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman bie thee presently.—
Clo. His garment?

Imo. I am 'sprited with a fool;
Frighted, and anger'd worse.—Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel, that too casually
Hath left mine arm: it was thy master's; 'shrew me,
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: confident I am,
Last night twas on mine arm; I kis'd it.
I hope, it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kis aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go, and search. [Exit Pis.
Clo. You have abus'd me.—
His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, sir.
If you will make't an action, call witness to't.
Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
Bet the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent.

Clo. [Exit. I'll be reveng'd.—
His meanest garment.—Well.

SCENE IV.—Rome. An Apartment in Phila-nio's House.

Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would, I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold, her honor
Will remain here.

Phil. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but abide the change of time;
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come. In these fear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phil. Your very goodness, and your company, offender all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Cæsar Lurian
Will do's commission throughly; and, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arraignars,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
(Statist though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legion, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing town, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Cæsar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

4 That is, 'If you were to be dignified only in comparison to your virtues, the under-hangman's place is too good for you.'—* "Clipped," i.e., enclosed. — ' Sprited,' i.e., haunted. — Or stands here for cra.—* "Statist," i.e., states-
Worthy his frowning at: their discipline
(Now mingled with their courtesies) will make known
To their approvers, they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Enter Iachimo.

Phil.  See! Iachimo!

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land,
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phil. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope, the briefer of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Phil. And, therein, the best: or let her beauty
Look through a casemment to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenor good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phil. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I 'twas lost,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, 't' enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further; but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honor,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring are yours: if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honor, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Phil. First, her bedchamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not, but, profess,
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver: the story,
Pond Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats or pride: a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd,
Could be so rarey and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on't was.

Post. This is most true;

And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. Or do your honor injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: her amours
(I had forgot them) were two winged Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honor.—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and praise
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can,
Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!—

Producing the Bracelet.

And now 'tis up again: it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, (I thank her) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm: I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me,
And mid, she priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off,
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?

Post. O! no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this Giving the Ring.

It is a balsam unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't.—Let there be no honor,
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,
Where there's another man: the vows of women
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.—
O, above measure false!

Phil. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again: 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or,
Who knows, if one, her women, being corrupted,
Hath stolen it from her?

Post. Very true;

And so, I hope, he came by't.—Back my ring.—

Remind me to some corporal sign about her,
More civil than this, for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

'tis true:—any, keep the ring—'tis true. I am sure,
She would not lose it: her attendants are
All sworn, and honorable:—they induc'd to steal it!
And by a stranger.—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this:—she hath bought the name of whose thus dearly.

The brands of the amours are the horizontal pieces upon which the wood is supported, properly called brandions.—Servants in great houses were form'd known to fidelity.—"The cognizance," i.e., the token; the visible proof.
SCENE I. CYMBELINE. 875

There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you! Phil.
Sir, be patient. This is not strong enough to be believed
Of one persuaded well of.
Post. Never talk on't; she hath been coyled by him.
Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast.
(Worthy the pressing) lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging: by my life,
I kind it, and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?
Post. Ay, and it doth confirm
Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.
Iach. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetick: never count the turns;
Once, and a million!
Iach. I'll be sworn,—
No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done't, you lie;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou'st made me cuckold.
Post. I will deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal!
I will go there, and do't; if the court; before
Her father.—I will do something.
Phil. Quite beside the government of patience!—You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.
Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter Posthumus.
Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man, which I
Did call my father, was I know not where.
When I was stumped; some coiner with his tools
Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seemed
The Diogenes of that time: so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this. O vengeance, vengeance!
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrained,
And pry'd me oft forbearance; did it with a
Pudency so rosy, the sweet view on't.[118]
[Her
Might well have warn'd old Saturn: that I thought
As cluse as unsum'd snow:—O, all the devils!—
This yellow lachino, in an hour,—wasn't not!—
Or less,—at first; perchance he spoke not, but,
Like a full-scorn'd bear, a flammaing one,
Cry'd "Oh!" and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenge, hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longings, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be nam'd; nay, that tell knows,
Why, hers, in part, or all: but, rather, all;
For even to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still

One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them.—Yet 'tis greater skill,
In a true late, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords, at one Door; at another, Caius Lucius and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us?

Luc. When Julius Caesar (whose remembrance yet
Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears, and tongues,
Be theme, and hearing ever) was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassiblan, thine uncle,
(Famous in Caesar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it) for him,
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee lately
Is left untemper'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Caesars,
Ere such an Julius. Britain is
A world by itself; and we will nothing pay,
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,
Which then they had to take from us, to resume
We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege.
The kings your ancestors, together with
The natural bravery of your isle; which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters;
With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats,
But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of Conquest
Cesar made here; but made not here his brag
Of "came," and "saw," and "overcame:" with slame
(The first that ever touch'd him) he was carried
From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping,
(Poor ignorant babbles!) on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd
As easily 'gainst our rocks. For joy whereof
The fam'd Cassiblan, who was once at point
(O, 4 giglot fortune!) to master Cesar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons struit with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid.
Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time;
and, as I said, there is no more such Caesars: other of them may have crooked noses; but, to ove such straight arms, none.

Cym. Sun, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can grize as hard as Cassiblan: I do not say, I am one; but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar's ambition,
(Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch

The sides o' the world) against all color, here
Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off,
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be.

1 Cly. We do.
2 Cly. Say, then, to Caesar,
Our ancestor was that Mulinus, which
Orchaid's our laws; whose use the sword of Cæsar
Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and franchise,
Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulinus made

Who was the first of Britain which did put
His bow's within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar (Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers) thine enemy.

I receive it from thee, then.—War and confusion,
In Cæsar's name pronounce I against thee: look
For fury not to be resisted. Thus defeated,
I think thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent
Much under him; of him I gather'd honor;
Which he, to seek of me again, perfervic
Beloves me keep at attention. I am so Perfect, that the Pannonians and Daunitians, for Their liberties, are now in arms; a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons cold:
So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Cly. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pos-time with us a day or two, or longer: if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our saltwater girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours.
If you fall in the adventure, our crows shall face the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he mine;
All the remain is, welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Pisario.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not
What monsters her accuse?—Leontus!
O, master! what a strange infection
Is fallen into thy ear? What false Imian
(As poisonous tongue'd, as handed) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing?—Dialogue! No;
She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take 5 in some virtue.—O, my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low, as were
Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her?
Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I
Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her blood?
If it be so to do great service, never Let me be count'd serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity,
So much as this fact comes to?—Don't. The letter

[Reading.

That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity:—O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on dice. Senseless bubble,
Art thou a 10 foody for this act, and look'st

So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes.

Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisario?

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord: Leontus.
O! 'learn'd indeed were that astronomer,
That knew the stars, as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open.—You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not,
That we two are tender.—Let that grieve him:
Some griefs are medicible; that is one of them,
For it doth physic love:—of his content,
All but in that!—Good wax, thy lay.——Bless'd be,
You bees, that make these locks of counsel! Lovers,
And men in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
Though forfathers you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables.—Good news, gods! [Reads.

"Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. I make notice, that I am in Cam-brin, at Milford-Haven: what your own love will out of this advise you follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increas'ning in love,

"LEONATUS POSTHUMUS."
O, for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou, Pisario?
He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell me
How for his thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not Glide thither in a day?—Then, true Pisario,
(Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—
O, let me hate!—but not like me;—yet long'st,
But in a fainted kind:—O! not like me,
For mine's beyond beyond) say, and speak 'eathick,
(Loved, in a conqueror's heart) that the arrows of, hearing,
To the smothering of the sense) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford; and, by the way,
Tell me how Wules was made so happy, as
'T inherit such a haven: but, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse she have been, or ever begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Midam, 's enough for you, and too much, too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution, man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
Wagers,
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run 'i the clocks 'by half.——But this is fool-ery.—

Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father; and provide me, presently,
A riding suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewif.

Pis. Madam, 'you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man: nor here, nor there,
Nor what 3 means, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee:

"Ignorant in what I am commanded," i. e., unpractised in the arts of murder.——"Speak thick," i. e., crowd one word on another, as fast as possible.——"By the clocks" are meant 4 hour glasses.——A franklin is a woman.——"You're best," for you had best.——"Nor here, nor there," i. e., neither this way nor that way.——"Nor what means," i. e., nor the consequences that will follow.
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say: Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountainous Country, with a Cave

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A godly day not to keep house, with such Whose roof's as low as ours. Stoop, boys: this gate Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you To a morning's holy office: the gates of monarchs Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven! We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly As prouder rivers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven! Hail, heaven! Arv. Hail, heaven! Bel. Now, for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill:

Your leg is young: I'll tread these flats. Consider, When you above perceive me like a crow, That it is place which lessens and sets off: [you, And you may then revolve what tales I have told Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war: That service is not service, so being done, But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus, Draws us a profit from all things we see: And let us to our comfort: we shall find The sharded beetle in a safer hold Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O! this life Is nobler, than attending for a check; Richer, than doing nothing for a bob; Prouder, than rustling in unpaid silk: Such gain the cup of him, that makes him fine, You are our book unerud't. No life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak we: poor un- fed'd, [not Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor know What air's from home. Haply this life is best, If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,

That have a sharper known, well corresponding With your stiff age; but unto us it is A crest of ignorance, travelling abroad, A prison for a debtor, that not dares To stride a limit.

Arv. How should we speak of, When we are old as you? when we shall hear The rain and wind beat dark December, how In this our pinching cave shall we discourse The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing: We are beastly: subtle as the fox for prey; Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat: Our valor is to chase what flies; our cage We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird, And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak! Did you but know the city's usual? And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court, As hard to leave, as keep: whose top to climb Is certain falling, or so slippery, that The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war, A pain that only seems to seek out danger I' the name of fame, and honor; which dies i' the And hath as oft a staunderous epitaph, [search, And record of fair cont: may many times, Doth till deserve by doing well: what's worse, Must court'sy at the censure.—O, boys! this story The world may read in me: my body's mark'd

With Roman swords, and my report was once First with the best of note. Cymbeline lov'd me; And when a soldier was the theme, my name Was not far off: then, was I as a tree, Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but, in one night, A storm, or robbery, call it what you will, Shook down my noble boughings, nay, my leaves, And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favor!

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft) But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd Before my perfect honor, swore to Cymbeline, was confederate with the devotion To follow'd my banishment; and this twenty years This rock, and these demesnes, have been my world; Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid More pious debts to heaven, than in all The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountains! This is not hunter's language.—He that strikes The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast; To him the other two shall minister, And we will fear no poison, which attends In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the val- leys. [Exeunt Gui. and Arv.

How hard it is, to hide the sparks of nature! These boys know little, they are sons to the king; Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive. They think, they are to mine: and, though train'd up Thus meanly I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them, In simple and low things, to prince it, much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,— The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove! When on my three-foot stool I sat, and tell The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say,—Thus mine enemy fell; And thus I set my foot on's neck! even then The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats, Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal, Once Arviragus; now call'd: he as like a sign; Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rou'd.—

3[Hor's wind.]

O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows, Though unjustly banish me; whereas At three, and two years old, I stole these babes, Being to have thee of succession, as Thou reft' me of my lands. Euriphile, [mother, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their And every day do honor to her grave: Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd, They take for natural father. [Hor's]—The game is up. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Pis. Thou toldst me, when we came from horse, the place Was near at hand.—Ne'er long'd my mother so To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio! Man! Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind, That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh From th' inward of thee? One, but painted thus, Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd Beyond self-explication: put thyself Into a havior of less fear, ere wilderness

*"Report," i. e., reputation.
Vanquish my slander senses. What's the matter? Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with—

1 [Pis. offers a Letter.]

A look undertaker? If it be summer news, smile to't before; if winterly, thou need'st [hand.]

But keep that countenance still.—My husband's

That deer-deer's Italy hath our confidant him. And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man: thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read

Would be even mortal to me.

Pis.

Please you, read; [2 Giving it.

And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing

The most abased of fortune.

[Reads.]—They mistress, Pisario, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisario, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonor, and equally to me disloyal.

[paper]

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the Hoth cut her throat already. —No: 'tis slander,

Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue Outworns all the worms of Nile; whose breath Rides on the posteing winds, and hath belie All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states, Maidens, matrons, may, the secrets of the grave This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?

To lie in watch there, and to think on him? [true, 'tis deep twixt clock and clock; if sleep charge naught

To break it with a fearful dream. And

And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed, Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness.—Iachimo, Thou didst accuse him of inconstancy; Thou then look'st like a villain; now, methinks, Thou dost make a good enough subject of Italy.

Whosoever her with painting, Ith betray'd him: Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion; And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls, I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O!

Men's vows are women's traitors. All good seeming, By thy revolt, O husband! shall be thought Put on for villainy; not born where's grows, But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false

Aeneas, Were in his time thought false; and Simon's weeping Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity From most true wretchedness: so thou, Posthumus, Wilt by the leave on all proper * men: Gaily, and gallant, shall be false, and perjur'd, From thy great fault.—Come, fellow, be thou honest: Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou seest him, A little witness my obedience: look! I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit The innocent mansion of my love, my heart. Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief: Thy master is not there, who was, indeed, The riches of it. Do his bidding; strike, Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause, But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument! Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die; And if I do not by thy hand, thou art No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter There is a prohibition so divine, But—[heart: That savans my weak hand. Come, here's my Something's aforet':—Soft, soft! we'll no defence; Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here? The 4 scriptures of the loyal Leonatus, All turn'd to here'sy? Away, away, Corrupters of my faith! thou shall no more Be stalkers to my heart. Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: though those that are betray'd Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor Stands in worse case of woe. And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up My disobedience 'gainst the king my father, And make me put into contempt the suits Of princely 4 followers, shalt hereafter find It is no art of common passage, but A string of rareness: and I grieve myself, To think, when thou shalt be diseag'd by her That now thou 'stir'st on, how thy memory Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, dispatch: The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy knife? Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding, When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady! Since I receiv'd command to do this business, I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do'n, and to bed, then.

Pis. I'll crack mine eye-balls first.

Imo. And wherfore, then, Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd So many miles with a pretence? this place! Mine own, and thine own? our horses' labor? The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court, For my being absent; whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far, To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand, Th' elector dead before thee?

Pis. But to win time, To lose so bad employment; in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady, Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak: I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear, Therein false struck, can take no greater wound, Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam, I thought you would not lack again.

Imo. Most like, Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither: But if I were as wise as honest, then My purpose would prove well. It cannot be, But that my master is abus'd: Some villain, ny, and singular in his art, Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life. I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis command'd I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court, And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow, What shall I do the while? where hide? how live? Or in my life what comfort, when I am Dead to my husband?

---""
If you'll back to the court,—
I'm. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that hard, noble, simple, empty nothing,
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you abide.
I'm. Where then?

Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I'the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest: pr'ythee, think
There's livers out of Britain.

I am most glad
You think of other place. Th' ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That, which, 'tis appear, must not yet be,
But by self-danger, you should tread a course
Privy, yet full of view: yes, happily, near
The residence of Posthumans; so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

You must forget to be a woman; change
Commend'd into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or more truly,
Woman it pretty self) into a waggish carriage:
Ready in giles, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the wench: nay, you must forget
That rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Ah, then no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing & Titan; and forget
Your laborious and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

First, make yourself but like one.
Forethinking this, I have already fit
(Tis in my cloak-bag) doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: would you, in their serving
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'tis noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy, (which you will make him know,
If that his head have ear in music) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honorable,
And, doublding that, most holy. Your means abroad,
You have 4 me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplement.

Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. In the way:
There's more to be consider'd, but we'll even
All that good time will give us. This attempt
I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Well, madam, we must take a short farewell,
Leant, being miss'd, I, be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box; I had it from the queen:

What's in't is precious: if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-quam'd at land, a drum of this
Will drive away distemper.—To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood.—May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Amen. I thank thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.
Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself,
To show less sovereignty than they must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir. I desire of you
A conduct over land to Milford-Haven.—

Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you!
Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;
The due of honor in no point omit.

So, farewell, noble Lucius.
Luc. Your hand, my lord.
Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time forth
I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.
Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!

[I Exeunt Lucius and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honors us,
That we have given him cause.

'Tis all the better
You valiant Britons have their wishes in it.
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us, therefore, ripely,
Our churlish and our horsemen be in readiness:
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business,
But must be look'd to industriously, and strongly.
Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looks us like
A thing more made of malice, than of duty:
We have noted it.—Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in suspense.

[Exit an Attendant.

Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been; the care whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady
So tender of rebuke, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?

Please you, sir;
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer
That will be given to the loud at noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pr'yed me to excuse her keeping close;
Whereeto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty loose unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proferr: this
She wish'd me to make known, but our great count
Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd?

Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I Fear prove false! [Exit.]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,
I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.— [Exit Clo.]

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus,
He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence
Forced by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Happly, despair hath seiz'd her;
Or, wing'd with fervor of her love, she's flown
To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is
To death, or to dishonor; and my end
Can make good use of either: she being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter Clo.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'Tis certain, she is fled.

Go in, and cheer the king: he gapes; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: may
This night      forstall him of the coming day!

[Exit Queen.

Clo. I love, and hate her, for she's fair and royal;
And that she hath all courtly parts, more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, a woman: from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded,
Outcells them all. I love her therefore; but,
Dismissing me, and throwing favors on
The low Posthumus, shanders so her judgment,
That what's else rare is chok'd: and in that point
I will conclude to hate her: may, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her: for, when fools shall—

Enter Pisanio.

Who is here?—What? are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither. Ah, you precious pandar! Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straightforward with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter—
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A drum of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord! How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;
No further halting: satisfy me home
What is become of her!

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain!

Discover where thy mistress is, at once,
At the next word.—No more of worthy lord,—
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her Flight. [Presenting a Letter.]

Clo. Let's see.'—I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns by this,
May prove his travel, not her danger.

* * * * *

Clo. Humph!

Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead.

O Imogen,
Safe me not thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't.—Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villain soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly, and truly, I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, be but a diligent follower of mine. Will thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit bither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven. I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember anon.—Even there thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee. —I would, these garments were come. She said upon a time (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her; first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valor, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insult ended on his dead body, and when my host hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised) to the count I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisanio, with the Clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true performance shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it.—Come, and be true.

[Exit.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to thy less: for true to thee We're to prove false, which I will never be To him that is most true.—To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursu'est. Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed Be cross'd with slowness; labor be his meed!—

SCENE VI.—Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter I莫GEN, attired like a Boy.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one:
I have 'tir'd myself, and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed: I should be sick,
SCENE VII.  Cymbeline.

But that my resolution helps me.—Milford,
When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken.  O Jove! I think,
Enamoured by the wretched; such, I mean, [me,
Where they should be relev'd. Two beggars told
I could not miss my way: will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them, knowing'tis
A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true: to lapse in fulness
Is 'sorer, than to lie for need; and falsehood
Is 'sorer, than to lie for king;—two beggars.—My dearest lord!
Thou art one of the false ones: now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food.—But what is this?

[Seeing the Cave.]
Here is a path to it: 'tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call; yet famine,
Bro clean it o'erthrew nature, makes it vallant.
Plenty, and peace, breed cowards; hardness ever
Of hardiness is mother.—Ho! Who's here?
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then, I'll enter.
Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a foe, good heavens!—[Exit into the Cave.]
Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman.
Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I, [and
Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry, and die,
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs
Will make what's homely, savoury: weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when 'sally sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thyself.
Guil. I am thoroughly weary.
Arc. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.
Guil. There is cold meat 'tis the cave: we'll browse
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd. [On that,
Bel. Stay: come not in.
[Looking in.
But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.
Guil. What's the matter, sir?
Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon:—Behold divinness
No elder than a boy!
Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took. Good tworth, [Found
I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I had Gold straw'd I the floor. Here's money for my
I would have left it on the board, so soon [meat:
As I had made my meal, and parted
With prayers for the provider.
Guil. Money, youth?
Arc. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt;
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see, you are angry.
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.
Bel. Whither bound?
Imo. To Milford-Haven.
Bel. What's your name?
Guil. Be this thy father? Sir, I have a kinsman, who Is bound for Italy: he embark'd at Milford;
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fallen in this offence.

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth, Think us no churchs, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd.
'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart; and thanks, to stay and eat it.
Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard, but he your groom.—In honesty,
I bid for you, as I do buy.
Arc. I'll make't my comfort,
He is a man: I'll love him as my brother;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him
After long absence, such is yours.—Most welcome.
Be sprightly, for you fall amongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends! If brothers?—[Aside.] Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons: then, had my prize
Been less; and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He 'wrings at some distress.
Gui. Would I could free't!
Arc. Or I; whate'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!
Bel. Hurk, boys. [Whispering.
Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue
Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by
That nothing gift of flourishing multitudes)
Could not out-peir these twins. Pardon me, gods!
I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come in:
Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have sup'd,
We'll merrily demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.
Arc. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome,
Imo. Thanks, sir.
Arc. I pray, draw near.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenor of the emperor's writ:
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full well to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius pro-consul; and to you, the tribunes,
For this immediate levy he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Caesar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereabouts your levy
Must be supplied: the words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty.
[Exeunt.]
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mopped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 'tis said, not woman's fitness comes by fits. Therefore I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber) I mean, the lines of my body are as well-drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions; yet this perverse errant thing loves him in my despair. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rash usage, but my mere power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: out, sword, and to a sore purpose. Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place, and the fellow daren't deceive me.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. You are not well: [To Imogen.] remain here in the cave:
We'll come to you after hunting.

Arn. Brother, stay here: [To Imogen.]

Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be;
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gu. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not,—yet I am not well;
But I am a woman: a woman's heart is,
To seem to die, ere sick. So please you, leave me;
Stick to your journal course: the breach of custom
Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by me
Cannot amend me: society is no comfort
To one not sociable. I am not very sick,
Since I can reason of it: pray you, trust me here;
I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,
Staying so poorly.

Gu. I love thee; I have spoke it:
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.

Bel. What! how? how?

Arn. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why
I ought his youth; and I have heard you say,
Love's reason without reason: the hier at door,
And a demand who is not shall die, I'd say,
My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:
Nature hath meal and brau; contempt and grace.

Bel. [Aside.] The ninth hour of the mom. I am not their father: yet who this should be Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.—
'Tis the ninth hour of the mom.

Arn. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arn. You health.—So please you, sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods,
What lies I have heard!
Our courtiers say, all's savage but at court:
Experience, O! then disprove'st report.
Th' impious sea breed monsters: for the dish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still; heart-sick. Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug.

Gu. I could not stir him:
He said, he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.
Arn. Thus did he answer me: yet said, hereafter
I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!—
We'll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.

Arn. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our house-wife.

Imo. Well, or ill, I am bound to you.

Bel. And shall be ever. [Exit Imogen.
This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.

Arn. How angel-like he sings.

Gu. But his next cookery; he cut our roots in Characters;
And some, our brothers, as Juno had been sick,
And he her dieter.

Arn. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors pull at.

Gu. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.

Arn. Grow, patience! And let the sinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away! Who's there?

[They stand back.

Enter Cloten

Clo. I cannot find those runagates: that villain
Hath mock'd me.—I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates! Methinks he do us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush,
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he.—We are held as outlaws: hence!—

Gu. He is but one. You and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.

Clo. That fly me thus? some villiata mountaineers?
I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gu. A thing
More shalvis did I no'or, than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.
Scene II.

Cymbeline.

Gui. To whom? to thee? What art thou? Have A grown man as big as thou? [Exit.]
I thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I hear not My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art,
Why I should yield to thee.

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Well, what thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave thee them. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it: were it toad, oradder, spider,
'Twould move me sooner.

Gui. To thy farther fear,
Nay, to thy more confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

Gui. I am sorry for't, not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afraid?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear, the wise:
At told I laugh, not fear them.

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that now even fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads.
Yield, rustic, mountaineer. [Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No company abroad. [sure.

Arv. None in the world. You did mistake him,
I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing bluer' those lines of b favor
Which then he wore: the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute,
'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had no apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for th' effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear. But see, thy brother.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,
There was no money in't. Not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none;
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what; cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen after his own report; The law
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in; [grow,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they
And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But what more to take, our honour more to lose?
The law Protects not us; then, why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threaten us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself,

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humor
Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness, could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing,
(As it is like him) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in, yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so sufficiently, on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; And let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I fetch.

Bel. I fear, 'twill be reveng'd.

Gui. Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't, though Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursued me.—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much,
 Thou last rob'd me of this deed: I would revenge,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us
And put us to some answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done.

We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock:
You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay
Till lusty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!

Bel. I willingly to him: to gain his color,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity.

Gui. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st
In these two blessed boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not waggling his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood encafl'd, as the rudest wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd, honor unbought,
Civility not seen from other, valor
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange,
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream
In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage

ACT IV.

For his return. [Solemn Music. Bel. My ingenious instrument! Hark, Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark! Gui. Is he at home? Bel. He went hence even now. Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dearest mother. It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter? Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys, Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys. Is Cadwal mad? Re-enter Arviragus, bearing in his Arms Imogen, as dead. Bel. Look! here he comes, And brings the dire occasion in his arms Of what we blame him for. Gui. The bird is dead, That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty, To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch, Than have seen this. Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily! My brother wears thee not the one half so well, As when thou grew'st thyself. Bel. O, melancholy! Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find The ozee, to show what coast thy sluggish care Might castihest harbor in?—Thou bless'd thing! Jove knows what man thou might'st have made; but I, Thou tend'st a most rare boy, of melancholy.— How found you him? Arv. Stark, as you see: Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber, Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek Reposing on a cushion. Gui. Where? Arv. O' the floor; His arms thus leagued: I thought he slept, and put My clouted brownes from-off my feet, whose rude Answer'd my steps too loud. [Exeunt Arv. Gui. Why, he but sleeps; If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed: With female fairies will his tomb be haunted, And worms will not come to thee. Arv. With fairest flowers, Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor The azur'd bare-ball, like thy veins; no, nor The leafy eglantine, whom not to slander, Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock would, With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming; Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie Without a monument!) bring thee all this; Yea, and fur'd moss besides, when flowers are none, To winter-guard'd thy corse. Gui. Pr'ythee, have done; And do not play in witch-like words with that Which is so serious. Let us bury him, And not protract with admiration what Is now due debt.—To the grave! Arv. Say, where shall's lay him? Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother. Arv. Be't so: And let us, Polydore, now that our voices Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground, As once our mother: use like note, and words, Save that Euriphile must be Fidele. Gui. Cadwal, I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee; For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse Than priests and fanes that lie. Arv. We'll speak it; then. Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicize the less; for Cloten Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys; And, though he came our enemy, remember, He was paid for that: though mean and mighty, Together, have one dust, yet reverence, [Rotting (That angel of the world) doth make distinction. Of place 'twixt high and low. Our foe was princely, And though you took his life, as being our foe, Yet bury him as a prince. Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither. Thersites' body is as good as Ajax, When neither's alive. Arv. If you'll go fetch him, We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin. [Exeunt Belarius. Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the My father hath a reason for't. [Exeunt. Gui. 'Tis true. Arv. Come on then, and remove him. Arv. So.— Begin. song. Gui. Fear no more the heat of the sun, Nor the furious winter's rage; Thou thy worldly task hast done, Home art gone, and to 'e' thy wages: Golden lads and lasses must, As chimney-sweepers, come to dust. Arv. Fear no more the frozen grove, Thou art past the tyrant's stroke; Care no more to clothe, and eat; To thee the rood is as the oak: The sceptre, earing, physic, must All follow this, and come to dust. Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash, Nor the alder-dreaded thunder-stone; Gui. Fear not slander, 1 consure rash; Arv. Thou hast fast'm'd joy and mean: Both. All lovers young, all lovers must 1 Consign to thee, and come to dust. Gui. No exorciser harm thee! Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee! Gui. Ghost untwist forebear thee! Arv. Nothing ill come near thee! Both. Quiet consumption have; And renowned be thy grave! Re-enter Belarius, with the body of Cloten. Gui. We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down. [They place him beside Imogen. Bel. Here's a few flowers, but about midnight more: The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night, Are strewings fitt'st for graves.—Upon their faces, You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so These herb'lets shall, which we upon you strew.— Come on, away; apart upon our knees. The ground that gave them first has them again: Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain. [Exeunt Belarius, Guidermus, and Arviragus.
From the spungy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,
(Unless my sins abuse my divination)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here,
Without his top? The rung speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building.—How? a page—
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead rather;
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord,
Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—Young Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
'Tis, one,
They crave to be demanded. Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?
Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be worse better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton, and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain.—Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wonder
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

'Look, good youth! Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining,
Than thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. [Aside.] If I do lie,
And do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon.—Say you, sir?
Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.
Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name,
Witt take thy chance with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consular voice, should not sooner,
Than thine own worth, prefer thee: go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pitchaxes can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd
And on it said a century of prayers, [His grave,
Such as I can, twice to me, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—My friends,
The boy hath taught us many duties: let us
Find out the prettiest daizied plot we can
And make him with our pikes and partitions
A grave: come, arm him.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us, and he shall be inter'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisanio.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with
A fever with the absence of her son; [Her.

Cymbeline's palace.
A madness, of which her life's in danger.—Heavens, How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen, The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen Upon a desperate bed, and in a time When fearful wars point at me; her son gone, So needful for this present: it strikes me past The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow, Who needs must know of her departure, and Despise so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours, I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress, I nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your high- Hold me your loyal servant. [Exeunt.]

1 Lord. Good my liege, The day that she was missing he was here: I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform All parts of his subjection truly. For Cloten, There wants no diligence in seeking him, And I will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome: We'll slip you for a season; but with jealousy. [To Pisano.

You Yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your majesty, The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn, Are landed on your coast, with a supply Of Roman gentlemen by the senate sent. Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!— I am amaz'd with matter. [Exeunt.]

1 Lord. Good my liege, Your preparation can afford no less [ready. Thine what you hear of: come more, for more you're The want is, but to put those powers in motion, That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw, And mete the time, as it seeks us: we fear not What can from Italy annoy us, but We grieve at chances here.—Away! [Exeunt.]

Pis. I had no letter from my master, since I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'Tis strange: Nor hear from my mistress, who did promise To yield me often tidings; neither know I What is betid to Cloten, but remain People'd in all the heavens still must work. Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true, to be true: These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the 4note o' the king, or I'll fall in them. All other doubts by time let them be clear'd; Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd.

SCENE IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.Bel. Let us from it.Arr. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it From action and adventure?Gui. Nay, what hope Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us For barbarous and unnatural revolts During their use, and slay us after.Bel. Sons, We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us. To the king's party there's no going: newness Of Cymbeline's death (we being not known, not must'd Among the hands) may drive us to a friend Where we have liv'd; and so extort from 's that Which we have done, whose answer would be death Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt, In such a time nothing becoming you, Nor satisfying us.Arr. It is not likely, That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes And ears so cloy'd importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon our note, To know from whence we are.Bel. O! I am known Of many in the army: many years, Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him From my remembrance; and, besides, the king Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves, Who find in my exile the want of breeding, The certainty of this hard life: nay, hopeless To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd, But to be still but summer's paintings, and The thinking slaves of winter. Than be so, Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army: I and my brother are not known; yourself, So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown, Cannot be question'd.

Arr. By this sun that shines, I'll stay with you. What thing is't, that I never Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood, But that of coward hares, hot geese, and venison? Never bestrid a horse, save one that had A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel, Nor iron, on his heel? I am asham'd To look upon the holy sun, to have The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining So long a poor unknown. By heavens, I'll go. If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave, I'll take the better care; but if you will not, The hazard therefore due fall on me by The hands of Romans.

Arr. So say I. Amen.Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you act So slight a valuation, should reserve My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys. If in your country wars you chance to die, That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie: Lead, lead! The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn, Till it fly out, and show them princes born. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd Thou shouldst be color'd thus. You married ones, If each of you should take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves, For a wrying but a little!—O, Pisania! Every good servant does not all commands;

1 "To a tender," i.e., to an acknowledgment.— 2 "Their quarter'd fires," i.e., the fires in the respective quarters of the Roman army.— 3 "Upon our note," i.e., in noticing us.— 4 "The certainty," i.e., the certain conception.— 5 "For wryings," i.e., for deviating from the right way.
Scene III.

No head, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you should have't a vengeance on my faults, I never had liv’d to put it on this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck
Me, with more worth your vengeance. But, alack!

You smite some for mine little faults; that’s love,
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ‘em with tis, each later worse,
And make men dread it, to the door’s thrust.
But Imogen is your own: do your best wills,
And make me bless’d to obey!—I am brought hither
Among the Italian gent, and to fight
Against my lady’s kingdom: 8 this enough.
That, Britain, I have kill’d thy mistress; peace!
I’ll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heav’n, Hear patiently my purpose. I’ll discourse of These Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I’ll fight
Against the part I come with; so I’ll die
For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life Is. taken: it breaks, a death: and thus unknown,
Pitied or hated, to the face of peril
Myself I’ll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valor in me, than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o’ the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o’ the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit.

Scene II.—The Same.

Trumpets and Drums. Enter at one Side, Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army: at the other Side, the British Army; Leonatus Posthumus following like a poor Soldier. They march ever and go out in Alarms. Then enter again in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquish’d and disarmed Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Alarms on both sides.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on’t
Revengingly enfeebles me; or could this 8 carl,
A very drudge of nature’s, have sub’d me
In my profession! Knighthoods and honors, borne
As I wear mine, are tis a but of scorn.
If that thy gentility, Britain, go before
This long, as he excels our lords, the odds.
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods.
[Exit.

Alarms. The Battle continues: the Britons fly;
Cymbeline is taken: then enter, to his rescue,
Belarius, Gualerius, and Arviragus.

Bcl. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground.
The line is guarded: nothing routs us, but
The villany of our foes.

Out. Arv. Stand, stand, and fight!

Alarms. Enter Posthumus, and second the Britons; they rescue Cymbeline, and excunt: then, enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder’s such
As war were hood-wrick’d.

Iach. Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn’d strangely: or betimes
Let’s re-enforce, or fly. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a 9 Briton Lord.

Lord. Cam’st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did;

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought. The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the bands of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane: the enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaughterings, having work
More plentiful than tools to do, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch’d, some falling Merely through fear; 4 that the strait pass was damn’d
With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen’d shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, d’th’ gall, and wall’d with Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
A brush of wood, a wall of water.
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for country: adiworth the lane,
He, with two striplings, (fads more like to run
The country 9 base, than to commit such slaughter;
With faces fit for masks, or, rather, fairer
Than those for preservation cast’d, or 9 Shame)
Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
“Our Britain’s stature die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet souls that fly backards! Stand;
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may save,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand P—These Three thousand confident, in act as many, 8 three,
And three performers in the file, when that
The rest do nothing) with this word, 9 stand, stand! 9
Accommodated by the place, more charming
With their own nobleness (which could have turn’d
A distuff to a lance) gilded pale looks,
[coward Part shone, part spirit renew’d; that some, turn’d
But by example (O, a sin in war,
Damn’d in the first beginners!) 9 gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o’ the hunters. Then began
A stop i’ the chaser, a retire; anon,
A rout, confusion thick; forthwith they fly,
Chickens, the way which they stomp’d eagles; slaves,
The strides they victors made. And now our cowards
(Like fragments in a violent voyage) became
The life o’ the need; having found the back-door open
Of the ungarded hearts, Heavens, how they wound!
Some slain before; some dying; some, their friends,
O’er-born i’ the former wave: ten clav’d by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those that would die or ere resist are grown
The mortal 9 bugs o’ the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys?

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv’d! the Britons, was the Romans’ lane.”

Lord. Nay, do not angry, sir.

Post. [Lock! to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe, I’ll be his friend;
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord.

Farewell; you are angry. [Exit.

Post. Still going?—This is a lord. O noble misery!

To be i' the field, and ask, what news, of me.

to-day, how many would have given their honors
To have had a' their carcasses? took heel to do't,

And yet died too? I, in mine own woe char'd,

Could not find death where I did hear him groan,

Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we

That draw his knives i' the war.—Well, I will find

For being now a favorer to the Briton,

[him; No more a Briton, I have resum'd again

The part I came in. Fight I will no more,

But yield me to the veriest buff, that shall

Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be

Britons must take; for me, my ransom's death:

On either side I come to spend my breath,

Where neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,

But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter Two Briton Captains, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken.

'Tis thought, the old man and his sons were angels.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave th' affront with them.

1 Cap. So 'tis reported;

But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is

Post. A Roman, [there? Who had not now been drouching here, if seconds

Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!

A leg of Rome shall not return to [service,

What crows have peck'd them here. He brings his

As if he were of note. Bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, attended; Belarius, Gud-derius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Jailer; after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter Posthumus, and Two Jailors.

1 Jail. You shall not now be stolen; you have locks upon you:

So, grasp as you find pasture.

2 Jail. Ay, or a stomach. [Eccent Jailors.

Post. Most welcome, bondage, for thou art a way,

I think, to liberty. Yet am I better

Than one that's sick o' the gout; since he had rather

Groom so in perpetuity, than be cur'd

By the sure physician, death, who is the key

'T umbar these locks. My conscience, thou art set

give me

More than my shanks, and wrists; you good gods,

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt,

Then, free for ever! Is't enough, I am sorry?

So children temporal fathers do appease;

Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repeat? I cannot do it better in *gives,

Desir'd, more than constrains. To satisfy,

If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take

No stricter render of me than my all.

I know, you are more element than vile men,

Who of their broken debtors take a third,

A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again

On their abatement: that's not my desire.

For Imogen's dear life, take mine; and though

'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:

'Twenn man and man they weigh not every stamp,

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:

You riper mine, being yours; and so, great powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,

And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!

I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.

Solemn Music. Enter, as an Apparition, Sicilus Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, on old Man attired like a Warrior; leading in his Hand an ancient Matron, his Wife and Mother to Posthumus, with Music before them: then, after other Music, follow the Two young Leonatii, Brothers to Posthumus, with Wounds as they died in the Wars. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:

With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,

That thy adulteries

Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well?
Whose teen I never saw
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd;

Attending nature's law.

Whose father, then, (as men report,

Thou orphans' father art)

Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him

From this earth-voxing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent me her aid,

But took me in my throes;

That from me was Posthumus ript,

Came crying amongst his foes,

A thing of pity.

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,

Moulded the stuff so fair,

That he deserv'd the praise o' the world,

As great Sicilus' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,

In Britain where was he,

That could stand up his parallel,

Or fruitful object be

In eye of Imogen, that best

Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,

To be exil'd, and thrown

From Leonat's seat, and east

From her he dearest one,

Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,

Slight thing of Italy,

To taint his nobler heart and brain

With needless jealousy;

And to become the geek and scorn

Of the other's villainy?

2 Bro. For this from stiffer seats we came,

Our parents, and 2 we twain,

That striking in our country's cause

Fell fifty men, and were slain;

Our hearty, and Tananatis' right,

With honor to maintain.

1 Bro. Like harpiment Posthumus hath

To Cymbeline perform'd:

Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,

* "The glock," i. e., the foot.
Why last thou thus adjourn'd?
The grace for his merits due,
Being all to dolsor turn'd?
Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out:
No longer exercise,
Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries.
Math. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.
Sici. PEEP through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry,
To the shining synod of the rest,
Again thy deity.
2 Bro. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting Upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunderbolt; the Ghosts fall on their Knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low,
Shake off your hearing: lish — How dare you ghosts
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebellng costas?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:
Be not with mortal accidents opprest;
No care of yours it is; you know, 'tis ours.
When you best I love I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, a delighted: Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
Our temple was he married. — Rise, and fade! —
He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This bolt not lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
And so, away: no farther with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends.
Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Swoop'd, as to its foot; its ascension is More sweet than our bless'd fields. His royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter.
Sici. The marble pavement closes; he is enter'd
His radiant roof. — Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great lieutenant.

[ Ghosts vanish. ]

Post. [ Waking. ] Sleep, thou hast been a grand sire, and begot
A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother, and two brothers. But (O scorn!)
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born,
And so I am awake. — Poor wretches, that depend
On thee, the favorable; whom thou hast done:
Wake, and find nothing. — But, alas, I avenge;
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are sleep'd in favors; so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.

[ Finding the Tablet. ]

What fancies haunt this ground? A book! O, rare be not, as is our fangled work's remnant [one]
Noader than that it covers: let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our couriers,
As good as promise.

[ Remark. ] "When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be em braced by a piece of tender sir; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freely grow, then shall Posthuma Eend his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.""'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not; either both, or nothing:
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot unto. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Jailors.
Jail. Come, sir, are you ready for death?
Post. Overcool'd, that I am, ready long ago.
Jail. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.
Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators,
the dish pays the shot.
Jail. A heavy reckoning for you, sir; but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills, which are often the saddles of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in hast for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are 'paid too much; purge and brain both empty: the brain the heavier for being too light, the purge too light, being drawn of heaviness of body, this controversion your shall now be quit. — O, the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. — Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquaintance follows.
Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.
Jail. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache;
but when he sleeps your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.
Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.
Jail. Your death has eyes in his head, then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some one; thou hast to know, or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after-inquiry on your own peril;
and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think, you'll never return to tell one.
Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wank, and will not use them.
Jail. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles: bring your prisoner to the king.
Post. Thou bring'st good news. I am called to be made free.
Jail. I'll be hang'd, then.
Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a jailor; no bolts for the dead.

[ Exeunt Posthumus and Messenger. ]

Jail. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and beget young giblets, I never saw one so 'prone.
Yet, on my conscience, there are worse knives desire side live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so

* "Tongue, and brain not," i. e., talk, and understand not.
* "Fond here, and guiltless;" over come by the liquor.
* "Jump," i. e., hazard.
* "So prone," i. e., so prompt, ready.
should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good: O, there were desolations of jailors, and galowises! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in’t.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—CYMBELINE’S Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIU, ARVAGUS, PISANO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side you, whom the gods have Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart, [made That the poor soldier, that so richly bought, Whose rags shun’d gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp’d before targe of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one, that promis’d nought But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tiding of him?

Pis. He hath been search’d among the dead and But no trace of him. [living,

Cym. To my grief, I am The heir of his reward: which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain, By whom, I grant, she lives. 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are: report it.

Bel. Sir, In Cambrin we are born, and gentlemen. Farther to boast, were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees.— Arise, my knights o’ the battle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS AND LADIES.

There’s business in these faces. — Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o’ the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king! To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician Would this report become? But I consider, By medicine life may be prolong’d, yet death Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess’d, I will report, so please you: these her women Can trip me, if I err, who, with wet cheeks, Were present when she finish’d.

Cym. Pr’ythee, say.

Cor. First, she confess’d she never lov’d you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you: More than all your royalty, was wife to your place, Abbond’y your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed. [love

Cor. Your daughter, whom you bore in b’hand to With such integrity, she did confess Which, a scorpion to her sight; whose life, But that her flight preceded it, she had Ta’en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate friend! Who is’t can read a woman? — Is there more? [had Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, she

---

*“Targe,” i.e., target; shield.—A “to bear in hand” is to delude by false appearances.

“So fair,” i.e., so ready, dexterous.—4 “His favor,” i.e., his countenance.
What would'st thou, boy?
I love thee more and more; think more and more
What best to ask. Know'st thou look'st on it?
Speak.
Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?
Imo. He is a Roman; no mine to me, than I to thy highness, who, being born thy vassal,
Am something nearer.
Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.
Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.
Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely.
[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.]
Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?
Arr. One sand another
Not more resembles that sweet rosie lad,
Who died, and was Fidele.—What think you?
Guil. The same dead thing alive. [forbear.
Bel. Peace, peace! see farther; he eyes us not:
Crease may be alike: were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.
Guil. But we saw him dead.
Bel. Be silent; let's see farther.
Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress!
Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.
[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.]
Cym. Come, stand thou by our side:
Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [To IACHINO.] step
you forth;
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely,
Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,
Which is our honor, bitter torture shall
Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him.
Imo. My boon is, that the gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring.
Post. [Aside.] What's that to him?
Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,
How came it yours?
Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that
Which, were to be spoke, would torture thee.
Cym. How! me?
Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that,
Torment me to conceal. By villainy [which
I got this ring: 'twas Leonatus's jewel;
Whom thou didst banish; and (which more may grieve thee,
As it doth me) a nobler sir nester liv'd [lord?
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my
Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.
Cym. My daughter! what of her? renew thy strength:
I had rather I should'st live while nature will,
Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak.
Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour) it was in Rome, (accurs'd
The mansion where) 'twas at a feast, (O! would
Our viands had been poison'd, or at least
Those which I heav'ly to head) the good Posthumus, (That should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the best of all
Amongst the nast'rest of good ones) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty, that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for *feature, laming
the shrine of Venus, or *straight-pight Minerva,
Postures beyond brief nature; for *condition,
A shop of all the quails that make thee
Loves woman for; besides, that look of wiving,
Fairness, which strikes the eye:——
Cym. I stand on fire.
Come to the matter.
Iach. All too soon I shall, [mus,
Unless thou would'st grieve quickly.—This Posthumus
(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover) took his hint;
And, not disparaging whom we praise'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began [made,
His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were *crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
Provd us unspeaking sots.
Cym. Nay, my, to the purpose.
Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.
He spoke of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: wherewith, I, wretch,
Made scripule of his praise; and wager'd with him
Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he were Upon his hand'd finger, to be set in suit
In place of his bed, and win this ring
By her's and mine adulatory. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honor confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phoebus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the world in his ear. Away to Britain
Post in this design: well may you, sir;
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
Twixt amourous and villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not long ing, mine Italian brain
'Gun in your dailer Britain operate
Most visibly: for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with singular proof, enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,
(0 cunning, how I got it!) say, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon—
Methinks, I see him now.—
Post. Ay, so thou dost.
[Coming forward.
Italian fiend!—Ah me! most cretious fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright *justicer! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is
That all the abhorred o' the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter, villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself.
A sacrilegious thief, to do't!—The temple
Of virtue was she:—yên, and she herself
Spit, and threw stones, cast mire upon me; set
The dogs o' the street to buy me: every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and
Be villainous less than I was—[villain-like! woman! My queen, my life, my will! O Imogen, Imogen, Imogen!

---

Cymbeline.

Act V.

Imo.  Ponce, my lord! hear, hear!—
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,
There lie thy part.  [Striking her: she falls.
Pis.  O, gentlemen! help!
Mine, and your mistress.—O, my lord Posthumus!
You never killed Imogen till now.—Help, help!—
Mine honored lady!
Cym.  Does the world go round?
Post.  How come these stagger on me?
Pis.  Wake, my mistress!
Cym.  If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.
Pis.  How fares my mistress?
Imo.  O! get thee from my sight;
That gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.
Cym.  The tune of Imogen!
Pis.  Lady,
The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing? I had it from the queen.
Cym.  Now matter still?
Imo.  It poison'd me.
Pis.  O gods!
I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: if Pisanio
Have, said she, given his mistress that confession
With which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.
Cym.  What's this, Cornelius?
Cor.  The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vice, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was more dangerous, did compendium for her
A certain stuff, which, being taken, would cease
The present power of life; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?
Imo.  Most like I did, for I was dead.
Bel.  My boys,
There was our error.
Gui.  This is, sure, Fidele.  [you?
Imo.  Why did you throw your wedded lady from Think, that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again.  [Embracing Posthumus.
Post.  Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!
Cym.  How now! my flesh, my child?
What! mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?
Imo.  Your blessing, sir.  [Kneeling.
Bel.  Though you did love this youth, I blame ye
You had a motive for't. [not;
Cym.  To Guiderius and Arviragus.
Imo.  My tears that fall,
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.
Imo.  I am sorry for't, my lord.
Cym.  O! she was naught; and long of her it was,
That we meet here so strangely: but her son
Is safe, we know not how, nor where.
Pis.  My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord Cleton,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me [swore,
With his sword drawn; form'd at the mouth, and
If I discover'd not which way she was gone,

*"These stagger" 1. e., this madness.—"To tamper," 1. e., to compound; to mix.

It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a digested letter of my master's
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments
Which he inform'd from me, away he post
With some other purpose, and with oath to violate
My lady's honor: what became of him,
I farther know not.
Gui.  Let me end the story.
I slew him there.
Cym.  Marry, the gods foreordain!
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: 'pr'ythee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.
Gui.  I have spoke it, and I did it.
Cym.  He was a prince.
Gui.  A most unceivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me. I cut off's head;
And though right glad, he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.
Cym.  I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law. Thou art dead.
Imo.  That headless man
I thought had been my lord.
Cym.  Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.
Bel.  Stay, sir king.
This is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as myself; and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Cloten
Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone;
[To the Guard.
They were not born for bondage.
Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?
Arv.  In that he spoke too far.
Cym.  And thou shalt die for't.
Bel.  We will die all three;
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must
For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.
Arv.  Your danger's ours.
Gui.  And our good his.
Bel.  Have at it, then, by leave.
Thou hast'd, great king, a subject, who was call'd
Belarius.
Cym.  What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.
Bel.  He it is that hath
Assum'd this age; indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how, a traitor.
Cym.  Take him hence.
The whole world shall not save him.
Bel.  Not too hot;
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.
Cym.  Bel.  I am too blunt, and saucy; here's my knee;
Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine:
They are the issue of your loins, my liege.
And blood of your begetting.

Cym.

Pll.

How! my issue?

Cym.

Dost.

So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,

Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:

Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd

Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes

(For such, and so they are) these twenty years

Have I train'd up; those arts they have, as I

Gave them into them, are my as Arvius, sir,

As your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,

Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;

Having receiv'd the punishment before,

For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty

Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,

The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd

Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,

Here are your sons again; and I must lose

Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.—

The benediction of these covering heavens

Fall on their heads like dew; for they are worthy

To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym.

Belt.

Thee weep'st, and speak'st.

This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,

Most worthy prince, as your's is true Guiderius:

That after this strange starting from your orbs,

You may reign in them now.—O Imogen!

Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo.

No, my lord;

I have not two worlds by't.—O, my gentle brothers!

Have we thus met? O! never say hereafter,

But I an, truest speaker: you call'd me brother,

When I was but your sister; I you brothers,

When you were so indeed.

Cym.

Did you o'er meet?

Arr.

Ay, my good lord.

Gvt.

And at first meeting lov'd;

Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor.

By the queen's dear she swallow'd.

Cym.

What shall I bear all through? This 'twas

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which [ment

Distinction should be rich d in. — Where? how liv'd you?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive?

How parted with your brothers? how first met them?

Why fle'd you from the court, and whither? These,

And your three motives to the battle, with

I know not how much more, should be demanded,

And all the other by-dependencies. From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place,

Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,

Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;

And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye

On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting

Each object with a joy: the counterchange

Is severely at all. Let's quench this ground,

And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—

Thou art my brother: so we'll hold thee ever.

[To Belarius.

Imo.

You are my father, too; and did relieve me,

To see this gracious season.

Cym.

All o'erjoy'd,

Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,

For they shall taste our comfort. My good master,

I will yet do you service.

Luc.

Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,

He would have well become this place, and grac'd

The thankings of a king;

Post.

I am, sir,

The soldier that did company these three

In poor beseeing: 'twas a foment for

The purpose I then follow'd.—That I was he,

Speak, Lucimio: I had you down, and might

Have made you finish.

Jach.

I am down again; [Kneeling

But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,

As then your force did, Take that life, beseech you,

Which I so often owe; but your ring first,

And here the bracelet of the truest princess

That ever swore her faith.

Post.

Kneel not to me:

The power that I have on you is to spare you;

The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,

And deal with others better.

Cym.

Nobly Doom'd.

We'll learn our freecess of a son-in-law:

Pardon the word to all.

Are.

You help us, sir,

As you did mean indeed to be our brother;

Joy'd are we, that you are.

[Rom.

Post.

Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of

Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought,

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,

Appear'd to me, with other sprightly shews

Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found

This label on my bosom; whose containing

Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it: let him show

His skill in the construction.

Luc.

Philarmonus!

Sooth. Here, my good lord. [Coming forward.

LUC.

Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] “When as a lion's whelp shall,

to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which being dead many years shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.”

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;

The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-nntus, doth import so much,
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

[To Cymbeline.

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were *clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee; and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin.—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;

* "Clipp'd about," i. e., embraced.

Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and hers
Have laid most heavy hand.
Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
Th' imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favor with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward. Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Lud's town march,
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there!—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

[Exeunt.

SCENE, dispersedly in various Countries.

ACT I.

Enter *Gower.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come;
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eves, and holy ales,
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives:
The purpose is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,

* Chorus, in the character of Gower, an old English poet, who has related the story of this play in his Confessio
Amantis.—"Old," i.e., of old.—"Also," i.e., Whitson;

And that to hear an old man sing,
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.—
This Antioch, then: Antiochus the great
Brought this city for his chiefest seat:
The fairest in all Syria;
I tell you what my authors say:
This king unto him took a *feere,
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of *face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad child, worse father, to entice his own
To evil, should be done by none.
By custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin.

4 "A feere," i.e., a mate or companion.—"Full of face," i.e., exceedingly beautiful.—Account for accounted.
The beauty of this sorrowful dame
Made many princes thither frame,
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage pleasures play-fellow:
While others stood without,
To keep her still and men in awe,
That whose ask’d her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So, for her many a wight did die,
As yond’ grim looks do testify.
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify.
[Exit.]

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large
The danger of the task you undertake.
[receiving’d
Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul
Embraced with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise.
[Music.
Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, (till Lucina reign’d)
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The semete-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See, where she comes, apparel’d like the spring,
Grace and her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every sphere given renown to all:
Her face, the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever mas’d, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
Ye gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflam’d desire in my breast,
To taste the fruit of you celestial tree;
Or die in the adventure, be my help,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—
Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch’d;
For death-like dangerous hosts have offered it hard:
Her face, like heaven, cuteth thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heart must die.
Yond’ sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance pale,
That, without covering, save yond’ field of stars,
They here stand mighty, slain in Cupid’s wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
For I going on death’s not, whom none resist.

Antiochus, I thank thee, who hast taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those stanch objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I trust:
For death remember’d should be like a mirror,
Who tells us, life’s but breath; to trust it, error,
I’ll make my will, then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,
Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did:
So, I bequeath a happy peace to you,
And all good men, as every prince should do;
My riches to the end from whence they came,
But my unspotted fire of love to you.
[To the Daughter of Antiochus.
Thus, ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow.
Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion, then;
Which read and not expounded, ’tis deceived,
As they that love thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. Of all, say’d yet, may’st thou prove pros.
Of all, say’d yet, I wish thee happiness. [perous!
Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness, and courage.

The Riddle.
I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother’s flesh, which did me breed;
I sought a husband, in which labor,
I found that kindness in a father;
He’s father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last: but, O! you powers,
That give heaven countless eyes to view men’s acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light, I lov’d you, and could still,
Wept I and sacred, as I appurled you
But I must tell you, now, my thoughts revolv;
For he’s no man on whom perfections & wait,
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You’re a fair viol, and your sense the strings,
Who, finger’d to make man his lawful music,
[en;
Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hear;
But being play’d upon before your time,
Hill only danceth as harsh a chime.
Good south, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
For that’s an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time’s expir’d:
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great prince, few love to hear the sins they love to act;
’Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He’s more secure to keep it shut, than shown;
For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in others’ eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear;
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts [throw’d
Cop’d hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is
By man’s oppression; and the poor worm death die for’t.
Kings are earth’s gods; in vice their law’s their will,
And if Jove stray, who dares say love doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.
All love the womb that their first beings bred,
Then, give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. [Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found the meaning;
[of Tyre,
But I will glaze with him. [To him.] Young prince
Though before thee, or in the presence of our state edict,
Your exposition misappraint;

That is, no perfect or honest man.—Cop’d, i.e., contain’d—Glorio, i.e., flatter; minute.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

We might proceed to cancel of your b days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a true
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise.
Forty days longer we do respite you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows, we'll joy in such a son:
And until then your entertain shall be,
As doth befit our honor, and your wouth.

[Exeunt Antiochus, his Daughter, and Attendants.

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight.
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain, you were not so bad,
As with due incest to abuse your soul;
Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely claspings with your child,
(Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father)
And she an enter of her mother's flesh,
By the detaining of her parent's bed;
And both like serpents are, who thought you feel
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the light:
One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
To what end's as near to lust, as fire to smoke.
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame;
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you safe,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.

Re-enter Antiochus.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for which
To have his head. [we mean
He must not live to trumpet forth my infancy,
Nor tell the world, Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner:
And therefore instantly this prince must die;
For by his fall my honor must keep high.
Who attends us there?

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thaliard,
You're of our chamber, and our mind partakes
Her private actions to your secrecy;
And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold;
We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him:
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. Upon my lord.
'Tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough.
Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mes. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.

[Exit Messenger.

Ant.
Wilt live, fly after: and, as an arrow, shot
From a well-experienced archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so ne'er return,
Unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I
Can get him once within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure: so, farewell to your highness.

[Exit.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu.—Till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succor to my head. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Per. Let none disturb us: why should this change
Of thoughts?
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me so 's a guest, is not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,
The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet.

[them,
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun
And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems for too short to hit me here;
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then, it is thus: that passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done:
And so with me it the great Antiochus.
(’Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act)
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;
Nor boots it me to say, I honor,
If he suspect I may dishonor him:
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop it can by which it might be known.
With hostile forces he'll overspread the land,
And with the utmost of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that no'e'r thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,
(Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them)
Makes both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before, that he would punish.

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast.

2 Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
Peaceful and comfortable.

Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king's that flatter him:
For flattery is the bellow's blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err:
When signior Sooth, here, does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'er-look
What shipping, and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exit Lords. Helicanus,
Thou hast more days: what seest thou in our looks?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from
They have their nourishment? [whence

Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.

Hel. I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.

* "Mis-dread," i. e., dread of evil. — "Outcast," i. e., appearance; show.— "That blast," i. e., the blast of flattery.

57
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT I.

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the court. Here must I kill Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: 'tis dangerous.

—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for it; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the —inducement of his oath to be one. —Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helicanus, Becanes, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre, farther to question me of your king's departure: his seal'd commissiion, left in trust with me, doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. What! How the king gone? Hel. If farther yet you will be satisfied, why, as it were unbecoming of your loves, he would depart, I'll give some light unto you. Being at Antioch—

Thal. What from Antioch?

Hel. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not) Took some displeasure at him: at least, he judged And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd, [so] To show his sorrow he correct himself; So puts himself unto the shipman's toil, With whom each minute threatens life or death. Thal. Well, I perceive I shall not be hang'd now, although I would; But since he's gone, the king's seal must please: He 'scap'd the land, to perish at the sea.— I'll present myself. —To them. Peace to the lords of Tyre.

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome. Thal. From him I come, With message unto princely Pericles: But how the land I have understood, Your lord hath betook himself to unknown travels, My message must return from whence it came. Hel. We have no reason to desire it, Commanded to our master, not to us: Yet, ero you shall depart, this we desire, As friends to Antioch we may feast in Tyre.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Tharsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Cleon, Dionyzas, and Attendants.

Cleon. My Dionyzas, shall we rest us here, And by relating tales of others' griefs, See if 'twill teach us to forget our own? Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it; For who digs hills because they do aspire, Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher. O my distressed lord! even such our griefs; Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes, But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cleon. O Dionyzas, Who wanteth food, and will not say he wanteth it, Or can conceal his hunger, till he famish?

["Convise," i.e., overcome.—"Shine," i.e., splendor; latter.—That is, "intrusts himself to the danger of the sea; that is, commended to our master," i.e., "as it is to our master."
Scene IV.

Pericles, Prince of Tyre.

Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep, [louder;
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them
That if heaven slumber, while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And, wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, sir. [ment.

Cle. This Tharsus, 'er which I have the govern-
A city, on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets,
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss'd the clouds,
And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jetted, and adorn'd,
Like petty sail'ther's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were storr'd full to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O! 'tis too true. [change.

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our
These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea, and air,
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise:
Those palates, who not yet two summers younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who too nouse'd up their babies
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To cut those little darlings whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots, who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

Cle. O! let those cities, that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears:
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.

Lord. Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste,
For comfort is too far for us to expect. [shore,

Cle. We have descried, upon our neighboring
A pretty sail of ships make litherward.
Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes, but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours.

Some neighboring nation, taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy men,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,
And come to us as favorers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him that's a turn'd to repeat;
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will, and what they can,
What need we fear?
The ground's the lowest, and we are half way there.

Go, tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he doth.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter Pericles, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be, like a beacon fire'd, to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets:
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load:
And these our ships you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse, was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are storr'd with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger storr'd half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arose, I pray you, arise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harborage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unkindness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen)
Your grace is welcome to our town and us. [while,

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

[Exeunt.

Act II.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I 'wis, to incest bring;
A better prince, and benign lord,
That will prove an awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in trouble's reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation
(To whom I give my benison)
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can:
And to remember what he does,
Build his statute to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter at one door Pericles, talking with Cleon;
All the Train with them. Enter at another door,
A Gentleman, with a Letter to Pericles: Peri-
Cles shows the Letter to Cleon; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt
Pericles, Cleon, &c. severally.

Gow. Good Heliaclean, hath stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone.

* "If he on peace consist," i. e., if he stands on peace.

"You happily," i. e., which you perhaps. "Was stuff'd," i.
. e., which was stuff'd. "I 'wis," i. e., I think. "A better prince," i.
. e., you have seen a better prince. "Awful," i.
. e., entitled to reverence. "In conversation," i.
. e., in conduct, behavior.

"Benison," i. e., benediction; blessing.

"Thinks all is writ he spoken can," i. e., thinks all be (Pericles) can speak is as true as holy writ.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

From others' labors; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive;
And, to fulfill his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that hap in Tyre:
How Thaïsard came full bent with sin,
And hid intent, to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, knowing so, put forth to sea,
When men been, there's seldom ease.
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above, and deeps below,
Make such unquiet, that the ship,
Should house him safe, is wreck'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tossed.
All perished of man, of self,
Ne ought escape but himself;
Till fortune, tired with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad:
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gover; this longs the text.

[Exit.

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Seaside.

Enter PERICLES, etc.

Per. Yet cease your ire, ye angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shores to shore, and left me breath
Nothing to think on, but causing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers,
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watry grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pitch!
2 Fish. Ho! come, and bring away the nets.
3 Fish. What, Pitch-breech, I say!
4 Fish. What say you, master?
5 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now. Come away, or I'll fetch thee with a warrant.
3 Fish. 'Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men, that were cast away before us even now.

1 Fish. Ahas, poor souls! it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounded and tumbled they say, they are half fish, half flesh: a plague on them! they are come, but I look to be washed.
Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why as men do a-land: the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich mercers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a monthful. Such whales have I heard on the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belly.
2 Fish. Why, man?
3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too;
and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides?

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. How from the finny subject of the sea.

These fishes tell the infirmities of men;
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve, or men detect!—
Peace be at your labor, honest fishermen.
2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and no body look after it.

[Cost—

Per. Y' may see, the sea hath cast me upon your 2 Fish. What a drunken knife was the sea, to cast thee in our way.

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,
In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball.
For them to play upon, entreats you pity him:
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.
2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?
Per. I never practice'd.
2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forget to know,
But what I am wont teaches me to think on;
A man throng'd up with cold; my veins are chill,
And have no more of life, than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quotha? Now, gods forbid it! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep the warm.
Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting days, and more or puddings and ship Jacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.
2 Fish. Hack you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whippin'.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then?

2 Fish. Of not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exeunt Two of the Fishermen.

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labor!

1 Fish. Hack you, sir; do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king, the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so called, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from thisshore?

[Ship Jacks," i. e. pancakes.
Scene II.—The Same. A Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavillon near it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Ladies, Lords, &c.

Enter Shimondes, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

Per. We are ready, and our daughter, in honor of whose birth these triumphs are, sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat for men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express my commendations, great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are a model, which heaven makes like to itself: as jewels lose their glory if neglected, so princes their renown, if not respected. 'Tis now your honor, daughter, to explain the labor of each knight in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honor, I'll perform. Enter a Knight: he passes over the Stage, and his Squire presents his Shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father; and the device he bears upon his shield is a black Æthiop, reaching at the sun; the word, Luct tua vita nihil.

Sim. He loves you well that holds this life of you. Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father; and the device he bears upon his shield is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady: The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu per dulzura que per forza.

Sim. And what the third?

Thai. The fourth of Antioch; and his device, a wreath of chivalry: the word, Me pomeo provexit oper.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch, that's turned upside down: the word, Quo vet put, me extinguent. [and will.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

[The fifth Knight passes over.

Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds, Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried; The motto thus, Sis spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd? is Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present A wither'd branch, that's only green at top: The motto, In hac spono vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral!

From the deserted state wherein he is, He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better, than his outward show Can any way speak in his just commend; For by his rusty outside he appears To have practis'd more the whisperstock than the lance.

2 Lord. Heav'ned may be a strong provision, for he comes To an honor'd triumph strangely furnish'd.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armor rust Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan

Return them: I, e., return them not; e., i.e., the motto. Thai. More by sweetness than by force. Commendation. Whip-handle.
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming: we'll withdraw
Into the gallery. [Exeunt.]

[Great shouts, and all cry, The mean knight!]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall of State.
A Banquet prepared.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Ladies, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights, To say you are welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes, and my guests.

Tha. But you, [To Per.] my knight and guest;
To whom this wretch of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. This were by fortune, lady, than my merit.
Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
I have run an artist; art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you're her labor'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast,
(For, daughter, so you are) here take your place:
Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honor'd much by good Simonides.
Sim. Your presence glads our days: honor we love,
For who does honor hate the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, yond's your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen,
That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,
Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

2 Per. You are right courteous knights.

Tha. Sit, sir; sit.

By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,
These cates resist me, he not thought upon.

Tha. By Juno, that is queen
Of marriage, all the viands that I eat
Do seem unsavory, wishing him my meat.

Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman:
He has done no more than other knights have done,
He has broken a staff, or so; so, let it pass.

Tha. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. Yond' king's to me like to my father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was:
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence.

None that beheld him, but like lesser lights
Did veil their crowns to his supremacy;
Where he is now his son, like a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sir. What! are you merry, knights?

1 Knight. Who can be other, in this royal presence?
Sim. Here, with a cup that's store'd unto the brim,
(As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips)
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause a while;
Yond' knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?

Tha. What is it
To me, my father?

Sim. O! attend, my daughter:
Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honor them; and princes, not doing so,
Are like to guests, which make a sound, but kill'd
A wonder'd at. Therefore,
To make his entrance more sweet, here say,
We drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Tha. Alas, my father! it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold:
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How! Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Tha. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And further tell him, we desire to know,
Of whence he is, his name, and parentage.

Tha. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.
Per. And thank him, then.

Tha. Wishing it so much blood unto your life,
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Tha. And, farther, he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre (my name, Pericles,
My education here, in arts and arms)
Who looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas, lost of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.

Tha. He thanks your grace; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas
Bereft of ships and men, cast on the shore.

Sim. Now by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.

Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time which looks for other revels.

Even in your armors, as you are 'address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I have not excuse, with say in this:
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' hearts,
Since they love men in arms, as well as beds.

[The Knights dance.
So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
Come, sir;
Here is a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip,
And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them, they are, my lord.

Sim. Of that's as much, as you would be desired
[The Knights and Ladies dance.

Of your fair courtesy.—Unclasp, unclasp:
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
But you the best. [To Pericles.] Pages and lights,
Sir,
These knights unto their several lodgings!—Yours,
We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at;
Therefore, each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best. [Exeunt.]

* The meaning is, 'That makes us seem the inward man by the outward habit.'—"These cates resist me," i. e., these delicacies go against my stomach.—"Vail," i. e., lower.—Where for withers.

"His entrance," i. e., his reverence.—"Address'd," i. e., accounted; prepared for combat.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Helicanus and Escaes.

Hel. No, Escaes; know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free:
For which the most high gods, not minding longer
To withhold the vengeance, that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was scoured, and his daughter with him,
In a chariot of inestimable value,
A fire from heaven came, and shrivell'd up
Those bodies, even to looting; for so they stank,
That all those eyes *ador'd them ere their fall,
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.
Esca. 'Twas very strange.
Hel. Ay, and yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Enter Three Lords.

1 Lord. See! not a man, in private conference
Or council, has respect with him but he.
2 Lord. It shall now longer grieve without reproof.
3 Lord. And curb'd be he that will not second it.
1 Lord. Follow me, then.—Lord Helican, a word.
Hel. With me! and welcome.—Happy day, my lords.
1 Lord. Know, that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.
Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince
You love.
1 Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helican;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolved, he lives to govern us,
Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leave us to our free election.
2 Lord. Whose death's, indeed, the strongest in our censure:
And knowing this kingdom is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof,
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best know'st how to rule, and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.
All. Live, loved Helican!—
Hel. Try honor's cause; forbear your suffrages:
If that you love prince Pericles, forbear.
Take 1 your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's case.
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.
1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield:
And since lord Helican enjoineth us,
We with our travels will endeavor.

Hel. Then, you love us, we you, and we'll keep hands:
When peers thus knits a kingdom ever stands.

SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Simonides, reading a Letter: the Knights meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.
Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know:
That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.
2 Knight. My lord, do not get access to her, my lord?
Sim. 'Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied
To her chamber, that it is impossible.
[her
One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;
This by the eye of Cynthia hith she vow'd,
And on her virgin honor will not break it.
3 Knight. Though loth to bid farewell, we take
Our leaves. [Exeunt.
Sim. So,
They're well despatch'd; now to my daughter's letter.
She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;
I like that well—nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no.
Well, I commend her resolution,
And will no longer have it be delay'd.
Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!
Sim. To you as much, sir. I am beholding to you
For your sweet music this last night: I do
Protest, my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your grace's pleasure to command,
Not my desert.
Sim. Sir, you are music's master.
Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.
Sim. Let me ask one thing:
What do you think of my daughter, sir?
Per. As of a most virtuous princess.
Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.
Sim. My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you:
Ay, so well, sir, that you must be her master,
And she'll your scholar be: therefore look to it.
Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.
Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.
Per. [Aside.] What's here? A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre?
'Tis the king's subtilty, to have my life.
[To him.] O! seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never nim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honor her.
[art
Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou
A villain.
Per. By the gods, I have not,
Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love, or your displeasure.
Sim. Traitor, thou liest.
Per. Traitor! Ay, traitor.
Per. Even in his threat, unless it be the king,
That calls me traitor, I return the lie. [courage.
Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his
Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never rely'd on a base descent.
I came unto your court for honor's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
ACT III.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Now sleep, yashked hath the rout; No din but sweetens the house about, Made louder by the outer-fed breast Of this most pompous marriage feast. The eat with yew's eye of burning coal, Now coffers close the mouse's hole; And cricket sing at the oven's mouth, Are the blitter for their doth. Hymen hath brought the bride to bed, Where, by the loss of maidenhead, A babie is moulded.—Be attent, And time that is so briefely spent, With your fine fancies quaintly e echo; What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

Dumb Show.

Enter Pericles and Simonides at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a Letter: Pericles shews it to Simonides: the Lords kneel to Pericles; then, enter Thaisa with child, and Lychorida: Simonides shows his Daughter the Letter; she rejoices: she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and all depart.

Gow. By many a d'ern and painful perch Of Pericles the careful search, By the four opposing e coigne, Which the world together joins,
SCENE II.

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

Per. How! how, Lychorida!
Lyg. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Per. Here’s all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.
Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your godly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We, here below,
Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honor with you.
Lyg. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.
Per. Now, mild may be thy life;
For a more lusty birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy \(^4\) conditions;
For thou’rt the radichest welcome to this world,
That e’er was prince’s child.
Happy what follows!
Thou hast as beholding a nativity,
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb: even at the first,
Thy loss is more than can thy portage \(^6\) quit,
With all thou canst find here.—Now the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon it!

Enter Two Sailors.

1 Sail. What, courage, sir! God save you.
Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the \(^\text{1}\) flaw;
It hath done to me the worst: yet, for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh new sea-farer,
I would it would be quiet.
2 Sail. Slack the bowlines there; thou wilt not, wilt thou?—Blow, and split thyself.
2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow
Kiss the moon, I care not.
1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard:
The sea works high, the wind is loud,
And will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.
Per. That’s your superstition.
1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed,
And we are strong in earnest.
Therefore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.
Per. As you think meet.—Most wretched queen!
Lyg. Here she lies, sir.
Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear;
No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow’d to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin’d, in the ooze;
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And on-cowering many lamps, the belching whale,
And humming water most o’erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells.—O Lychorida!
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander
Bring me the saty’s coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hee thee, whiles I say.
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

[Exit Lychorida.

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caul’d and bitumen ready.
[This?
Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is
2 Sail. We are near Tharsus.
Per. \(^6\) Thither, gentle mariner,
[It?
Alter thy course for Tyre. When cannot thou reach
2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.
Per. I! make for Tharsus.
[This?
There will I visit Cleon, for the babe

"Conditions," i.e., qualities; dispositions.—\(^4\) "Chilling," i.e., noisy.—That is, "Thy loss by the death of thy mother, is more than thy safe arrival at the port of life can counterbalance."—\(^6\) "The flaw," i.e., the storm; the blast.—\(^\text{1}\) "Thither," i.e., towards Tharsus.—\(^\text{2}\) "For Tyre," i.e., instead of Tyre.

Cannot hold out to Tyrus: there I’ll leave it.
At careful nursing.—Go thy ways, good mariner;
I’ll bring the body presently.

SCENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon’s House.

Enter Cerimon, a Servant, and some Persons who have been Shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Dost my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men:
It has been a turbulent and stormy night.
Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this,
Till now I ne’er endur’d.
Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return:
There’s nothing can be minister’d to nature,
That can recover him. Give this to the "pothecary,
And tell me how it works. [To Philemon.
[Execut Philemon, Servant, and the rest.

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow, sir.
2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?
1 Gent. Sir,
Our lodgings, standing blank upon the sea,
Shook, as the earth did quake;
The very principals did seem to rend,
And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.
2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;
’Tis not our "husbandry."
Cer.
1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having
Rich thee about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
’Tis most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compelld.

Cer. I hold it ever,

Virtue and \(^\text{4}\) cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expeduc;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. ’Tis known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o’er authorities, I have (Together with my practice) made familiar
To me and to my aid, the best infusions
That dwell in \(^\text{1}\) vegetables, in metals, stones;
And can speak of the disturbances that nature
Works, and of her cures; which both give me
A more content, in course of true delight,
Than to be thirsty after totering honor,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the foam and death.
[forth
2 Gent. Your honor has through Ephesus pour’d
Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creaturs, who by you have been restor’d:
And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even
Your purse, still open, hath built lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never—[Enter Two Servants with a Chest.

Serv. So; lift there.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT III.

1 Gent. Most rare.
Cer. Hush, gentle neighbors! Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear her. Get linen: now this matter must be look’d to, for her relapse is mortal. Come, come; and Asculapius guide us!

SCENE III.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon’s House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, LYCHORIDA, and MARINA.

Per. Most honor’d Cleon, I must needs be gone; My twelve months are expir’d, and Tyrus stands In a litigious peace. You, and your lady, Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods Make up the rest upon you! [Mortally, Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you Yet glance full wond’ringly on us. Dian. O, your sweet queen! That the strict fates had pleas’d you had brought her To have bless’d mine eyes! [Latter, Per. We cannot but obey The powers above us. Could I rage and roar As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as ’tis. My gentle babe Maruia (whom, For she was born at sea, I have nam’d so) here I charge your charity wilder, and leave her The infant of your care; beseeching you To give her princely training, that she may Be manner’d as she is born. Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think Your grace, that fed my country with your corn, (For which the people’s prayers still fall upon you) Must in your child be thought on. If negligence Should therein make up the vile, the common body, By you reliev’d, would force me to my duty; But if to that my nature need a spur, The gods revenge it upon me and mine, To the end of generation.

Per. I believe you; Your honor and your goodness teach me to, Without your vows, Still she be married, madam, By bright Diana, whom we honor all. Unassisted shall this hair of mine remain, Though I show will do’t. So I take my leave. Good madam, make me blessed in your care In bringing up my child. Dion. I have one myself, Who shall not be more dear to my respect, Than yours, my lord. Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers. Cle. We’ll bring your grace even to the edge o’ the shore; Then give you up to the mask’d Neptune, and The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace Your offer. Come, dear’st madam.—O! no tears, Lychorida, no tears; Look to your little mistress, on whose grace You may depend hereafter.—Come, my lord.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon’s House.

Enter Cerimon and Thaisa.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels, Lay with you in your coffers, which are *“Mundane,” i.e., worldly.

b”Negleciton,” i.e., neglect. — The common body, i.e., the common people.—Show will in’t, i.e., appear wild by such conduct.—The mask’d Neptune, i.e., the insidious waves, that wear a treacherous smile.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT IV.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre, Welcome'd and settled to his own desire: His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus, Unto Diana there a votress. Now to Marina bend your mind, Whom our fast-growing scene must find At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd In music, letters; who hath gain'd Of education all the grace, Which makes her both the heart and place Of general wonder. But slack! That monster envy, oft the wrack Of earned praise, Marina's life Seeks to take off by treason's knife. And in this kind hath our Cleon One daughter, and a wench full grown, Even ripe for marriage rite: this maid

Hight Philoten; and it is said

For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be: B't when she wear'd the 4th silke With fingers, long, small, white as milk; Oft with sharp needle wound The cambic, which she made more sound By hurting it; or when to the late She sung, and made the night-bird mate, That still records with same; or when She would with rich and constant pen Vail to her mistress Dion; still

This Philoten contends in skill

With Phabolus Marina: so

With the dove of Paphos might the crow Vie feathers white. Marina gets All praises, which are paid as debts, And not as given. This so darks In Philoten all graceful marks, That Cleon's wife, with envy rare, And nearest murderers prepare For good Marina, that her daughter Might stand peerless by this slaughter. The sooner her vile thoughts to steal, Lychorina, our nurse, is dead:

And cursed Dionyza hath

The 6th pregnant instrument of wrath

Prest for this blow. The unborn event

---

I do commend to your content: Only with the Post on the line of my rhyme;

Which never could I so convey,

Unless your thoughts went on my way.—

Dionyza doth appear,

With Leonine, a murderer.

[Exit.

.Scene I.—Tharsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter Dionyza and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do: 'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known. Thou canst not do a thing 'tis the world so soon, To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience, Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy bosom, Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I'll do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here

She comes weeping for her old nurse's death. Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina, with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed, To strew thy grave with flowers: the yellows, blues, The purple violets, and marigolds, Shall, as a carpet, hang upon thy grave, While summer days do last. Ah me, poor maid! Born in a tempest, when my mother died, This world to me is like a lasting storm, Whirling me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you weep alone? How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have A nurse of me. Lord! how your favor chang'd With this unprofitable woe. Come, come; Give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it. Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there, And it pierces and sharpens the stomach. Come, Leonine, to help the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you:

I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;

I love the king your father, and yourself, With more than foreign heart. We every day Expect him here: when he shall come, and find Our paragon to all reports thus blazed, He will repent the breadth of his great voyage; Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you; Walk, and be cheerful once again: reserve That excellent complexion, which did steal The eyes of young and old. Care not for me; I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;

But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.—

Walk half an hour, Leonine, at least. Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while. Pray you walk softly, do not hurt your blood:

---

14 "Nicely," i. e., tenderly; finely — "Tellus," i. e., the earth.— "Your favor," i. e., your countenance.— "With more than foreign heart," i. e., with the same warmth of affection as if he were my countryman.— Reserve is used for preserve.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT IV.

What! I must have care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—

[Exit Diozyza.

Is the wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
But cry'd "good scanen!" to the sailors, galling
His kingly hands hauling ropes;
And, clasp'd to the mast, edur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:
Never were waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackle wash'd off
A canvas-climber. "Ha!" says one, "wilt out?"
And with a dropping industry they skip
From stem to stern: the boatswain whistle, and
The master calls, and troubles their confusion.

Leon. Come; say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious,
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?
Now as I can remember, by my truth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature: believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her profit, or
My life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.
You are well favor'd, and your looks forebode
You have a genteel heart. I saw you lately,
Where you caught hurt in parting two that fought:
Good sooth, it show'd well in you: do so now:
Your lady seeks my life: come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will despacht.

[Enter Pirates, whilst MARINA is struggling.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain! [LEONINE runs away.

2 Pirate. A prize! a prize!

3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with Marina.

SCENE II.—Near the Same.

Enter Leonine.

Leon. These rogueing thieves serve the great pirate

[Valdes;

And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go:
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,
And thrown into the sea. —But I'll see farther;
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain.

[Exit.

a "A canvas-climber," i. e., a sailor. —Don Pedro de Valdes was an admiral in the Spanish arms. The making of his ancestor a pirate, was probably relished by the audience in those days.

SCENE III.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants: we lost too much money this mart, by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore, let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think, I have brought up some eleven—

Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again.

Pand. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sudden.

Pand. Thou say'st true; they're too unwholesome o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Bawd. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast meat for worms. But I'll go search the market.

[Exit Boult.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. But well as we? ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

[Enter Boult, and the Pirates with Marina.

Boult. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate, O, sir! we doubt it not.

Boult. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her piece, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one dut of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in: instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pander and Pirates.

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her; the color of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry, "He that will give most, shall have her first." Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing; if men were as they have been, 'twere not as I command you.

"Wages not with the danger," i. e., is not equal to the danger.—"Hatched," i. e., had open.—"Gone thorough for this piece," i. e., bid a high price for her.—"Raw," i. e., unskilful.
SCENE IV.—PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

PERICLES.

Boud. Performance shall follow. [Exit Boud.]

Mar. Ahack, that Leonine was so slick, so slow! He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates, (Not enough barbarous) had not o' erboard thrown me For to seek my mother! Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one? Mar. That I am pretty. Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you. Mar. I accuse them not. Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live. Mar. The more my fault. To 'scape his hands where I was like to die. Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure. Mar. No. Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well: you shall have the difference of all complexities. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Morry, whip thee, gosling! I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I will have you. Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men stir you up.—Boudt's returned.

Re-enter Boudt.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market? Boudt. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice. Bawd. And I p'cythie, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boudt. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have heartenked to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boudt. Tonight, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that crowers i' the hamns? Bawd. Who? monsieur Verole? Boudt. Ay: he offered to eat a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease bither: here he does but repair it. I know, he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boudt. Well, if we had of every nation a travel- ler, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. Pray you, come bither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must soon to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do makes pity in your lovers: seldom, but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a more profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boudt. O! take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of her's must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou say'st true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boudt. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,—Bawd. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit. Boudt. I may so?

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boudt. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boudt, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore, say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boudt. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the heads of *eels, as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I' ll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come, your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep, Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter Cleon and Dionyza.

Cleon. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Dionyza. O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon no' er look'd upon.

Cleon. I think,

You'll turn a child again.

Dionyza. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world, I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady! Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess To equal any single crown o' the earth, I' the justice of compare! O villain Leonine! Whom thou hast poison'd too.

Cleon. If thou hast drank to him, it had been a kindness Becoming well thy face: what canst thou say,
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dionyza. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates, To foster it, nor ever to preserve.

Cleon. She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it, Unless you play the plous innocent, And for an honest attribute, cry out, "She died by foul play!"

Dionyza. O! go to. Well, well; Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods Do like this worst.

Cleon. Be one of those, that think
The pretty weens of Tharsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble stein you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Dionyza. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his pre-consent, he did not flow
From honorable courses.

Cleon. Do it so, then;
Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,
Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.
She did disdain my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marin's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a "malkin,
Not worth the time of day. It piere'd me thorough;
And though you call my course unnatural,
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT IV.

You not your child well loving, yet I find,
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness,
Perform'd to your sole daughter.
Cle.
Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We swept after her hearse,
And even yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.
Cle.
Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, doth with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.
Dion. You are like one, that superstitiously
Doth swear to the gods, that winter kills the flies:
But yet, I know, you'll do as I advise. [Exeunt.

Enter Gower, before the Monument of Mariana at Tharsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;
Soil seeds in cockles, have, and wish but for't;
Making (to take your imagination)
From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language, in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech
you, [you,
To learn of me, who stand 't the gaps to teach
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thynging the wayward seas,
Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advance'd in time to great and high estate,
Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.
Well-sailing ships, and bounteous winds, have
This king to Tharsus, (think this pilot thought,
So with his steereage shall your thoughts grow on)
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like notes and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb show.

Enter Pericles with his Train, at one door; Cleon and Dionyzia at the other. Cleon shows Pericles the Tomb of Mariana; whereas Pericles makes lamentation, puts on Sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs.

Gow. See, how belief may suffer by foul show.
The borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-show'd,
Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs:
He puts on sackcloth, and to see he bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out. Now, please you, sit
And the epitaph is for Mariana writ
By wicked Dionyzia.

"The fairest, sweetest, and best, lies here,
Whose mother in her spring of year
She was of Tyre, the king's daughter,
On whom foul death had made this slaughter.
Mariana was she call'd: and at her birth,
Thesis, being proud, swallowed some part of the earth.

* "Making," i. e., travelling. — "His mortal vessel," i. e., his body. — "Now, please you, sit," i. e., now be pleased to know. — "Thesis," i. e., the sea.

Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd,
Hath Thetes' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:
Wherefore she does (and swears she'll never's stain)
Make raging battery upon shores of flint.
No visor does become black villany,
So well as soft and tender flattery,
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By lady fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day,
In her unholy service. Patience then,
And think you now are all in Mitylen. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?
2 Gent. No; nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.
1 Gent. But to have divinity preached there, did you ever dream of such a thing?
2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall we go hear the vestals sing?
1 Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had ne'er come here.
Bawd. Fe, lie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation: we must either get her revish'd, or be rid of her. Where she should do for clients her esteem, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees, that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.
Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disturbe all our cavaliers, and make us all swearers priests.
Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!
Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lysi- machus, disguised.
Boult. We should have both lord and clown, if the peevish baggade would but give way to customers.

Enter Lysi- machus.

Lys. How now! is How a dozen of virginitie? Bawd. Now, the gods to bless your honor! Boult. I am glad to see your honor in good health. Lys. You may say; 'tis the better for you that your ressorters stand upon sound legs. Now how, wholesome iniquity! have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon? Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.
Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldn't say.
Boult. Your honor knows what 'tis to say, well enough.
Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.
Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had been—
Lys. What, pr'ythee?
Boult. O, sir! I can be modest.

* "Stront, i. e., cease. — "Lowen," i. e., how fellow; eoundrel. — "How," i. e., how much?"
That's the renown of a bawd, no less
Than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Enter MARINA.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;
—never pluck'd yet; I can assure you.—Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you: leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honor, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. First, I would have you note, this is an honorable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country,

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honorable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage.
Come, we will leave his honor and her together.

Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawl, Pander, and Boul.

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a
'gameret at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honorable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hast thy principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seed and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else, look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place; come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honor, show it now;
If put upon you, make the judgment good
That thought you worthy of it. [Aside.

Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more;—be
Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune
Hath crested me in this sty, where, since I came,
Disgraces have been sold dearer than physic;
—That the gods
Would set me free from this unallow'd place,
Though they did change me to the meanest bird
That flies in the purer air!

Lys. I did not think

Thou could'st have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd
Thou could'st.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, —[thee:
Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for Persuere in that clear way thou goest,
And the gods strengthen thee.

Mar. The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten
That I came with no ill intent: for to me
The very doors and windows savor vilely.
Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and
I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.
Hold, here's more gold for thee.

A curse upon him, di lie like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost hear
From me, it shall be for thy good.

Enter BOUL.

Boul. I beseech your honor, one piece for me.

Lys. Avant, thou damned door-keeper! Your
But for this virgin that doth prop it, would [house,
Sink, and overwhelm you. Away!

[Exit LYSIMACHUS.

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peaish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gilded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away.

Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter?

Boult. Marry, and where, mistress: she has here spoken holy words to the lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O, abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Mar. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would he'll dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him, away as cold as a snow-ball; saying his prayers, too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boul. An if she were a thorner piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. By g-joyn upon it away with her. Would she had never come within my doors.—Marry, hang you!—She's born to undo us.—Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! [Exit Bawd.

Boult. Come, mistress; come your way with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Pr'ythee, tell me on that first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master; or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art,
Since they do better thee in their command,

Thou hold'st a place, for which the painted at bend
Of hell would not in reputation change:

Thou'rt the damn'd door-keeper to every coy astral
That hither comes inquiring for his "Tib;"

b "Cleer," l. e., pure; innocent.—c "Under the cope," l. e., under the cope or canopy of heaven.—A canopy is a low, mean fellow.—Tib was a common name for a straggler.
To the cioloric fisting of each rogue thy ear
Is liable; thy food is such
As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mer. Do any thing but this thou dost. Empty Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth; Serve by indenture to the common hangman:
Any of these ways are yet better than this;
For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak, Would own a name too dear. That the gods Would safely deliver me from this place!
Here, here's gold for thee.
If that thy master would gain by me, Procure him that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance, With other virtues, which I'll keep from base; And I will undertake all these to teach.
I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mer. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, And prostitute me to the basest groom
That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

Mer. But, amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore, I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come; I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways.

[Execut.]

ACT V.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Marina thus the brother* depicts, and chances
Into an honest house, our story says.
She sings like one immortal, and she dances,
As goddess-like, to her admired lays.

[Poets Deep clerks she c dumbs, and with her needle com-
Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,
That even her art sisters the natural roses;
Her *inkle, silk, twin with the roseberry:
That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain
She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place,
And to her father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him on the sea, disabled and lost;
And, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd
Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast
Suppose him now at anchor. The city studt
God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;
And to him in his barge with fervor hies.
In your supposing once more put your* sight;
Of heavy Pericles think this the bark:
Where, what is done in action, move if it might,
Shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and bark.

[Exit.

SCENE I. —On board Pericles' Ship, off Mitylene, A Pavilion on deck, with a Curtain behind it; Pericles within it, reclining on a Couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel.

Enter Two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian Vessel, the other to the Barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyrs. Sail. Where's the lord Helicanus? he can resolve you. [To the Sailor of Mitylene.

O here he is.—

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene,
And in it is Lysimachus, the governor,
Who o'ertakes to come aboard. What is your will?

Het. That he has his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyrs. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter Two or Three Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Het. Gentlemen,

There is some of worth would come aboard: I pray
Greet him fairly.

[Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS, and Lords; the Tyrian Gentlemen, and the Two Sailors.

Tyrs. Sail. Sir,

This is the man that can in aught you would Resolve you.

Lys. He, revered sir! the gods preserve you!

Het. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well. Being on shore, honoring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it to know of whence you are.

Het. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Het. Sir,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king; a
A man, who for this three months hath not spoken
To any one, nor taken sustenance,
But to 6prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemper?

Het. It would be too tedious to repeat; but
The main grief of all springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then?

Het. You may,

But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Het. Behold him. [Pericles discovered.] This was a goodly person,

Till the disaster that one mortal night
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve you! Hail, royal sir!

Het. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

Lys. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I doubt Would win some words of him. [wager, Lys. "Tis well bothought.

She, questionless, with her sweet harmony,
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deaf^d ears,
Which now are midway stop'd?
She will play so as the fairest of all,
And with her fellow maid's is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

[He whispers one of the attendant Lords.—Exit Lord.

a To prorogue, i. e., to prolong, lengthen. a b "Mortal," i. e., fatal; deadly. —"His deaf'rd parts," i. e., his ears.
Hel. Sure, all effectless; yet nothing we'll omit, That bears recovery's name.
But, since your kindness we may stretch'd thus far, Let us beseech you, That for our gold we may provision have, Wherein we are not destitute for want, But weary for the staledness.

Per. O, sir! a courtesy, Which, if we should deny, the most just God For every graff would send a caterpillar, And so *indict our province.—Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sir, sir, I will recount it to you.— But see, I am prevented.

Enter Lord, Marina, and a young Lady.

Lys. Of! here is The body that I sent for. Welcome, fair one! Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady.

Lys. She's such a one, that were I well assur'd she Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish [came no better choice, and think me rarely wel.—
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty Expect even here, where is a kindly patient: If that thy prosperous and artificial feat Can draw him but to answer thee in ough, Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use My utmost skill in his recovery, Provided none but I and my companion Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her; And the gods make her prosperous!

[Marina sings]

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, loud ear.—

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet: she speaks, My lord, that may be, hath endur'd a grief Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune didward my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and *awkward casualties Bound me in servitude.—I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, "Go not till he speak."

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parent— You would not do me violence. [age.

Per. I do think so.

I pray you, turn your eyes again upon me.—
You are like something that—What countrywoman? Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores; Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am No other than I appear. [ing.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weep— My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows; Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight; As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewe-like,

* Inflex for affect.—b "Awkward," i. e. adverse. .58

And cas'd as richly: in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry, [live?
The more she gives them speech.—Where do you

Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achieve'd you these endowments, which You make more rich to *owe.

Mar. Should I tell my history,
'Twould seem like lies, diadain'd in the reporting.

Per. Pr'ythee, speak:
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st Most as a justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd truth to dwell in. I'll believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?
Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back, (Which was when I perceive'd thee) that thou cam'st From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou saidst
Thou hast'd been to'sd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,
If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look
Like Patience, gozing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extrémité out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?
Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O! I am mock'd,
And thou by some incens'd gooses hither
To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power;
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?

And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy
Motion!—Well! speak on, Where were you born,
And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina,
For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea? what mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the minute I was born,
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft
Delivered weeping.

Per. O! stop there a little.

This is the rarest dream that o'er dull'd sleep
Did mock sad fools withal; this cannot be. [bred?
My daughter's buried.—Well:—where were you
I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,

* To owe," i. e., to possess.—d "No fairy motion," i. e., no puppet dressed up to deceive me.
And never interrupt you. [give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable.

Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:

How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The king, my father, did in Tharsus leave me,

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,

Did seek to murder me; and having wound

A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't,

A crew of pirates came and rescued me;

Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir,

Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?

It may be,

You think me an impostor: no, good faith;

I am the daughter to king Pericles,

If good king Pericles be.

Per. Ha, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my gracious lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,

Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst,

What this mad is, or what is like to be,

That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but

Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,

Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell

Her parentage; being demanded that,

She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honor'd sir;

Give me a gash, put me to present pain,

Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me,

O'beard the shores of my mortality.

And drown me with their sweetness! O! come hither,

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget:

Thou hast that west born at sea, buried at Tharsus,

And found at sea again.—O Helicanus!

Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods aloud:

As thunder threatens us: this is Marina!—

What was thy mother's name? I tell me but that,

For truth can never be confirm'd enough,

Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray,

What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me, now,

My dross'd queen's name, (as in the rest you said)

Thou hast been godlike perfect the heir of kingdoms,

And another like to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter, than

To say, my mother's name was Thaisa?

Thaisa was my mother, who did end

The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.

Give me fresh garments! Mine own, Helicanus,

She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been,

By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all;

When thou shalt kneel and justly in knowledge,

She is thy very princess.—Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,

Who, hearing of thy melancholy state,

Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you,

Give me my robes! I am wild in my beholding,

O heavens, bless my girl! But hark! what music!

Tell Helicanus, my Mariana, tell him

O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,

How sure you are my daughter.—But what music?

Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None?

The music of the spheres! list, my Mariana.

Lys. It is not good to cross him: give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. Music? My lord, I hear—

Per. Most heavenly music:

It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber

Hangs upon mine eyes: let me rest. [He sleeps.

Lys. A pillow for his head.

[The Curtain before the Pavillion of Pericles is closed.

So, leave him all.—Well, my companion-friends,

If this but answer to my just belief,

I'll well remember you.

[Exeunt Lysimachus, Helicanus, Mariana, and Lady.

SCENE II.—The Same.

PERICLES on the Deck asleep; DIANA appearing to him in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus: lies thee

And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

[thither.

There, when my maiden priests are met together,

Before the people all,

Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call,

And give them repetition to the life.

Or perform my bidding, or thou livest in woe:

Do't, and be happy, by my silver bow.

Await, and tell thy dream.

[DIANA disappears

Per. Celestial Dia, goddess argentine,

I will obey thee.—Helicanus!

Enter Lysimachus, Helicanus, and Mariana.

Hel. Sir.

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike

The inhospitable Cleon: but I am

For other service first: toward Ephesus

Turn our 'blossom sail': if we'll tell thee why,—

Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

And give you gold for such provision

As our intents will need!

[shore,

Lys. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come

I have another suit.

Per.

You shall prevail,

Were it to woo my daughter; for, it seems,

You have been noble towards her.

Lys.

Sir, lend your arm.

Per. Come, my Mariana. [Exeunt.

Enter Gower, before the Temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run;

More a little, and then dumb.

This, as my last bocen, give me,

For such kindness must relieve me,

That you aptly will suppose

What pageantry, what feast, what shows,

What mistrelsy, and pretty din,

The regent made in Mitylen,

To greet the king. So he thriv'd,

That he is promis'd to be viv'd

To fair Mariana; but in no wise

Tell he had done his sacrifice,

As Diane bade: whereeto being bound,

The interim, pray you, all confound.

In feather'd biretsee sails are fill'd,

And wishes fall out as they're will'd.

At Ephesus, the temple see,

Our king, and all his company,

That he can lither come so soon,

Is by your fancy's thankful doom.

[Exit.

* And give them repetition to the life," i. e., give a life-like narrative of thy adventures.—" Goddes argentine," i. e., regent of the other moon.—" Blow'd," i. e., swollen.

" Blesen," i. e., swolen.

" Blesse," i. e., soon.—" He," i. e., Pericles.—" Confound!" i. e., consume.
SCENE III.—The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; Thaisa standing near the Altar, as high Priestess; a number of Virgins on each side: Cerimon and other inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter Pericles, with his Train; Lysimachus, Helicanus, Marina, and a Lady.

Per. Hail Dion! to perform thy just command, I here confess myself the king of Tyre; Who, frigited from my country, did wed At Pentapolis, the fair Thaisa. At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess! Wears yet thy silver *livery. She at Thaisus Was nurse'd with Clean, whom at fourteen years He sought to murder, but her better stars Brought her to Mitylene; against whose shore Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us, Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

Thaisa. You, you are,—O royal Pericles!—[She faints. Per. What means the woman? she dies: help, Cer. Noble sir, If you have told Diana's altar true, This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no: I threw her overboard with these very arms.

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you. Per. 'Tis most certain. Cer. Look to the lady.—O! she's but o' err'y'd. Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op'd the coffin, Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd her Here, in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them? Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house, Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is recover'd. Thaisa. O! let me look. If he be none of mine, my sanctity Will to my sense bend no licentious car; But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord! Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest, A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa! Thaisa. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead, and Per. Immortal Dion! [drown'd.

Thaisa. Now I know you better.—— Whence we with tears parted Pentapolis, The king, my father, gave you such a ring.

[Shows a Ring. Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well, That on the touching of her lips I may Melt, and no more be seen. O! come, be buried A second time within these arms.

Marina. My heart Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Keels to Thaisa. Per. Look, who kneels here. Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa; Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina,

* "Thy silver livery," i. e., her white robe of innocence. — Sense is here used for sensual passion.
VENUS AND ADONIS.

INTRODUCTION.

We are told by Shakespeare, in his dedication of this poem to the Earl of Southampton, in 1593, that it was "the first heir of his invention," and as it was the earliest printed, so probably, it was the earliest written of his known productions.

The popularity of it is indisputable: having been originally printed by Richard Field, in 1593, 4to, that edition seems to have been soon exhausted, and it was republished by the same printer in 1594, 4to, before 25th June, because on that day, according to the Stationers' Register, he assigned over his interest in it to John Harrison, for whom Field printed an octavo impression in 1596. Harrison published his second edition in 1599, which was the fourth time. "Venus and Adonis" had been printed in seven years. It had been entered at Stationers' Hall by W. Leask, in 1596. After this date it went through the press many times, and copies in 1602, 1616, 1620, &c. are known: in 1627 it was printed by John Wreithown, at Edinburgh.

Our text of "Venus and Adonis" is that of the earliest quarto, 1593, which, for the time, is very correctly printed.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY Wriothesly,
EARL OF SOUTHWICK, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

RIGHT HONORABLE,
I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpollished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honor seem but pleased, I account myself highly prais'd, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honored you with some grav'r labor. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after a ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honorable survey, and your honor to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish, and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honor's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.
VENUS AND ADONIS.

She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens; (O, how quick is love!) The steel is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:

Backward she push’d him, as she would be thrust,
And govern’d him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:

Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And ‘tis to chide, but soon she stops his lips:
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.

He burns with blushful shame, she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs, and golden hairs,
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:

He saith she is humdest, blames her "miss;"
What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
’Tis tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring what he can;
Till either gorge be stuff’d, or prey be gone;

Even so she kiss’d his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forc’d to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew’d with such distilling showers.

Look how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So bold with her arms Adonis draws:
Pure shime and aw’d resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes:
Rain added to a river that is rank,
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he loves and frets,
Twist crimson shame, and anger ash-pale;

Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Shaking her wings, devouring all at bay.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she bears
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have mind’d, making her cheeks all wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this endless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who being look’d on ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave,
For till her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his eyes another way.

Never did passenger in summer’s heat,
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn.

O, pity, ‘gan she cry, flirt-hearted boy!
’T is but a kiss I beg — why art thou coy?
I have been woor’d as I entertain thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sincer’ neck in battle ne’er did bow.

Who conquer where he comes, in every jear;
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg’d for that which thou wass’d shalt have
Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter’d shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn’d to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest;
Scoring his churlish drum, and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

Thus he that over-rid’d, I overwast’d,
Leading him prisoner in a red rose chain:
Stronger he staid his stronger strength obey’d,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that foil’d the god of fight.

Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:
Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies;
Then, why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?
Art thou asham’d to kiss? I then, wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day go green night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein’d violets whereon we lean,
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe, yet may’st thou well be tasted.
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather’d in their prime,
Rot and consume themselves in little time.
Were I hard-favor’d, foul, or wrinkled old,
Ill-natur’d, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O’er-worn, despaired, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,
Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey and bright, and quick in turning;
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my bowre burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.
Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or like a nymph with long dishaviour’d hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit, all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

Witness this primrose bower whereon I lie;
These remorseless flowers like stubby trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky.
From mouth till mouth, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldest think it heavy unto thee?
Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seizo love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.

Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use;

"Her miss;" i. e., her amiss; "her fault;" tires, i. e., twain; "To content," i. e., to be content; "Rank," i. e., full; "Dive-dapper," i. e., dapper; a bird that dives.

"Every jar," i. e., every quarted content.—Blue eyes were, in Shakespeare’s time, called grey.—Footing for foot print.—"Forceless," i. e., feeble.
HERBS FOR THEIR SMELL, AND SAPPHIC PLANTS TO BEAR;
THINGS GROWING TO THEMSELVES ARE GROWTH's ABUSE;
SEEDS SPRING FROM SEEDS, AND BEAUTY BREEDETH
THOU WAST BEGOTTEN, TO GET IT IS THY DUTY. [BEAUTY;
UPON THE EARTH'S INCREASE WHY SHOULDST THOU FEED,
UNLESS THE EARTH IN THY INCREASE BE FEUD?
BY LAW OF NATURE THOU ART BOUND TO BREST,
AND THINE MAY LIVE, WHEN THOU THYSELF ART DEAD;
AND SO IN SPIRIT OF DEATH THOU DOST SURVIVE,
IN THAT THY LIKENESS STILL IS LEFT ALIVE.
BY THIS, THE LOVE-SICK QUEEN BEGAN TO SWEAT,
FOR WHERE THEY LAY THE SHADOW HAD FASSEO THEM,
AND *TITAN, LIVED IN THE MID-DAY BEAT.
WITH BURNING EYE DID HOLLY OVERLOOK THEM;
WISHING ADONIS HAD HIS TEAM TO GUIDE,
SO HE WERE LIKE HIM, AND BY VENUS' SIDE.
AND NOW ADONIS, WITH A LOZY SPIRIT,
AND WITH A HEAVY, DARK, DISLIKING EYE,
HIS BLOWING BROWS O'ER-HELMING HIS FAIR SIGHT,
LIKE MISTY VAPORS, WHEN THEY BLOT THE SKY,
SCORING HIS CHEEKS, CRIES, FUR NO MORE OF LOVE:
The sun doth burn my face; I must be brave,
AH ME! [QUEEN VENUS'] YOUNG, AND SO UNKNOW'? WHAT ARE THOSE EXCAVES [OF] THOU TO BE GONE?
I SIGH CELESTIAL BREATH, Whose GENTLE WIND
SHALL COOL THE HEAT OF THIS DESCENDING SUN:
I'LL MAKE A SHADOW FOR THEE OF MY HAIR; IF THEY BURN TOO, I'LL QUENCH THEM WITH MY TEARS.
The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm, AND LO! I LIVE BETWEEN THAT SUN AND THEE:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm, THINE EYE DARTS FOR THE FIRE THAT BURNETH ME;
AND WE WERE NOT IMMORTAL, LIFE WERE DONE,
BETWEEN THIS HEAVENLY AND EARTHLY SUN.
ART THOU OBSCURATE, FLINTY, HARD AS STEEL?
NYAY MORE THAN FLINT, FOR STONE AT RAIN RELENTETH;
ART THOU A WOMAN'S SON, AND CANST NOT FEEL,
WHAT IS TO LOVE? HOW WOULD LOVING TORMENT THEE?
O! HAD THY MOTHER BORE SO HARD A MIND,
SHE HAD NOT Brought THERE, BUT DIED UNKIND.
WHAT AM I, THAT I SHOULDST CONTENT ME THIS?
OR WHAT GREAT DANGER DWELLS UPON MY SUIJ?
WHAT WERE THY LIPS THE WORSE FOR ANOTHER KISS?
SPEAK FAIR; BUT SPEAK FAIR WORDS, OR ELSE BE MUTE:
GIVE ME ONE KISS, I'LL GIVE IT THEE AGAIN,
AND ONE FOR INTEREST, IF THOU WILT HAVE TWAIN.
FIE! LIFELESS PICTURE, COOL AND SENSELESS STONE,
WELL-PAINTED IDOL, IMAGE DULL AND DEAD,
STATUE, CONTEMPTING BUT THE EYE ALONE,
THING LIKE A MAN, BUT OF NO WOMAN BRED:
THOU ART NO MAN, THOUGH OF A MAN'S COMPLEXION,
FOR MEN WILL KISS EVEN BY THEIR OWN DIRECTION.
THIS SAID, IMPATIENCE CHOKES HER PLEADING TONGUE, AND SWELLING PASSION DOETH PROVOKE A PAUSE;
RED CHEEKS AND FIERY EYES BLAZE FOR HER WRONG;
BEING JUDGE IN LOVE, SHE CANNOT RIGHT HER CAUSE;
AND NOW SHE WEEPETH, AND NOW SHE FAIN WOULD SPEAK,
AND NOW HER SOBS DO HER INTENDMENTS BREAK.
SOMETIMES SHE SHAKE SHE HEAD, AND THEN HIS HAND,
NOW GAZETH SHE ON HIM, NOW ON THE GROUND;
SOMETIMES HER ARMS INFORM HIM LIKE A BAND;
SHE WOULD, HE WOULD NOT IN HER ARMS BE BOUND;
AND WHEN FROM THENE SHE STRAGGLE TO BE GONE,
SHE LOCKS HER ILLY FINGER ONCE IN ONE.
FONDLING, SHE SAITH, SINCE I HAVE HEMM'D THEE HERE,
WITHIN THE CIRCUIT OF THIS IVORY VALE,
I'LL BE A PARK, AND THOU SHALT BE MY DEER;

"TITAN," I. e., the sun.—*SPIRIT FOR SPIRIT."—"INTENDMENTS," I. e., intentions.

Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass, and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
To shelter thee from tempest, and from rain:
Then, be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.

At this Adonis smiles, as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Fore-knowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love liv'd, and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, the round enchanting pits,
Open'd the moon to swallow Venus' liking,
Being mad before, how doth she now for wine?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.

PITY! SHE CRIES, SOME FAVOR, SOME REMORSE!
Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse!

But lo! from forth a copse that neighers by,
A breeding jenett, lusty, young, and proud,
Adonis' trampling courser doth carry,
And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to his straiten goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his worn girth he breaks asunder;
The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder:
The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth,
Controlling what he was now controlled ever.

His ears up prick'd, his braided hanging mane
Upon his compass'd crest now stands on end;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapors doth he send:
His eye, which scornfully glitters like fire,
Shows his hot courage, and his high desire.

Sometimes he trots, as if he told the steps
With gentle majesty, and modest pride;
Aonon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say, lo! thus my strength is tried;
And this I do, to captivate the eye
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What recketh he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering holla, or his "Stand, I say?"
What cares he now for curbs, or pricking spur,
For rich caparisons, or trampling gay?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
His art with nature's wonderful at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed:
So did his horse excel a common one,
In shape, in courage, color, pace, and bone.

Round hoof'd, short-jointed, the fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs, and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, break buttock, tender hide:
VENUS AND ADONIS.

Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.
Sometimes he scuds far off, and there he stares;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather:
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And 'er he run, or fly, they know not whether;
For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,
Fanning the hairs, a who wave like feather'd wings.
He looks upon his love, and neigs unto her;
She answered him, as if she knew his mind:
Being proud as females are, to see him woo her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind;
Spurns at his love, and scorn's the heat he feels,
Beating his kind embracements with her heels.
Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He sails his tail, that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
He stamps, and blies the poor flies in his fume.
His love, perceiving how he is enraged,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuaged.
His teacher master goeth about to take him,
What doth the unlock'd breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
As they were mad, unto the wood they hiso them,
Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.
All sworn with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love'sick love by pleading may be blest;
For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong,
When it is bair'd the adiance of the tongue.
An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, sweetheth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said,
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.
He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.
On what a sight it was, 'wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy:
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy:
But now her check was pale, and by and by
Flashed forth fire, as lightning from the sky.
Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
With one fair hand she heaved up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print,
As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.
O, what a war of looks was then between them! Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing;
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them;
With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.
Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a juil of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band;
So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, wild and unwilling,
Show'd like two silver doves that sit a billing.
Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou were as I, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee
Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.
Give me my hand, snith he, why dost thou feel it?
Give me my heart, saith she, and thou shalt have it;
O! give me my, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:
Then, love's deep groans I never can regard,
Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.
For shame! he cries, let go, and let me go;
My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so:
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone;
For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.
Thus she replies: thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:
Affection is a coal that must be cold;
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire.
The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none
Therefore, no marvel though thy horse be gone.
How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Solevily mastered with a leathern rein;
But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
He held such petty bondage in disdain;
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.
Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delight?
Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?
Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy,
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy;
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee:
O I learn to love; the lesson is plain,
And once made perfect, never lost again.
I know not love, quoth he, nor will not know it:
Unless it be a bairr, and then I chose it:
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it;
My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That hairs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.
Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinished?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth:
The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young,
Loseth his pride, and never waxeth strong.
You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat:
Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;
To heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery,
For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.
What! canst thou talk? (quoth she,) hast thou a tongue?
O, would you had not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong!
I had my load before, now press'd with bearing:
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding,
Ear's deep sweet music, and heart's deep sore wounding.

Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;
Or, were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the stillitory of thy face excelling
Comes breath perfum'd, that breathed love by smelling.

But O! what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four:
Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
And bid suspicion double lock the door,

Lest jealousy, that sore unwelcome guest,
Should by his stealing disturb the feast?
Once more the ruby-color'd portal opened,
Which to his speech did honey-passage yield;
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the sea-man, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to the mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
Guards and foul fluids to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh:
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth;
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berries breaks before it staineth;

Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.
And at his look she flatly fell down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth.

A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blesséd bankrupt that by love so thriveth!

The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red;
And all amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wisely prevent.

Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her:
For on the grass she lies, as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh army
He cheers the morn, and all the earth relieth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
We're never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had red his clouded with his brow's repine:

But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

O ! where am I? quoth she, in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?

* "Stillitory," i.e., stembie; laboratory.

But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lovely joy.

O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
Thy eye's shrew'd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain,
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
O! never let their crimson livories wear,
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive b infection from the dangerous year!

That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.

Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains any I make, still to be sealing!
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, yet good dealing;
Which purchase if you make, for fear of alps
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

A thousand kisses buys my heart from me,
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly gone?

Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty thousand kisses such a trouble?
Fair queen, quoth he, if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungrowen fry forbears:

The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.

Look, the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west:
The owl, night's herald, shrieks, 'tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light,
Do summon us to part, and bid good night.

Now let me say good night; and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.
Good night, quoth she; and, ere he says adieu,
The honey-fee of porting tender'd is:

Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face.

Till breathless he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew
Whereon they surfet, yet complain on drought:

He with her plenty pleass'd, she faint with dearth,
Their lips together gned, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filled;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paving what ransom the insolver willath;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to foruge;
Her face doth rock and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,

Forgetting shame's pure blush, and honor's wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being turn'd with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's turn'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,

b Growing plants were formerly supposed to possess the power of purifying the atmosphere. — c "Wrack," i.e., ruin; wreak.
VENUS AND ADONIS.

He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.
What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,
Chieflie in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-fac'd coward,
But then woods best, when most his choice is forward.
When he did frown, O! had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last.
For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence inclosed in his breast.
Sweet boy, she says, this night I'll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall wit thou make the match?
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.
The boar! (quoth she) whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheek: she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws;
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
His arm on her belly falls, she on his back.
Not is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus's is her annoy,
To clip Elysium, and to lack her joy.
Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye, and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in his mishap,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which she in her hands missing,
Makes her seek to kindle with continual kissing:
But all in vain: good queen, it will not be;
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd;
Her pleading hath deserve'd a greater fee;
She's love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd.
Fie, fie! he says, you crush me; let me go:
You have no reason to withhold me so.
Thou hadst been gone, quoth she, sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou toldst me, thou wouldst hunt the boar.
O! be advis'd; thou know'st not what it is
With jocul ain point a churchlie swine to gore,
Whose musk never-she'd be whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher's, bent to kill.
On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of brawit pikes, that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret;
His snout digs sepulchres whith'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes what'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his cruel tussles slay.
His brawny sides, with hairy bristles armed,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily humdred;
Being irrele on the lion he will venture:
The thorny Brambles and embowering bushes,
As fearful of him, part through whom he rushes.

* * * * *

Also! he sought esteemes that face of thine,
To which love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eye,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, (wondrous dread!)
Would root these beauties, as he roots the mend
O! let him keep his lustsome cabin still;
Beauty hath ought to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.
Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? and fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, wherein thou dest lie,
My burning heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But like an earthquake shakes thee on my breast.
For where love reigns, disturbing jealousy
Doth call himself affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry, "kill, kill!"
Distempering gentle love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.
This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This caitiff that eates up love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissentious jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:
And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his buck doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore:
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed,
Doth make them droop with grief, and hang the head.
What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.
But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox, which lives by subtility,
Or at the roe, which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-bred horse keep with thy hounds,
And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshit his troubles,
How he out-runs the wind, and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many mists and mists through which he goes,
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.
Sometimes he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the baying hounds mistake their smell;
And sometime where earth-delving comies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yelling.
And sometime 'sorteth with a herd of deer.
Danger deviash shifts; wit waits on fear:
For there his smell, with others being mingled,
The hot scent-suffling hounds are driven to doubt,

Venus and Adonis.

Ceasing their clamorous cry, till they have singled
With much ado the cold * fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.

By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his face pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarms be doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick, that hears the passing bell.
Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each mumurstay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low, never reliev'd by any.
Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hast'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

Where did I leave?—No matter where, quoth he;
Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent. Why, what of that? quoth she;
I am, quoth he, expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.
In night, quoth she, desiro sees last of all.

But if this fall, O! thou imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, as floating trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true-men thieves; so do thy lips.
Now, of this dark night I perceive the reason;
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forg'd Nature be condemn'd of treason.

For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine,
Wherein she fram'd thee, in high Heaven's despite,
To shame the sun by day, and her by night.
And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure * defecture;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances, and much misery;
As burning fevers, agues pale and faint;
Life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies * wood:
The narrow-eating sickness, whose attendant
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, impostumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair.

And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Both favor, savor, hue, and qualities,
Whereat th' impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wash'd, thaw'd, and done,
As mountain snow melts with the midday sun.

Therefore, despite of fruitless clamor,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving sires,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity,
And barren death of daughter and of sons,
Be modified: the lamp that burns by night,
Dries up his oil to lead the world his light.
What is thy body but a swelling grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity

Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
'Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is shain.

So in thyself thyself art made away,
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs who desolate hands themselves do say,
Or butcher sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul cankeing rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold's that put to use more gold begets.

 Nay then, quoth Adon, you will fall again
Into thy idle over-handled theme:
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-fac'd night, desire's soul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse
If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton marmaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;
Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast,
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.

No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.
What have you urg'd that I cannot * reproue?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That tends embraces unto every stranger.
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse.

Call it not love, for love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot grant stain'd, and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.
Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done:
Love smiteth not, lust like a gluton dies;
Love is all truth, lust full of forged lies.

More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen;
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark lawn runs space;
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd,
Look, how a bright star shooeth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;
Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seem no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.
Whereat smaz'd, as one that unaware
Hath diopp'd a precious jewel in the flood,

Or 'tost and as night wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.
And now she bents her heart, whereat it gowns,
That all the neighbor-caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans:
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled.
Ah me! she cries, and twenty times, woe, woe! woe!
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.
She marking them, begins a waiting note,
And sings extempore a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrall, and old men dote;
How love is wise in folly, foolish witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.
Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight
In such like circumstance, with such like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.
For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites;
Like shrill-tong'd tapsters answering every call,
Sothing the humor of fantastic wits?
She says, 'tis so: they answer all, 'tis so;
And would say after, if she said no.
Lo! here the gentle lark, weeny of rest,
From his most cabinets mounts up on high,
And makes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty:
Who doth the world so graciously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.
Venus subites him with this fair good-morrow.
O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that such'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.
This said, she hasteth to a mystic grove,
Musing the morning is so much forworn;
And yet she hears no tidings of her love:
She hearkens, for his hounds, and for his born:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she conosteth to the cry.
And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twin'd about her laugh to make her stay.
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dogs do ache,
Hosting to feed her fam'd kid in some brake.
By this she hears the hounds are at a lay,
Whereat she starts, like one that sees an adder
Wrench'd up in fatal folds, just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder:
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds.
For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt bough, rough bair, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs explain aloud;
Finding their enemy to be so close,
Their revenge courted, she shall cope him first.
This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart;
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness mungs each feeling part:

* * * * *

Conosteth," I. e., follows.--- Cope him," I. e., encounter him; engage with him.--- Who for which.

Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.
Thus stands she in a trembling exaxisy,
Till cheering up her senses all dismay'd,
She tells them, 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:
And with that word she spied the hunted boar:
Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her shews spread
Which madly hurry her she knows not whither:
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murther.
A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untrades again:
Her more than laste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain;
* Full of respect, yet nought at all respecting,
In hand with all things, nought at all affecting.
Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caiff for his master;
And there another licking of his wound.
Colin venom'd scours the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.
When he hath cens'd his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin voiles out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Clipping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.
Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whence with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies:
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on death.
Hard-favor'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love, (thus chides she death)
Grim grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou
To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath, [mean
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?
If he be dead, O no! it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it.
Could it be thou hast no eyes to see,
But hopelessly at random dost thou hit.
Thy mark is feebly age; but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's heart.
Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And hearing him thy power had lost his power.
The destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluckst a flower.
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.
Dost thou drink tears, though provok'd such weep-What may a heavy groan advantage thee? [ing
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
These eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigor,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigor.
Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eye-lids, who, like sitches, stopped
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd;

* * * * *

"Mated," I. e., thwarted.---"The welkin," I. e., the sky;
the vault of heaven.---"Vail d," I. e., closed; let fall.---"Who for whom."
VENUS AND ADONIS. 927

But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,
Sorrow that secretly sighs light to dry;

But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions through her constant woe,
As striving *who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labors so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief.

But none is best; then, join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this far off she hears some huntsman *how low;
A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well:
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labor to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters it she is Adonis' voice.

Whereas her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass.
To wash the foul face of the stultish ground,
That is but drunken, when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
Thy weat and woe are both of them extremes;
Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
The one doth flutter thee in thoughts unlikely,
In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unwaves the web that she hath wrought;
Adonis leaves, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that call'd him all to nought;
Now she adds honors to his hateful name;
She'll clothe him king of graves, and grave for kings,
Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

No, no, quoth she, sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear,
When as I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
Then, gentle shadow, (truth I must confess)
I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'T is not my fault: the boar provok'd my tongue;
Be 4 wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'T is he, foul creature, that light and kill thee wrong;
I did but rail, he's wiser of thy slander.

Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
Could rule them both, without ten women's wit.

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash *suspect she doth extemate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With death she humbly doth insinuate:
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories,
His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

O Jove! quoth she, how much a fool was I,
To be of such a weak and silly mind,
To wait his death, who lives, and must not die,
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind;
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear,
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves:
Tribles, unwitlessed with eye or ear,
That awkward heart with false belabouring grievances.

Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As Falcons to the lure, away she flies:
The grass stoops not, she travels on so light;
And in her haste unfatiguedly spies
The foul heart's conquest on her fair delight:

Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view
Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrieks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there all smother'd up in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again:
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep-dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,
Whereat each tributary subject quakes:

As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes;
Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.

This mutiny each part doth so surprise,
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;
And, being open'd, throw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd,
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
But froze his blood, and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus note:
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
Dumbly she passions, frantically she dates;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:

His face seems twin, each several limb is double:
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet, quoth she, behold two Adons dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:

Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

Ahas, poor world, what treasure lost thou lost!
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast
Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colors fresh and trim;
But true sweet beauty liv'd and died with him.

Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear;
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you:

But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:
And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep,
The wind would blow it off, and, being gone,
Play with his locks: then, would Adonis weep,
And straight in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

*Who for which.—Holla. Crepes, i.e., calls names.

4 Wreck'd, i.e., thrown away, i.e., suspected, i.e., suspected.

She pardons i.e., she is affected with passion.

His fair, i.e., his fairness.
VENUS AND ADONIS.

To see his face, the lion walk'd along
Behind some hedge, because he knew not
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame, and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills:
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took.
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries, and ripe red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar,
Wipes downward eye; still looks forth for a grave.
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then, I know,
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

'T is true, 't is true: thus was Adonis slain.
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And snuffling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheath'd, unaware, the task in his soft groin.

Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first:
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his, the more am I accurst.

With this she fellath in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told:
She lifts the coffin-lids that close his eyes,
Where lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies:

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excelled,
And every beauty rob'd of 4 his effect:

Wonder of time, quoth she, this is my spite,
That thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy.
Find sweet beginning, but unsavory end;
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud;
And be and be blasted in a breathing-while;

* "Fear him," i. e., affright, terrify him.—An archa in a hedgehog.—"Nuzzling," i. e., working with the nose.—
4 His for its.

The bottom poison, and the top o'er-grow'd
With sweets, that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

It shall be sparing, and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the *measures;
The starry ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

It shall suspect, where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear, where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe;
And most deceiving, when it seems most just:
Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward;
Put fear to valor, courage to the coward.

It shall be cause of war, and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontent,
As dry combustious matter is to fire:

"Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy,
They that love best, their loves shall not enjoy.

By this the boy, that by her side lay kill'd,
Was melted like a vapor from her sight,
And in his blood, that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white;
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath;
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is rest from her by death:

She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

Poor flower, quoth she, this was thy father's guise,
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 't is thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast, as in his blood.

Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 't is thy right:
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:
There shall not be one minute in an hour,
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.

Thou weary of the world, away she bies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd;
Holding their converse to Paphos, where their queen
Means to Immure herself and not be seen.

4 The measures was a stately dance, peculiarly suited to elderly persons.—"Since.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

["Lucrece. London. Printed by Richard Field, for John Harrison, and are to be sold at the signe of the white Greyhound in Paules Church-yard. 1594." 4to. 47 leaves.

"Lucrece. At London, Printed by N. O. for John Harrison. 1607." 8vo. 32 leaves.]

"Lucrece," as it is merely called in the earlier impressions, came out in the year following "Venus and Adonis," and it was printed for John Harrison, the publisher of the edition of "Venus and Adonis," in 1594. It had been previously entered, under a more explanatory title, in the Stationers' Registers:

"9 May 1594.

Mr. Harrison, sen.] A booke intituled the Ravishment of Lucrece."

Like "Venus and Adonis," it was dedicated to the Earl of Southampton, but in a more confident and assurance spirit. This second production was, probably, not quite so popular as the first, and it was not again printed until 1598, for the same bookseller, who put forth a third edition of it in 1600; the fourth edition was issued in 1607: these are not so marked; and Malone tells us that he had heard of impressions in 1606 and 1609, but they have not since come to light; and our belief is, that "Lucrece" was only printed four times between 1594 and 1607. An edition in 1616 purports to have been "newly revised and corrected," but as Malone truly states, "it is the most inaccurate and corrupt of the ancient copies;" and he adds that "most of the alterations seem to have been made, because the reviser did not understand the poet's meaning." That Shakespeare had nothing to do with the revision and correction of this edition requires no proof; and so little was it esteemed, that it was not followed in its changes in the edition of 1624, which also professes to have been "newly revised." This last is accompanied by marginal notes, prosyically explanatory of the incidents poetically narrated.

The edition of "Lucrece" we have taken as our text is the first, which, like "Venus and Adonis," was printed by Richard Field, though not on his own account. It may be stated on the whole to be an extremely creditable specimen of his typography; so the sheets were going through the press, some material errors were, however, observed in them, and they are therefore in several places corrected. Modern editors have performed their task without due care, but of their want of attention we shall only here adduce two specimens. In one of the speeches in which Lucrece endeavors to dissuade Tarquin from his purpose, she tells him,

"Thus lookst at reproaches against long-living lord."

Which every modern editor misprints,

"Thus lookst at reproaches against long-lived lord."

Our second proof is from a later portion of the poem, just after Collatine has returned home, and meets his dishonored wife: the true text, speaking of Collatine and Lucrece, is,

"He stood like old acquaintance in a trance
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance."

Malone, and all editors after him, make nonsense of the couplet, by printing,

"But stood like old acquaintance in a trance," &c., depriving the verb of its nominative, and destroying the whole force of the figure.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY Wriothesly, EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; who, of this pamphlet, without examining it, but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honorable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; mean time, as it is, it is bound to your lordship; to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness. Your lordship's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

Lucius Tarquinius (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus) after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tinellus, to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea: during which siege, the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

From the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not met
To raise the clear unmatched hue of white,
Who in triumph'd in that sky of his delight;
Where mortals stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate;
Reckoning his fortune at such high proud rate,
That kings might be exposed to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness! enjoy'd but of a few;
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done,
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendor of the sun:
An expir'd date, cancel'd ere well begun:
Honor and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth, then, 'tis apologies be made
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece's sovereignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king,
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sing [vaunt
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should
That golden lap which their superiors want.

But some unwise thought did instigate
His heart to time-less spied, if not those:
His honor, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O rash, false heat! wrapt in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blists, and ne'er grows old.

When at Collatium this false lord arrived,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue strived
Which of them both should underprop her fame;
When virtue braggd, beauty would blush for shame;
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite
Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intituled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field:
Then, virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When face was assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This hardbly in Lucrece's face was seen,
Argued by beauty's red, and virtue's white:
Of either's color was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right,
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight,
The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchance each other's seat.

This silent war of lies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure banks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies, that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he, that her husband's shallow tongue,
The niggard predilig that prais'd her so,
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore, that praise which Collatine doth owe,
Enchanted Tarquin answers with some miasme,
In silent wonder of still gazing eyes.

This earthy saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspeteth the false worshipper,
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil;
Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer,
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he color'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plait's of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Some censure may to much woman reprov'd his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That clown'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stronger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parling looks,
Nor read the subtle shining seeracies
Writ in the glassy margins of such books:

"Parling," i.e., parlyeing; discouraging.—"Margines," i.e., margins.

* "Bateless," i.e., unmistakable.—"Did not let," i.e., did not forbear.—* "Apologies," i.e., arguments.—"Suggested," i.e., instigated.—"Hap," i.e., fortune.
The Rape of Lucrece. 931

She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks;
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.
He *stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry.
With bruised arms and wounds of victory:
Her joy with heav'y-laden hand she doth express,
And wordless so greats heavens for his success.
For from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
DOTH yet in his fair wellkin once appear;
Till sable night, mother of dread and fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the day.
For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending weariness with heavy
For after supper long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight,
And every one to rest themselves betake,
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that
As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstain.
Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
And when great treasure is the need proposed,
Though death be adjourn, there's no death supposed.
Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
That what they have not, that which they possess,
They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor rich gain.
The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honor, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this sin there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one, is gone;
As life for honor in full battles' rage;
Honor for wealth, and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost.
So that in venturing ill, we leave to be
The things we have; and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing by augmenting it.
Such hazard now must dating Tarquin make,
Pawning his honor to obtain his lost,
And for himself himself he must forsake:
Then, where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues, and wretched hateful days?
Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes;
No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls' and owls' death-dropping cries
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs. Pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wak'd, to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leapt from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm,
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm;
But honest fear, bound with lust's foul charm,
DOTH too oft betake it to retire.
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.
His faction on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly,
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be kedge-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:
As from this cold flint I enforce this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.
Here, pale with fear, he doth premeditate
The dangers of his hostile enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then, looking scornfully, he doth despise
His naked armor of still slaughtered lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust.
Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unshallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your unmeaning trash which is divine:
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed,
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white
O shame to knighthood, and to shining arms!
O foul diadem to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valor still a true respect should have;
Then, my *digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.
Yes, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some looseth some dhal the herald will *contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.
What win I, if I gain the thing I seek!
A dream, a breath, a fleeting joy,
Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week,
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy,
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be stricken down?
If Collatine dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blue to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame.
O! what excuse can my invention make,
When thou slant change me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.
Had Collatine kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,

* "Digression," i.e., *deviation from the path of virtue.
+ In books of *digression, a particular mark of disgrace is mentioned, by which the escutcheons of those persons were anciently distinguished, who "discourteously used a widow, maid, or wife, against her will."
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quidat of such stricte;
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

Shameful it is;—ay, if the fact be known;
Hateful it is;—there is no hate in loving;
I'll beg her love;—but she is not her own:
Thus was his denial, and replying.
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing:
Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.

Thus, graceless, holds he disputacion
'Tween frozen conscience and hot burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worser sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment dath confound and kill
All pure effects, and dath so for proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, she took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the warlike band,
Where her beloved Collatins lies.
O, how her fear did make her color rise!
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then, white as lawn, the roses took away.

And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Force'd it to tremble with her loyal fear!
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
Whereout she smiled with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

Why hunt I, then, for color or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth:
Affection is my captain, and he leadeth,
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward figh, and will not be dismay'd.
Then, childish fear, avoant! debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age;
My heart shall never countermand mine eye;
Sild pause and deep regard beseech the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage.

Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then, who fears sinking where such treasure lies?
As corn o'er-grown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresist'd lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servants to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.
Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the self-same seat sits Collatine:
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so faire will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which, once corrupted, takes the worser part:
And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund shew,
Staff up his hat, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more lavish tribute than they b owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each on by him enforce'd retir'd his ward;
But as they open they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard:
The threshold grates the door to have him heard;

Nightly wondering weasels shriek, to shew him there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and cresurnes of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face.

Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, with fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:
And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks:
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And gripping it, the needle his finger pricks;
As who should say, this glove to wanton tricks
Is not insul'd; return again in haste;
Though seest our mistresses' ornaments are chaste.

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him;
He in the worst sense construes their denial:
The doors, the wind, the glove, that did deny him,
He takes for accidental things of trial,
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial;
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt;
So, so, quoth he; these let's attend the time,
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the primo;
And on the sipers birds more cause to sing.

Till pays the income of each precious thing;
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves
And sands,
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.
Now is he come unto the chamber-door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself imploity hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited th' eternal power
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
And they would stand auspicious to the hour,
Even there he starts:—quoth he, I must deflower
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they, then, assist me in the act?

Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
My will is lack'd with resolution:
Thoughts are but dreams, till their effects be tried;
The blackest sin is cleared with absolution;
Against love's fire none's frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.
This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide.
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:
Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpents steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
 Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.
Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet-unstained bed.

* Quidat for requitad.—One for one.

The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eye-balls in his head:
By their high treason is his heart misled;
Which gives the watch-word to his hand full soon,
Who, like a foul usurper, was the silver moon.
Look, as the fair and snowy pointed sun,
Rushing forth a cloud, bereaves our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes beguine
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is, that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed,
But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.
O! had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill:
Then Collatine again, by Lucrece's side,
In his clear bed might have repos'd still;
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
And holy-thought Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.
Her fly hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss,
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in Sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his blises,
Between whose hills her head intomtomb is;
Who, like a virtuous portion hurt, she lies,
To be admitt'd of lewd unhallowed eyes.
Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green covert's; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly swet, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.
Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breast:
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.
Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlda unconquered;
Save of their lord, no bearing yoke they know,
And him by oath they truly honor'd.
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred;
Who, like a foul usurper, went.
From this fair throne to heave the owner out,
What could he see, but mightily he noted?
What did he note, but strongly he desired?
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tired.
With more than admiration he admired
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.
As the grim lion fanneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by guizing quelled;
Slink'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side,
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:
And they, like struggling slaves for pilage fighting,
Obdurate vassals still exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children's tears, nor mothers' groans respecting,
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart, alarm strik's,
Gives the hot charge, and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eyes commend the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
On her bare breasts, in heart of all her hand,
Whose ranks of blue veines, as his hand did scale,
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.
They,mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governness and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries:
She, much amazed, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dim'd and confound'd.
Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a shaking;
What terror 'tis! but she, in worse taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.
Wrap'd and confound'd in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting statues, in her thoughts:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
(Rude ram to batter such an ivory wall)
May feel her heart (poor citizen!) distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes within.
This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity,
To make the breach, and enter this sweet city.
First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe:
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanor seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still,
Under what color he commits this ill.
Thus he replies: The color in thy face
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush with her own eloquence,
Shall plead for me, and tell my loving tale;
Under that color am I come to scale
Thy never conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.
Thus I forestal thee, if thou mean to chide;
Thy beauty bath enn'rd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will, that man's thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.
I see what crosses my attempt will bring,
I know what thorns the growing rose defends,
I think the honey guarded with a sting;
All this beforehand counsel comprehends,
But will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends:
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dotes on what he looks,"gainst law or duty.
I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can afflicting course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
By holy human law, and common truth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow’d bed he make retire,
And stooop to honor, not to foul desire.
Quoth she, reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast 2 pretended;
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thy shot be ended:
He is no wood-man, that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.
My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave me;
Myself a weakling, do not then ensue me;
Thou look’st not like deceit, do not deceive me:
My sigils, like whirlwinds, labor hence to heave thee.
If ever man were mov’d with woman’s moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans.
All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolved to water do convert.
Oh! what harder than a stone thou art?
Melt at my tears and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.
In Tarquin’s likeness I did entertain thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong’st his honor, wound’st his princely name:
Thou art not what thou seem’st; and if the same,
Thou seem’st not what thou art, a god, a king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.
How will thy shame be sealed in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring?
If in thy hope thou dar’st do such outrage,
What dar’st thou not, when once thou art a king?
O, be remember’d! no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip’d away;
Then, kings’ misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.
This deed will make thee only lov’d for fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear’d for love;
With foul offenders thou performe must bear,
When they in their like offences prove:
If for the name of this, thy will, they dare;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects’ eyes do learn, do read, do look.
And wilt thou be the school where lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass, wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonor in thy name?
Thou back’dst reproach against long-living laud,
And mak’dst fair reputation but a bawd.
Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will;
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfill,
When, pattern’d by thy fault, foul sin may say,
He learn’d to sin, and thou didst teach the way?
Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men’s faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smoother.
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.
O, how are they wrap’d in with infirmities,
That from their own misdeeds 3 snatch their eyes!

2 Pretended for intended.— 3 Askance, I. e., turn away obliquely.
To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash deliver;
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal;
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His ever-present will prison false and void.

And wipe the din mist from thy doting *eye,
That thou shalt see thy state, and pity mine.
Have done, quoth he; my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this blet.
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury feet:
The petty streams, that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign with their fresh fols' haste,
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.

Thou art, quoth she, a sea, a sovereign king,
And I! there falls into thy boundless flood.
Black lust, dishonor, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hersed,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispersed.

So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified:
Thou their fair life, and they thy fooler grave:
They lecher'd in their shame, they lecher'd in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.
So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state—
No more, quoth he; by heaven, I will not hear thee:
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear thee;
That done, despeartely I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascall groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame, folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries;
Till with her own white fleece her voice control'd
Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:
For with the nightly linen that she wears,
He pens her piteous clamors in her head,
Cooing his hot face in the chastest tears
That lecher'd in thy eye with sorrowful glee:
O, that 'prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.
But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again;
This forced league doth force a further strife
This momentary joy breeds months of pain:
This hot desire converts to cold disdain.
Pure chastity is riled of her store,
And lust, the thief, far poorer than before.
Look, as the full-fed hound, or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell, or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey whereof by nature they delight:
So surfeit-taking Tarquin farse this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring.
O deeper sin, than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination
Dream desire must vomit his recit,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While lust is in his pride, no exclamation

Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till, like a jade, self-will himself doth tire.
And then, with lank and lean discolor'd cheek,
With heavy eye, knot brow, and strengthless pace,
Feeble desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case:
The flesh being proud, desire doth fight with grace,
For there it prevails; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this *faultful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly closed;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands disgraced:
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defaced;
To whose weak ruins mustering troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.
She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down a consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall.
To living death, and pain perpetual:
Which in her prescience she controlled still,
But her foresight could not fore-stall their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he
A captive victor that hath lost in gain; [stealth,
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will despite of cure remain;
Leaving his soul perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burden of a guilty mind.

He, like a thiefish dog, creeps sadly thence,
She like a wearded lamb lies panting there;
He scowls, and hates himself for his offence,
She despareth with her nails her flesh doth tear;
He faintly flies, swelling with guilty fear;
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and clothes his vanish'd, hoast'd delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertor,
She there remains a hopeless cast-away;
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day;
For day, quoth she, night's scopes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how
To cloke offences with a cunning brow.
They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold,
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold.
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night.

O, comfort-killing night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame;
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell;
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbor for *defame!
Grim cave of death, whispering conspirator
With close-tong'd treason and the ravisher!

O, hateful, voracious, and foggy night!
Since thou art guilty of my careless crime,

---

* "Eyne," i. e., eyes—" Let," i. e., hindrance; obstacle.
  " Front," i. e., headlong; precipitious.

* "Faultful," i. e., blameful.—* "Defame," i. e., defamation; infamous.
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time:
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
Let their exhale unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the air unfeared,
Ere he arrive his weary noon-tide prick;
And let thy misty vapors march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his mother's light
May set at noon, and make perpetual night.

Were Tarquin night, as he is but night's child,
The silver-shining queen he would disdain;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defiled,
Through night's black bosom should not peep again:
So should I have co-parners in my pain;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage.

As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.
Where, now, I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms, and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows, and hide their infancy;
But I alone, alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine;
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting woes.

O night! thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous day behold that face
Which bears the underneath thy black all-availing cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace;
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made,
May likewise be sepulch'd in thy shade.

Make me not object to the tell-tale day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
You, the illustrious, that know not again,
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my louthsome trespass in my looks.

The nurse to still her child will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name;
The oderator to deck his oratory
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted:
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undervel'd reproach to him allotted,
That is as clear from this attaint of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatine's face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the 'not afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas! how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows.

If, Collatine, thine honor lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:

In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.
Yet am I guilty of thy honor's wreck;
Yet for thy honor did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonor to disdain him:
Besides, oftreachness he did complain him,
And 'tis my duty, virtue.—O, my soul for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil!
Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud,
Or hateful cuckoo hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that coffers up his gold,
Is plagud with cramps, and gouts, and painful fits,
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain,
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.
So, then he hath it, when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.

Those weeps we wish for turn to loathed sores,
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring,
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers,
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing,
What virtue breeds, iniquity devours;
We, the adder's haper, where we can say ours,
But ill annexed opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.
O, Opportunity! thy guilt is great:
'T is thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou seal'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the season:
'T is thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason:
And in thy shabby cell, where none may spy him,
Sits sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire, when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smoother'st honesty, thou murder'st truth:
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal, and displaceth land:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief:

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private boasting to a public fast;
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?
When will thou be the humble suppliant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strife to end,
Or free the life of purity, so few and rare?
Give physic to the sick, ease to the rained?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee,
But they never meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

937

Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds.
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages;
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.
When truth and virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy side:
They buy thy help; but sin ne'er gives a fee:
He gratis comes, and thou art well \(^*\)applying,
As well to hear, as grant what he hath said.
My Colchite would else have done to me,
When Tarquin did; but he was stay'd by thee.
Guilty thou art of murder and of theft;
Guilty of perjury and subornation;
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift;
Guilty of incest, that abomination:
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

Mis-shapen Time, \(^*\) copestone of ugly night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisy care;
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare;
Thou nester all, and murderer all that are.
O hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time!
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.
Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancel'd my fortunes, and enriched me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion broad,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wiser till he render right;
To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers:
To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books, and alter these contents,
To mock the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs,
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel:
To show the bolder daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild;
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguili'd;
To cheer the ploughman with increaseable crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops;
Why work'st thou mischiefs in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor \(^*\)retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends: \([\text{back, O! this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come I could prevent this storm, and slay thy wrack.}]
Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity
To make him curse this cursed criminal night:
Let ghastly shadows his bold eyes affright,
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

\(^\) "Appoy'd," i. e., satisfied.—\(^\) "Copesmate," i. e., companion; friend.—\(^\) To fine," i. e., to end.—\(^\) Retiring for returning.

Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid greans;
Let there bechanace him pitiful mishances,
To make him mean, but pity not his moons:
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let not women to him lose their mildness,
Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness.
Let him have time to tear his cursed hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loued slave;
Let him have time a beggar's cats to crave,
And time to see one that by alns doth live,
Disdain to him dischanced scraps to give.
Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to make low slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly, and his time of sport:
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wait th' abusing of his time.
O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill:
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill! \([\text{spill}; Such wretched hands snelt wretched blood should}]
For who should have such an office have,
As shudderous death's-man to so base a slave?
The lacer is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honor'd, or begetts him hate;
For greatest scandalous waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd, But little stars may idle them when they list.
The crown may bathe his coal-black wings in mine,
And unperceiv'd fly with the swift away;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day:
Glamours are unnoted whereas' they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.
Out, idle words! servants to shallow fools, Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators! Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters;
To trembling clients be ye mediators:
For me, \(^*\) I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.
In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful night;
In vain I cavil with mine infancy,
In vain I spurn at my confir'm'd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy, indeed, to do me good, Is to let forth my foul, defiled blood.
Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree
Honor thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die, my honor lives in thee,
But if I live, thou liv'st in my shame:
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And want affect to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.
This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death;
But this no-slaughter-house no tool imparteth,
To make more vent for passage of her breath,
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

Which, thronging through her lips, so vanished
As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

In vain, quoth she, I live; and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life:
I fear'd by Tarquin's fashion to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife;
But when I fear'd, I was a loyal wife.
So am I now—O no! that cannot be:
Of that true type hath Tarquin riled me.
O! that is gone, for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die,
To clear this spot by death, at least, I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy.
Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!
Well, well, dear Calliope, thou shalt not know
The stained taste of violated truth;
I will not wrong thy true affection so,
To flatter thee with an insinuing oath;
This bastard grief shall never come to growth:
He shall not boast, who did thy stock pollute,
That thou art doting father of his fruit.
Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor hugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought
Basely with gold, but stolen from thy gate.
For me, I am the mistress of my fate,
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my fore'd offence.
I will not poison thee with my aattaint,
Nor fold my fault in commonly d'excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not point,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses:
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-ton'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow, sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when lo! the blushing morrow
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:
But cloudly Lucrce sham's herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every crenny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping;
To whom she sobbing speaks: O eye of eyes!
Why pry'st thou through my window? leave thy peeping;
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping:
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,
For day hath nought to do what's done by night.
Thus envails she with every thing she sees.
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with matcht agrees:
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labor drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputition with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renewes,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometimes her grief is dumb, and hath no words;
Sometimes 'tis mad, and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy,
Make her mouns mad with their sweet melody;
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief most is pleas'd with grief's annoy:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd,
When with like semblance it is sympathis'd.
'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines, that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound acut more;
Great grief grievances most at that would do it good:
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows:
Grief daliied with nor law nor limit knows.
You mocking birds, quoth she, your tunes entomb
Within your hollow swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
My restless discord loves no stops nor arests;
A woful hostess brooks not merry guests.
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes aumps, when time is kept with tears.

Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grave in my dishelv'd hair.
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep grousing the dispassion'd hour:
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tercus desanct'st, better akill,
And whiles against a thorin thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woes wakening, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife, to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.
And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, sevied from the way,
That knows not parting heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes to change their® kinds:
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.

As the poor frighted deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out rendily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is shun'd, and death reproach'd debtor.
To kill myself, quoth she, alack! what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half, with greater patience bear it,
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion, [one,
Who having two sweet babies, when death takes
Will slay the other, and be nurse to none.
My body or my soul, which was the dearer;
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Calliope?
Ah me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His love will wither, and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECIA

Her house is sack'd; her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batted by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly girt with during infinity:
Then, let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole,
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

Yet die I will, till my Colutine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death,
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll misrepresent,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

My honor I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonored.
'Tis honor to deprive dishonor'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honor is new-born.

Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou never canst excel me;
How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me;
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

This brief abjuration of my will I make:
—My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take;
Mine honor be the knife's that makes my wound;
My shame be his that did my name confound;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

Then, Colutine, shak' overuse this will;
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's soul dead my life's fair end shall free it.

Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say, "so be it."
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee:
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,
With unmatch'd tongue she hoarsely calls her maid,
With whose example thou never canst excel me;

For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.
Poor Lucrecia's cheeks unto her maid seem so,
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why, her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-clepsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-run'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower exquisites like a melting eye,
Even so the maid with smilling drops gan wet
Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy.

Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling:
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling:
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts:
For men have marble, women waxen, minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, ill impression of strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then, call me not the authors of the ill.
No more than wax shall be accounted evil,
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.
Their smoothness, like a goodly champagne plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep:
In men, as in a rough-grow'n grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sheep.
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the withered flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd.
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O! let it not be 'child
Poor women's faults, that they are so full'd
With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame.
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrce view,
Assail'd by night, with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
Such danger to resistance did belong,
That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrce speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining:
My girl, quoth she, on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are running?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood:
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

But tell me, girl, when went—(and there she stay'd Till after a deep grom) Tarquin from hence?
Madam, ere I was up, replied the maid;
The more to blame my sluggard negligence:
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense;
Myself was stirring ere the break of day.

And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.
But, lady, if your maid be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.
O peace! quoth Lucrce: 'if it should be told,
The repetition cannot make it less:
For more it is than I can well express:
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen,
Yet save that labor, for I have them here.
What should I say?—One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready by and by, to hear.
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear:
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill.
Conceit and grief an enger combat fight;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will;
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a press of people at a door.

Thro' her inventions, which shall go before.

* * * "To deprive," i.e., to abridge.—The express of a will was designed as a check upon the executors.—"Sorts," i.e., suits.—"Who for which."
At last she thus begins: "Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife who grieveth thee,
Health to thy person: next, vouchsafe to afford
(If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see)
Some present speed to come and visit me.
So I commend me from our house in grief:
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief."
Here folds she up the tenor of her woes,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality:
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.
Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her;
When sighs and groans and tears may grace the
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her [fashion
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To sum this blot she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better.
To see sad sights moves more than hear them told,
For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part of woe doth bear:
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear;
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow elds, being blown with wind of words.
Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ,
"At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste."
The post attains, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-fac'd groom to lie as fast
As ingling fowls before the northern blast:
Speed more than speed but dull and slow she Extremity still urges such extremes. [deems;]
The homely villain court'sies to her low,
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll, without or yen or no,
And forth with bashful innocence cloth lie:
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie,
Imagine every eye beholds their blame,
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame;
When, sily grooms! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of a worn-out age
Paw'd honest looks, but hy'd no words to gage.
His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blazed;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's last,
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed;
Her earnest eye did make him more amazed:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish,
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.
But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, so weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied you, so hath tired moon.
That she her paints a little while both stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.
At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
Threatening cloud-kissing Jove with annoy;
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven it seem'd to kiss the turrets bow'd.
A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life.
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
The red blood reck'd to show the painter's strie;
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
Like dying coals burst out in tedious nights.
There might you see the laboring pioneer
Begrind't with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little hus:
Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.
In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth quick bearing and dexterity.
And here and there the painter interlaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling pasces:
Which heartless penants did so well resemble.
That one would swear they saw them quake and tremble.
In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either 'cipher'd either's heart;
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax's eyes blaut rage and rigor roll'd;
But the cold glance that sly Ulysses lent,
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.
There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand,
As 't were encouraging the Greeks to fight;
Making such sober action with his hand,
That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the sight.
In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,
Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly
Thin winding breath, which purli'd up to the sky.
About him were a press of gaping faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice
And jointly listening, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice:
Some high, some low; the painter was so nice,
The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.
Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
His nose being shadow'd by his neighbor's ear;
Here one, being thro'g'd, bears back, all 'boll'n and red;
Another, smother'd, seems to pelt and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.
For much imaginary work was there;
Concert deceitful, so compact, so 'kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand: himself behind
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind.
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagined.
And from the walls of strong besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their light joy seemed to appear
(Like bright things stain'd) a kind of heavy fear

"Conceited," i. e., ingenious; — "Boll'n," i. e., swollen,
"So kind," i. e., so natural.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

And from the strand of Dardan, where they fought,
To Simois's reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and thus Retire again, till meeting so great a force
They join, and shoot their foam at Simois's banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrce come,
To find a face where all distress is staid.
Many she sees, where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and dolor dwell'd,
Till she despairing Hecuba behold,
_Throned_ on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomy'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's reign:
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd,
Of what she was no semblance did remain;
Here blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunck pipes had Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrce spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beladen's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer but her cries,
And bitter words to be ban his cruel foes:
The painter was no God to lend her those
And thereon Lucrce swear'd he did it wrong,
To give her so much grief, and not a tongue.
Poor instrument, quoth she, without a sound,
I' th' tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue,
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy, that burns so long,
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thieves enemies.

Show me the trumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heft of lust, fond Paris, did incure
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:
Thine eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here, in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many more?
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
And guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe.
For thereon Lucrce swear'd she did it well,
To plague a private sin in general
Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus dies:
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unavow'd wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds.
Had doing Priam check'd his son's desire,
Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire.
Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little grief rings out the doleful knell.
So Lucrce, set a-work, sad tales doth tell
To pencil'd pensiveness and color'd sorrow;
She lends them words, and she's their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting, round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament:
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That pitious looks to Pyrrhan shepherds lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content.
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild, that patience seem'd to scorn his woes.
In him the painter lab'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show;
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes waiting still,
A brow unbent that seem'd to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust.
False-creeping craft and porjery should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-face'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skil'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Simon, whose enchanting story
The cedulous old Priam after slow;
Whose words like wild-fire burst the shining glory
Of rich-build'd Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little swans shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell whereon their dwell'd faces.

This picture she advisedly perused,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Simon's was abused;
So fair a form b'd did not a mind so ill:
And still on him she gazed and gaz'ing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.
It cannot be, quoth she, that so much guile—
(She would have said) can lurk in such a look;
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue, "can lurk?" from "cannot!"
“It cannot be" she in that sense forsook, [took]
And turn'd it thus: it cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind:
For even as subtle Simon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
(As if with grief or travail he dead fainted)
To me came Tarquin armed;
[too beguil'd]
With outward honesty, but yet deform'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

Look, look! how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Simon sheds.
Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bloods:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

Such devils steal effects from lightless hell,
For Simon in his fire dute quake with cold,
And in that cold, hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools, and make them bold;
So Priam's trust false Simon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.

Here, all carr'd, such passion her assail,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Simon with her nails,
But I beguil'd, I. e. mask'd.
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
Fool! fool! quoth she, his wounds will not be sore.
Thus ebb and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining.
She finds no longer in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.
Which all this time hath overslip'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent,
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surprise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It caseth some, though none it ever cured,
To think their dolor others have endured.
But now the mindful messenger, come back;
Brings home his lord and other company,
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black;
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.
Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazedly in her sad face he stores;
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw;
Her lively color kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares;
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.
At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: What uncount ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair color spent?
Why art thou thus stil'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dearest, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief that we may give redress.
Three times with signs she gives her sorrow fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length, address'd to answer his desire,
She slowly prepares to let them share;
Her honor is taken prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.
And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.
Few words, quoth she, shall fit the trespass best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amending:
In me more woes than words are now depending;
And my lament would be drawn out too long;
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.
Then, be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow lay
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me.
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.
For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried, Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.
For some hard-favor'd groom of thine, quoth he,
Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee,
And swear I found you where you did fulfill
The leathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be
My fame, and thy perpetual infancy.
With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.
Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had pursu'd his eyes,
And when the judge is rob'd, the prisoner dies.
O! teach me how to make mine own excuse,
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find:
Though once so vile be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessory yeldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.
Lo! here the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damm'd up with woe,
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away, that stops his answer so;
But wretched as he is, he strives in vain,
What he breathes out, his breath drinks up again.
As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Out-came the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast,
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past;
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.
Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his intimate frenzy thus awaketh:
Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining skaketh.
My woes too sensibly thy passion maketh
More feeling painful; let it, then, suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.
And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past, the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.
But ere I name him, you fair hearers, both she,
(Speaking to those that came with Collatine)
Shall plight your honorable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design,
To chase injustice with revengeful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies harms.
At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promisethow,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to bear the hateful foe bewayd';
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. O! speak, quoth she,
How may this forced stain be wip'd from me?
What is the quality of mine offence?
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?
The Rape of Lucrece.

May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declin'd honor to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again,
And why not I from this compelled stain?

With this, they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map whereon deep vexation bears
Of hard misfortune, can't in it with tears.
No, no, quoth she; no shame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.

Here, with a sigh as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name: "he, he," she says,
But more than "he" her poor tongue could not speak;
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this: he, he, fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unshathed:
That blow did *halt it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathed:
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathed [fly
Her winged spire, and through her wounds death
Life's lasting date from cancel'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonished with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his loyal crew;
Till Lucrece's father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw:
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;
And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who like a late-sick'd island 'vauntly stood,
Bare and unpeopled, in this fearful flood.
Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery *rigel goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
And ever since, as plying Lucrece's woes,
Corrupted some water watery token shows;
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so purify'd.

Daughter, dear daughter! old Lucretius cries,
That life was mine, which thou hast here depriv'd.
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live, now Lucrece is unliv'd?
Thou wast not to this end from me deriv'd.
If children pre-decease progenitors,
We are their offspiring, and they none of ours.

Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new-born;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-bon'd death by time out-worn.
O! from thy cheekes my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was.

O time! cease thou thy course, and last no longer,
If they succeed to be that should survive.

Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
And leave the flattering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then live, sweet Lucrece! live again, and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee!

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in keyd Lucrece's bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pained spot in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till many a shame bids him possess his breath,
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk; but through his lips doth thron
Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime Tarquin was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrows' tide to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
Then, son and father weep with equal strife,
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says, She's mine: O! mine she is,
Replies her husband: Do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.
O! quoth Lucretius, I did give that life,
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd?
Woe, woe! quoth Collatine, she was my wife,
I ow'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.
'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamors fill'd
The dispers'd air, who holding Lucrece's life,
Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter and my wife.'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece's side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words, and uttering foolish things:
But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise,
And arm'd his long-lived wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatine's eyes.
Thou wronged lord of Rome, quoth he, arise:
Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
Now set thy long-experienced wit to school.
Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woes?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow,
For his soul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humor from weak minds proceeds;
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To speak herself that should have slain her foe.

Courteous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations,
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman blood with invigorating
That they will suffer these abominations,

k "Ow'd," i.e., owned.
Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgraced,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.
Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stained,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintained,
And by chaste Lucrece's soul, that late complained
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.
This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,

Who, wondering at him, did his words allow;
Then, jointly to the ground their knees they bow,
And that deep vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.
When they had sworn to this advised doom
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence;
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

SONNETS.

INTRODUCTION.

"A Lovers Complaint. By William Shakspere," occup-pies eleven pages of this plate. The late Mr. Caldecot presented a copy of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" to the Bodleian Library, with the following imprint, "An Edition By G. Eld for T. T. and are to be solde by John Wright, dwelling at Christ Church gate." It is no doubt the same edition as that "to be solde by William Aspley."

"Shakespeare's Sonnets were printed under that title, and with the name of the poet in unusually large capital letters, in 1609. No Christian name is to be found until we ar-rive at "A Lover's Complaint," but "Shakespeare's Sonnets" is repeated at the head of the first of the series. Hence we may possibly be warranted in assuming that they were productions well known to have been for some time floating about among the lovers and admirers of poetry, and then collected into a volume. The celebrity of the author seems proved, if any proof of the kind was wanting, by the manner in which his "Sonnets" were put forth to the world.

The application of the initials T. T. on the title-page, is ascertained from the Registers of the Stationers' Company, where the subsequent entry is found:—

"29 May 1609.
"The, Thorpe, printer, doth hereby call'd Shakespeare's Sonnets" "A question has arisen, and has been much disputed of late years, who was the individual to whom Thorpe dedicated these sonnets, and whether he inserted a printed and pecu- liar form, he addresses as "Mr. W. H." That form is preci- cely as follows, on a separate leaf immediately succeeding the title-page:

Former conjectured wildly that "Mr. W. H." might be William Hart, the poet's nephew, who was only born in 1600; Tyrwhitt guessed from a line in one of the sonnets (Son. XX.), that the name was W. Hart, or Heaven; "A man was love, all love in his controlling," which is thus printed in 4to, 1609: "A man is love. all love in his controlling." Although the word "hunts" is repeatedly spell'd here in the old edition, this is the only instance in which it is printed in italic type, and with a capital letter, exactly the same as 1611, in Sonnets CXXXV., CXXXVII., and CXLII., where the author plays upon his own name. Dr. Drake imagined that W. H. were the initials of Henry Wroth, Earl of South- ampton, invented ("Shakespeare and his Times," vol. ii. p. 621; and of late years Bandon, with great ingenuity, has con- tended that W. H. meant William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke. We own that we cannot accord in any theory that has yet been advanced upon the point. We have no sug- gestions of our own to offer; but it seems to us the very height of improbability that a bookseller in the year 1609, when peculiar respect was paid to ability and station, would venture to address an Earl and a Knight of the Garter merely as "Mr. W. H." To the desperate speculation of Chalmers, that not a few of the Sonnets were addressed to Queen Elizabeth, it is hardly necessary even to advert.

It is evident that these sonnets were written at very different periods of Shakespeare's life, and under very different circumstances—some in youth, some in more advanced age; some when he was happy, and some when he was depanding and afflicted at his own condition in life, and place in society. In many there are to be found most re-markable signs of the intensest passion, and of ignorance in the immortality of his verses, and in this respect the author's opinion was constant and uniform. We never scrupled to express it, and perhaps there is a writer of ancient or of modern times who, for the quantity of such writings left be-
SONNETS.

I.

From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thy self before,
And taking as the续腰 that time doth wear,
Thy youth for evermore shall be in prime,
And madest thou thine own inheritors
Thy love shall crown thyself with beauty
Now is the time that face should form another;
Thou dost beguile the world, unless some mother
Where is she so fair, whose un-shrink'd womb
Dieth the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond, will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.

Unthriftly loneliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend;
And being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For, having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then know, when nature calleth thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which, used, lives till the executor to be.

V.

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair, which fairly doth excel:
For never-reasting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'er-shadow'd and barreness every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were beheld;
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was:
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
4 Leece, but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

VI.

Then, let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some phial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-killed.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which 'happies those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refug'd thee.
Then what could death do if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest, and make worms thine heir.

VII.

Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lift's up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage:
But when from high-moss pitch with weary car,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way.
So thou, thyself out-going in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweet war not, joy delights in joy.
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst hear.
Mark, how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who all in one one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee,—thou single wilt prove none.

IX.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye,
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world shall wail thee like a £makeless wife;
The world will be thy widow, and still weep,
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep,
By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind.
Look, what an unhappier in the world dost spend,

4 "Leece," i. e., lose.—b "Happies," i. e., make happy.—
5 "Music to hear," i. e., thou, whom it is music to hear.—
6 "Makeless," i. e., make less.—d "An underright," i. e., a prodigal.
Shuts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And, kept uns'd, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits,
That on himself such murderous slame commits.

X.
For shame! deny that thou be'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so un provident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate,
That 'gainst myself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate,
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind!
Shall hate be fairer old'g than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or, to thyself, at least, kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

xi.
As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest
In one of thine, from that thine thou departest:
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestowest,
Thou may'st call thine, when thou from youth conversest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase;
Without this, folly, age, and cold decay:
If all were minded so, the times should cease,
And threescore year would make the world away.
Let those whom nature hath not made for store,
Hurl, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish:
Look, whom she best endow'd, she gave the more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish.
She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby,
Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

xii.
When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave old sun raving in his height;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in shoves,
Borne on the bier with white and briskly beard;
Then, of thy beauty do I question none,
That thou among the wastes of time must grow,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake,
And die as fast as they do see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst time's scythe can make defence,
[ hence.
Save breed, to brave him, when he takes thee.

xiii.
O! that you were yourself! but, love, you are
No longer yours, than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give:
So should that beauty which you hold in lease,
Find no determination: then, you were
Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Whose husbandry in honor might uphold,
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day,
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?

*For his it--"When thou from youth conversest," i.e., when thou art changed from youth to age.--"Erest," i.e., once; formerly.

xiv.
Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck,
And yet, methinks, I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good, or evil luck,
Of plagues, or dearth's, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind;
Or say with princes If it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from time eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art,
As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert;
Or else of thee this I prognosticate,
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

xv.
When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment;
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows,
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the selfsame sky,
In their youthful sprightliness at once increase,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then, the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful time doth in thy decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And, all in war with time, for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you now.

xvi.
But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time,
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unmet,
With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,
Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself, keep yourself still,
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

xvii.
Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life, and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, "this poet lies;
Such heavenly touches never touch'd earthly faces."
So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue,
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,
And stretched metre of an antique song;
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

xviii.
Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate;
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
SONNETS.

And summer's lease hath all too short a date,
Sometimes too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd,
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course, untimm'd:
But thy eternal summer shall not fade
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou growest.
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and gives life to thee.

XIX.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck up the tenderCORRECTION: Pluck up the keenest teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood:
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou bles'st,
And do what'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world, and all her smiling sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O! curst word, which thy lips sent forth to do
Now draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow,
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX.

A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion?
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With slaving change, as is false women's fashion:
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereso'er it gazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth;
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.

But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

XXI.

So is it not with me, as with that muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse;
Making a complement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
That heaven's air in this huge * reasonable hems:
Of I, to live in love, but truly write,
And then, believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:
Let them say more that like of hear-say well;
I will not praise, that purpose not to sell.

XXII.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou art one of date;
But even in these thine arrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate;
For all that beauty that doth cover thee,
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me.
How can I, then, be elder than thou art?

O! therefore, love, be of thyself so wary,
As I, not for myself, but for thee will,
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so charg'd
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.

Presume not on thy heart, when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put beside his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart;
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's night.
O! let my books be, then, the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love, and look for recompence,
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.

O! learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath * steel'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart:
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art;
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies;
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now, see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunn'ing want to grace their art,
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV.

Let those who are in favor with their stars
Of public honor and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honor most.
Great princes' favorites their fair leaves spread,
But as the marigold at the sun's eye;
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior, * famousd for fight,
As for a thousand victories once fold'd,
Is from the book of hourly raged quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
Then, happy I, that love and am beloved,
Where I may not remove, nor be removed.

XXVI.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor can mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving,
Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tattered loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect."

"Stirr'd by a painted beauty" is from "The Peake of露 cour" and is used in the same sense: probably from the German gastel, i. e., depicted; represented. "Famous" i. e., renowned.

"Steel'd" is from "The Peake of露 cour" and is used in the same sense: probably from the German gastel, i. e., depicted; represented. "Famous" i. e., renowned.
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;
Till then, not show my head where thou may'st prove me.

XXVII.

Wearily with toil I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work's expired:
For then my thoughts (from far where I abide)
Instead a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
 Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghostly night,
Makes black night beauteous, and her old face new.
Lo! thus by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

How can I, then, return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night, and night by day, oppress'd?
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent slake hands to torture me;
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him thou art bright,
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
So better I the swart-complexion'd night.
When sparkling stars twinkle not, thou gild'st the even:
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
And night doth nightly make grief's length seem stronger.

XXIX.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most I own contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Happily I think on thee, and then my state
(Like to the lark at break of day arising)
Sings hymns at heaven's gate:
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings,
That then I seem to change my state with kings.

XXX.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new make my heart to wail:
Then, can I drown an hour, I count it so;
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
And mourn the expense of many a vanish'd sight.
Then, can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemooned morn,
Which I new pay, as if not paid before:
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restored, and sorrows end.

XXXI.

And there reigns love, and all love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and b obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
That things revol'd, that hidden in the bosom!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
And thou (all they) hast all the all of me.

XXXI.

If thou surviue my well-contended day,
When that churl death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time;
And though they be out-stripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them here, where my bold rhyme,
Exceeded by the height of happier men.
O! then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
"Had my friend's muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love."

XXXII.

Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Staining unseen to west with this disgrace.
Even so my sun one early morrow did shine,
With all triumphant splendor on my brow;
But out, alas! he was but one hour mine,
The region cloud bath mask'd him from me now.
Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
Sun's of the world may stain, when heaven's sun staineth.

XXXIII.

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
And make me travel forth with my cloak,
To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a solace can speak,
That heals the wound, and cures not the disgrace:
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have lose the loss;
Thy offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
Alas! but those tears are pearl, which thy love sheds,
And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

XXXIV.

No more be grie'd at that which thou hast done:
Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And lastest canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorizing thy trespass with compare;

[a] "Obsequious," i.e., servile.  [b] Lover was formerly used for friend.—[c] "Rack," i.e., twisting vapor.—[d] "May stain," i.e., may be stained, clouded.
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are:
For thy sensual fault I bring in sense,
Thy adverse party is thy advocate,
And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence.
Such civil war is in my love and hate,
That I an accessory needs must be
To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those bolts that do with me remain,
Without thy help by me be borne alone,
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lost my bewailed guilt should do thee shame;
Nor thou with public kindness honor me,
Unless thou take that honor from thy name:
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

As a desecrat father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made tame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entituled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engraven to this store:
So then I am not base, poor, nor despis'd,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give,
That I in thy abundance am suff'd,
And by a part of all thy glory live.
Look what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wish I have; then, ten times happy me!

How can my muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse!
O! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rymers invoke;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
 Eternal numbers to outlive long date.
If my slight muse do please these curious days,
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

O! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And what is 't but mine own, when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence! what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,

And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here, who doth hence remain.

Take all my loves, my love; ye, take them all:
What hast thou then more than thou hast before?
No love, my love, till thou may'st true love call:
All mine was thine before thou hast this more.
Then, if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee, for my love thou usest;
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
By willful taste of what thyself refus'st.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty;
And yet love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong, than hate's known injury.
Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows,
Kill me with spites, yet we must not be foes.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well betis,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Deceit thou art, therefore to be assaid;
And when a woman woo's, what man's son
Will sootly leave her till she have prevail'd.
Ah me! but yet thou might'st my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art fore'd to break a two-fold truth;
Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

Thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said, I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that toucheth me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:—
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her;
And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one.
Sweet flattery!—then, she loves me but alone.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form, form happy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so?
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes do stay?
All days are nights to see, till I see thee,
And nights bright days, when dreams do show thee me.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
SONNETS. 951

For, then, despite of space, I would be brought
From limits for remote where thou dost stay,
No matter then, although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would be.
But all! thought kills me, that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moon;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.
The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other, my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide:
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy,
Until life's compositions are recurred
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assured
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy: but then, no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI.
Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquist of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead, that thou in him dost lie,
(A closest never pierc'd with crystal eyes)
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To c'cide this title is impannon'd
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety, and the dear heart's part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And mine heart's right thine inward love of heart.

XLVIII.
Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other.
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted bouquet bids my heart:
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them, and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLIX.
Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
There have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou may'st come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

L.
Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee grown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects;
Against that time, when thou shalt strangely pass,
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I exconce me here,
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave pour thou host the strength of laws,
Since why to love I can allege no cause.

LI.
How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek (my weary travel's end)
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
'Thus far the miles are measure'd from thy friend:'
The beast that bears us, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on to bear that weight in me.
As if by some instinct the wretch did know,
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind,
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

LII.
Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
Till I return of posting is no need.
O! what excuse will my poor heart then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind;
In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, (of perfect love being made)
Shall ne'er (so dull flesh) in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
Towards thee I 'll run, and give him leave to go.
SONNETS.

Blessed are you, whose worthinesse gives scope,
Being had, to triumph, being lack’d, to hope.

LIII.
What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen’s check all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian *tires are painted now:
Speak of the spring, and *folson of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LV.
O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem,
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairest we it deem
For that sweet odor which doth in it live.
The *canker-blooms have full as deep a dye,
As the perfumed tincture of the roses;
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer’s breath their masked buds discloses;
But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unw’ld, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves, Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odors made:
And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, my verse distils your truth.

LVI.
Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall out-live this powerful rhyme;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmeard with sluttish time.
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword, nor war’s quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
’Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth: your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity.
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers’ eyes.

LVII.
Sweet love, renown thy force; be it not said,
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay’d,
To-morrow sharpen’d in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that when they see
Return of love more blest may be the view;
Or call it winter, which being full of care,
Makes summer’s welcome thence more wish’d, more rare.

LVIII.
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour,
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you.
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour,
When you have bid your servant once adieu:
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought,
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose:
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought,
Save where you are, how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love, that in your will (Though you do any thing) he thinks no ill.

LIX.
That God forbid, that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
Or at your hand th’ account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O! let me suffer (being at your beck)
Th’ imprison’d absence of your liberty;
And patience, tame to sufferance, ride each check,
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list; your slayer is so strong,
That you yourself may privilege your time:
Do what you will, to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LX.
If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguil’d,
Which, laboring for invention, bear unmiss
The second burden of a former child?
O! that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done;
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or where better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LXI.
Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Owls to maturity, wherewith being crown’d,
Crooked eclipses ’gainst his glory fling,
And time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty’s brow;
Feeds on the rarities of nature’s truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXII.
Is it thy will, thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send’st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry?
To find out shames and idle hour waste me,
The scope and tenor of thy jealousy?
O no! thy love, though much, is not so great:
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
---

*a Tires for attire;—b Folsom," i.e. plenty.—*The canker-bloom is the dog-rose.
SONNETS.

To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

LXI.
Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye,
And all my soul, and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but time decays;
Nor fear of hell so great, that since the world
Shall pass, and none of all that killed is;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.
'Tis thine (myself) that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII.
Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With time's injurious hand and old and wither'd;
When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travel'd on to age's steepy night;
And all those beauties, whereof now he's king,
Are vanishing, or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring,
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life;
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV.
When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced
The rich proud countenance of human age,
Then do I see the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with lost and lost with store;
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay,
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate—
That time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV.
Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'er-aways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O! how shall summer's honey-breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but time decays;
O fearful meditation! where, alas!
Shall time's best jewel from time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O none! unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.
Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry;
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honor shamefully misplace'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping wrong disabling,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly (doctor-like) controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
'Tis with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that to die I leave my love alone.

LXVII.
Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve,
And 'tis itself with his own self, and true,
Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live, now nature bankrupt is,
Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no excellency now left
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O! him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXVIII.
Thus is his cheek the map of days out-worn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were borne,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay.
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, but self, and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth nature store,
To show false art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX.
Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view,
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues (the voice of souls) give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thine outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own,
In other accents do this praise confound,
By seeing further than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds;
Then (churl) their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odor matcheth not thy show,
The soul is this—that thou dost common grow.

LXX.
That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater, being word of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast past by the ambush of young days,
SONNETS.

Either not assail'd, or victor being charged;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy, evermore enlarged:
If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
Then, thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead,
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O! if (I say) you look upon this verse,
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay;
Lest the wise world should look into your mean,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

O! lest the world should task you to recite
What merit liv'd in me, that you should love
After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I;
Theniggard truth would willingly impart.
O! lest your true love may seem false in this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am shun'd by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

That time of year thou may'st in me behold,
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou seest the twilight of such day
As after sun-set fades in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death's second self, that seals up all in rest:
In me thou seest the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by.
This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long:

But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay:
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee.
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead;
The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
Too base of thee to be remembered.
The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

* Then for them.

LXXV.

So are you to my thoughts, as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As'twixt a miser and his wealth is found:
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
Doubting the fitching age will steal his treasure;
Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure:
Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
And by and by clean starved for a look;
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day;
Or glutting on all, or all away.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change?
Why, with the time, do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument;
So, all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent:
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love, still telling what is told.

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
And of this book this learning may'st thou taste:
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show,
Of moulded graves will give thee memory;
Thou by thy dial's shady stealth may'st know
Time's thievish progress to eternity.
Look, what thy memory cannot contain,
Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

So oft have I invok'd thee for my muse,
And found such fair assistance in my verse,
As every alien pen hath got my use,
And under thee their poesy disperse.
Thine eyes that taught the dumb on high to sing,
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing,
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and born of thee:
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces grace be;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worther pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent,
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue, and he steals that word
From thy behavior; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can affend
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then, thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee, thou thyself dost pay.

LXXI.
O! how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame:
But since your worth (wide as the ocean is)
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth willfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up aloft,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless bant,
He of tall building, and of oddly pride:
Then, if he thrive, and I be cast away,
The worst was this—my love was my decay.

LXXII.
Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten:
From hence your memory doth cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die:
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
And tongues to be your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You still shall live (such virtue hath my pen),
Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

LXXIII.
I grant thou wert not married to my muse,
And, therefore, may'st without attain't o'er-look
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
And, therefore, art enforce'd to seek new
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
And do so, love; yet when they have devil'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou, truly fair, wert truly sympathiz'd
In true plain words, by thy true-telling friend;
And their gross painting might be better used
Where cheeks need blood: in thee it is abused.

LXXIV.
Who is it that says most? which can say more,
Than this rich praise, that you alone are you?
In whose converse improved is thy skill,
Which should example where your equal grew.
Lean penny in that pen doth dwell,
That to his subject lends not some small glory;
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is write,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired everywhere.
You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXV.
My tongue-tied muse in manners holds her still,
While comments of your praise, richly compis'd,
Reserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the muses fill'd.
I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,
And, like unteller's clerk, still cry "Amen!"
To every lyman that the spirit afflicts.
In polish'd form of well-refined pen,
Hearing you prais'd, I say, "'tis so, 'tis true;"
And to the most of prais'd add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before:
Then, others for the praise of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXVI.
Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my rife thoughts in my brain's inhurse,
Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his composers by night,
Giving him aid, my verse astonish'd:
He, nor that affable familiar ghost,
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast.
I was not sick of any fear from thence; But when thy countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter: that eneoffled mine.

LXXVII.
Fairwell; thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee relieving;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
[ing, Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not know
Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistracing;
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again, on better judgment making.
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but waking, no such matter.

LXXVIII.
When thou shalt be dispens'd to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn:

* "Inhurse," i. e., inscribed in a funeral monument.
With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted,
That thou, in losing me, shalt win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, that I vantage me.
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace: knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle, and so I am gone.

Then, let me love when thou wilt; if ever, now:
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spit of fortune, make me bow;
And do not drop in for an after loss.
Ah! do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woo;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.

If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
Compar'd with loss of thee, will not seem so.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill;
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;
And every humor hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest;
But these particulars are not my measure:
All these I better in one general best.
Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments cost,
Of more delight than lawks or horses be;
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:
Wretched in this alone, that thou may'st take
All this away, and me most wretched make.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For depends upon that love in thine:
Then, need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humor doth depend.
Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
O! what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die:

But what's so blessed fair that fears no blot?
Thou may'st be false, and yet I know it not.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:
For there can live no hating in thine eye;
Therefore, in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles strange;
But heaven in thy creation did decree,
That is thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
What'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
Theys looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

They that have power to hurt, and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves a stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die;
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outherewes his dignity;
For sweetest things turn sourcens by their deeds;
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame,
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name?
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
(Making lascivious comments on thy sport)
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O! what a mansion have those vices got,
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's will doth cover every blot,
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill us'd doth lose his edge.

Some say, thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say, thy grace is youth, and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are lov'd more and less:
Thou mak'st fault's graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated, and for true things deem'd.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate?
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state?
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen,
What old December's bareness every where!
And yet this time removed was summer's time;
SONNETS.

The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease:
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
But hope of orphans, and unfather'd fruit;
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
Or, if they sing, 't is with so dull a cheer,
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

XCVIII.

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
That heavy Saturn laugh'd, and leap'd with him:
Yet nor the lans of birds, nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odor and in hue,
Could make me like my summer's story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew:
Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose;
Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I with these did play:

XCV.

The forward violet thus did I chide:— [smells,
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that
If not from my love's breath? the purple pride
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells,
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
The lily I condemned for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair:
The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair;
A third, nor red nor white, had stolen off both,
And to this robbery had annex'd thy breath;
But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
A vengeful cancel eat him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could see,
But sweet or color it had stol'n from thee.

C.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
To speak of that which gives thee all thy might? I
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light?
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so silly spent:
Sing to the ear that doth thy lay extend,
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, *resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
If time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised every where.
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
So thou prevent'st his eye, and crooked knife.

CL.

O truant Muse! what shall be thy amends,
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dest thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not happily say,
"Truth needs no color, with his color fix'd;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd."
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou he dumb?
Excuse not silence so: for 't lies in thee
To make him much out-live a gilded tomb,
And to be praised of ages yet to be.

 Resty, i. e., restive.

Then, do thy office, Muse: I teach thee how
To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

CII.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeing,
I love not less, though less the show appear:
That love is b'merchantiz'd, whose rich b'esteeming
The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere.
Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
When I was wont to greet it with my lays:
As Philemon in summer's front doth sing,
And stops his pipe in growth of ripier days:
Not that the summer is less pleasant now,
Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night,
But that wild music burdens every bough,
And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue,
Because I would not dull you with my song.

CIII.

Alack! what poverty my muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument, all love, is of more worth,
Than when it hath my added praise beside.
O! blame me not, if I no more can write:
Look in your glass, and there appears a face,
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace.
Were it not sinful, then, striving to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
For to no other pass my verses tend,
Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
Your own glass shows you, when you look in it.

CV.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were, when first your eye I ey'd,
Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
Have from the forests shook three summers' pride;
Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd,
In process of the seasons have I seen;
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.
Ahh! yet doth beauty, with a publish'd hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceived;
So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceived:
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unabred.
Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

CV.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be,
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore, my verse to constancy confin'd,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
Fair, kind, and true, is all my argument,
Fair, kind, and true, varying to other words;
And in this change is my invention spent,
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd alone,
Which three, till now, never kept sent in one.

CVII.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,

b Merchandiz'd," i. e., exhibited for traffic.—" Exceeding," i. e., value.
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme,
In praise of ladies dead, and lovely knights;
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but props and polishes
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And for they look'd but with dividing eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which new behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVIL.
Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world, dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Suppos'd as forfeit to a confus'd doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
Now, with the drops of this most balmy time
My love looks fresh, and death to me subscribes,
Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes:
And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
When tyrants' breasts, and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIL.
What's in the brain that ink may character,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same;
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love, in love's fresh case,
Weighs not the dust and injury of age;
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page;
Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.
O! never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
As easy might I from myself depart,
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie.
That is my home of love: if I have ranged,
Like him that travels, I return again,
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd;
So that myself being water for my stain
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All failities that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterosly be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my Rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.
Alas! 'tis true, I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view; [dear,
Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most
Made old offences of affections new:
Most true it is, that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely; but, by all above,
These 'bleanches gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, save what shall have no end:

Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then, give me welcome, next my heaven the best,
Even to thy pure, and most most loving breast.

CXL.
O! for my sake do you with fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide
Than public means, which public manners breeds:
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand;
And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd,
Whilest, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of b'eyesl gait that my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye,
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

CXII.
Your love and pity doth this impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow;
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive
To know my shames and praises from your tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes, right or wrong.
In so profound an abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are,
Mack how with my neglect I do dispense:—
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks they are dead.

CXIII.
Since I left you mine eye is in my mind,
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function, and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch:
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rul'd or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favor, or deformed creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature:
Incappable of more, reptale with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine e untrue.

CXIV.
Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
Or whether shall I, my eye salve my sight,
And that your love taught it this alchymy,
To make, of monsters and things indigest,
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O! 't is the first: 't is flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knew what with his gaze is greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 't is the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

* "Blenches," i. e., fits.

b "Eyeal," i. e., vinegar. — c "Untrue" is used here as a substantive. — d "His gust," i. e., his taste.
SONNETS.

959

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you deader;
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.

But reckoning time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharpest intents,
Divert strong minds t' the course of altering things;
Aha! why, fearing of time's tyranny,
Might I not then say, "Now love you best,"
When I was certain o'er incertainty,
Crowning the present, double of the rest?

Love is a babe: then, might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments; love is not love,
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempest, and is never shaken:
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

Accuse me thus: that I have scented all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay;
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
And given to time your own dear purchas'd right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me farthest from your sight:
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And call just proof surpris'd accidents
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your vawken'd hate,
Since my appeal says, I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With yeager compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies waken,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding;
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meekness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.
Thus policy in love, t' anticipate,
That ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicinе a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd:
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

What potions have I drunk of syren tears,
Distill'd from Limbecks foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!

Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

That you were once unkind befriended me now,
And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
Needs must I under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
As I by yours, you have pass'd a hell of time;
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O! that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits;
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
But that your trespass now becomes a foe;
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

'Tis better to be vile, than vile esteemed,
When not to be receives reproach of being;
And the just pleasure lost, which is so deemed,
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give subjection to my sportive blood?
Or on my fruits why are fatter spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think good?
No, I am that I am; and they that level
At my abuses, reckon up their own:
I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel.
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain,
Beyond all date, even to eternity;
Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to sublate;
Till each to mans' oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd;
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I talkis thy dear love to score;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust these tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee,
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

No! Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change:
Thy pyramids, built up with newer might,
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost bestow upon us that is old,
And rather make them born to our desire,
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present, nor the past;
For thy records and what we see do lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.
This I do vow, and this shall ever be,
I will be true, despite thy sceptre and thee;
If my dear love were but the child of state,

It might for fortune's bastard be unfather'd,

As subject to time's love, or to time's hate,

Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gathered.

No, it was builded far from accident;

It suffers not in smiling pump, nor falls

Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,

Whereeto th' inviting time our fashion calls:

It fears not policy, that heretic,

Which works on leases of short number'd hours,

But all alone stands hugely politic,

That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with showers.

To this I witness call the fools of time,

Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

Were't not so, my love, to this I were bound,

With my extern the outward honoring,

Or laid great bases for eternity,

Which prove more short than waste or ruining?

Have I not seen dwellers on form and favor

Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent;

For compound sweet fore-going simple savor,

Pitiful thievish, in their gazing spent?

No; let me be e'en obsequious in thy heart,

And take thou my oblivion, poor but free,

Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,

But mutual reader, only me for thee.

Hence, thou subur'd informer! a true soul,

When most impeach'd, stands least in thy control.

O thou, my lovely boy! who in thy power

Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sable, hour;

Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st'

Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st;

If nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,

As thou goest onwards still will pluck thee back,

She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill

May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill.

Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!

She may detain, but not still keep her treasure:

Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,

And her quietus is to render thee.

In the old age black was not counted fair,

Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;

But now is black beauty's successive heir,

And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame;

For since each hand hath put on nature's power,

Fairing the soul with art's false borrow'd face,

Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,

But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.

Therefore, my mistress' eyes are raven black,

Her eyes so suit'd; and they mourners seem

At such, who, not born fair, no beauty lack,

Slandering creation with a false esteem:

Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,

That every tongue says, beauty should look so.

How oft, when thou, my music, music playest,

Upon that blessed wood, whose motion sounds

With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently swayest

The wise concord that mine ear confounds,

Do I envy those 'Jacks, that nimble leap

To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,

Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,

At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand.

To be so tickled, they would change their state

And situation with those dancing chips,

O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,

Making dead wood more bless'd than living lips.

Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,

Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame

Is lust in action; and till action, lust

Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,

Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;

Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;

Past reason hunted, and no sooner had,

Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,

On purpose laid to make the taker mad:

Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;

Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme:

A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe;

Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.

All this the world well knows, yet none knows well

To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;

Coral is far more red than her lips red:

If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;

If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head:

I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,

But no such roses see I in her cheeks;

And in some perfumes is there more delight

Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.

I love to hear her speak; yet well I know

That music hath a far more pleasing sound:

I grant I never saw a goddess go;

My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground.

And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare

As any she belied with false compare.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,

As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;

For well thou know'st, to my dear doting heart

Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.

Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,

Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:

To say they err I dare not be so bold,

Although I swear it to myself alone.

And, to be sure that is not false I swear,

A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,

One on another's neck, do witness bear,

Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.

In nothing art thou black, save in thy deeds;

And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitting me,

Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,

Have put on black, and loving mourners be,

Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.

And, truly, not the morning sun of heaven

Better becomes the grey checks of the east,

Nor that full star that ushers in the even

Doth half that glory to the sober west,

As those two mourning eyes become thy face.

O! let it, then, as well beseech thy heart

To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,

And suit thy pity like in every part;

They will I swear, beauty herself is black,

And all they bawl that thy complexion lack.
CXXXIII.

Beshrew that heart, that makes my heart togroan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweetest friend must be?
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engrossed:
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsworn;
A tuner of thine threefold thus to be crossed,
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But, then, my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;
Who'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigor in my jail:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will;
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous, and he is kind:
He learnt not, but, surety-like, to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend, came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in overplus;
More than enough am I, that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vanquish to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store;
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

CXXXVI.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
And wilt, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fullfil.
Wilt will fulfill the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it fall with wills, and my will one,
In things of great receipt with ease we prove,
Among a number one is reck'n'd none:
Then, in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is Will.

They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is, take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forg'd hooks,
Whereof the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot,
Which my heart knows the wide world's common
Or mine eyes seeing this, say, this is not,
[place?]
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have erred,
And to this false plaque are they now transferred.

CXXXVII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtileties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue;
On both sides then this simple truth suprest.
But wherefore says she not, she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I, that I am old?
O! love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me.
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX.

O! call not me to justify the wrong,
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue,
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere, but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside:
What need'st thou, at thou wound with cunning, when thy might
Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can hide?
Let me excuse thee; oh! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies,
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries.
Yet do not that, but since I am near slain,
Kill me out-right with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near.
No news but health from their physicians know:
For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee;
Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mad sham bevers by bad ears believe;
That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
Wide.

Bear thine eye straight, though thy proud heart go

CXLI.

In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 't is my heart that loves what they despise,
Who in despite of view is pleas'd to date.

"A several plot," i.e., a piece of ground which has been "common," or unin leased, but has been separated and made private property.—This sonnet, with variations, was first printed in "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1598. It is inserted hereafter as it stands in instant works, that a reader may have an opportunity of comparing the two copies.
SONNETS.

Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;
Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor swell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits, nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leave unwav'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be:
Only my plaguing thought, for I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

Suspect

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving.
O! but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving:
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments,
And seal'd false bonds of love as off as mine,
Robb'd others' beds revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes war as mine importune thee:
Root pity in the heart, that when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to be pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example may'st thou be denied!

CXLII.

Lo! as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch
In pursuance of the thing she would have stay;
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not pricing her poor infant's discontent:
So run'st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I, thy babe, clasp thee after behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the madam's part, kiss me, be kind:
So will I pray that thou may'st have thy Will,
If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

CXLII.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worse spirit a woman, color'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to a devil,
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell:
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV.

Those lips that Love's own hand did make,
Breath'd forth the sound that said, "I hate,"
To me that longishment for her sake;
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue, that ever sweet
Was us'd in giving gentle doom,
And taught it thus anew to greet.
"I hate," she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who, like a fiend,
From heaven to hell is flown away:
"I hate" from hate away she threw.
And sav'd my life, saying—"not you."

CXLVI.

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth,
Fool'd by those rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within, and suffer death,
Paining thy outward walls so cruelly?—
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dress;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on death, that feeds on men,
And, death once dead, there's no more dying then

CXLVII.

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer murther the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
Th' unctuous sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve,
Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic mad with ever-more unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as mad men's are,
At random from the truth vainly express'd:
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII.

O me! what eyes hath love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight!
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
That censures falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no,
How can it? O! how can love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching, with tears?
No marvel, then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not, till heaven clears.
O cunning love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.

Canst thou, O Cruel! say, I love thee not,
When I, against myself, with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forget
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay, if thou lovest me, do I not spend
Revenge upon myself with present mean?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect?
Communed by the motion of thine eyes?
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind:
Those that can see thon lov'st, and I am blind.

CXL.

O! from what power hast thou this powerful might,
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and "warrantise of skill,
That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
O! though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou should'st not abhor my state:
If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLII.

Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not, conscience is born of love?
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my "amiss.
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove:
For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may
Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason,
But rising at thy name, doth point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side;
No want of conscience hold it, that I call
Her love, for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLIII.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
In vowing new hate after new love hearing,
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;

For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost:
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
And to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see;
For I have sworn thee fair: more perjur'd I,
To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIV.

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep:
A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which borrow'd from this holy fire of love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove,
Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
But at my mistress' eye love's brand new-fired,
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
I sick withal, the help of bath desired,
And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
But found no cure: the bath for my help lies
Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

From off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintive story from a *sistering vale,
My spirits t' attend this double voice accorded,
And down I hasted to the sod-tum'd tale;
Beg long espy'd a fickle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings untriaimed,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.
Upon her head a twined braid of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun.
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcass of a beauty spent and done:
Time had not scythed all that youth began,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sard's age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her *eyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laundering the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
In clammers of all size, both high and low.
Sometimes her level'd eyes their carriage ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometimes, diverted, their poor balls are tied
To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and no where fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.
Her hair, nor loose, nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless band of pride;
For some, untuck'd, descend'd her *shear'd bat,
Hanging her pale and pinned cheek beside;
Some in her threden fillet still did ride,
And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,
Though slackly branded in loose negligence.
A thousand favors from a *maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of bedded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margin she was set;
Like swary, applying wet to wet,
Or monarchs' hands, that let not bounty fall
Where want cries "some," but where excess bags all.
Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she permis'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet more letters sadly pent in blood,
With *sielded silk fent and affectedly
Enswath'd, and send'd to curious secrecy.
These often bath'd she in her *fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often gaz'd to "me.
Cry'd, O false blood! thou register of lies,
What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and dammed here.
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh,
Sometimes a blusterer, that the *ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swittest hours, observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew;
And, privileged by age, desires to know,
In brief, the grounds and motives of her woe.
So slides he down upon his galled but,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide;
If that from him there may be aught applied,
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'T is promis'd in the charity of age.
Father, she says, though in me you behold
The injury of many a blazing hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself, and to no love beside.
But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace;
Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd, and newly defiled.
His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurl'd;
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find;
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn,
What largeness thinks in paradise was *sawn.
Small show of man was yet upon his chin:
His phoenix down began but to appear,
Like unshorn velvet, on that termless skin,
Whose bare out-spring'd the web it seem'd to wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that cost most dear,
And nice affections waving stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.
His qualities were heaenous as his form,
For maiden-tongue'd he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His readiness so, with his author'd youth,
Did lively falseness in a pride of truth.
Well could he ride, and often men would say,
"That horse his master from his rider takes:"
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway, [makes!"
What round, what bounds, what course, what stop he
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.
But quickly on this side the verdict went.
His real habitate gave life and grace

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

To apprehensions and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Come for additions, yet their purpose trim:
Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.

So on the tip of his subduing tongue,
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughers weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:
That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents, bewitch'd, ere he desire have granted;
And dialogued for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in th' imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd,
And bearing in more pleasure to behold them,
Than the true gony landlom which doth love them.

So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, (not in part)
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stake, and gave him all my flower.
Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor, being desir'd, yield'd;
Finding myself in honor so forbid,
With distant distance I mine honor shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks build'd
Of proofs new-bledging, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

But ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd peril in her way?
Connel may stop a while what will not stay;
For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen;

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof,
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our breath.
O appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though reason weep, and cry, "It is thy last."

For farther I could say, "This man's untrue,
And knew the patterns of his foul beguil ing;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
Some how deceit was gilding in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers to deli'ning;
Thought characters, and words, merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

And long upon these terms I hold my city,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me: "Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to you sworn, to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never vow."

All my offences that abroad you see,
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind:
Love made them not: with 'acture they may be,
Where neither party is not true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame did find,
And so much less of shame to me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.
Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warmed,
Or my affection put to the smallest teen,
Or any of my pleasures ever charmed:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harmed;
Keep hearts in liveliness, but mine in peace:
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.
Look here, what tributes wounded fauncies sent me,
Of paled pearls, and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the inercin'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.
And lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously 'impled';
I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
(Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd)
With the annexations of fair gems enrich'd;
And deep-brain'd sometins, that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.
The diamond; why, 't was beautiful and hard,
Whereeto his 'inviz'd properties did tend,
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-born sapphire, and the opal blend
With objects manifold; each several stone,
With weft well bason'd, smil'd, or made some mean.

Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and sublim'd desires the tender,
Nature hath charg'd me that I heard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render;
That is, to you, my origin and ender;
For these, of force, must your obligations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.
O! then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise;
Take all these similoes to your own command,
Hallow'd with bliss that bursning long did raise;
What me, your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose nearest favours made the blossoms dote:
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

But O, my sweet! what labor is't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives!
Paling the place which did no form receive;
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scats of battle scathd by the flight,
And makes her absence vainest, not her might.
O, pardon me, in that my boast is true!
The accident which brought me to her eye,
Upon the moment did her force subdue,

A "Action," i. e., action.

"Implac'd," i. e., implacable.

"Havings," i. e., possessions.
A "The blossoms," i. e., the flower of the young nobility.
And now she would the engag’d cloister fly;
Religious love put out religion’s eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immur’d,
And now, to tempt all, liberty procure’d.

How mightly then you are, O hear me tell!
The broken bosoms that to me belong,
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o’er them, and you o’er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

My parts had power to charm a sacred sun,
Who, disciplin’d, I dieted in grace,
Believ’d her eyes, when they I assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

When thou impressest, what are precepts worth
Of state example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame?
Love’s arms are peace, ’gainst rule, ’gainst sense,
’gainst shame;
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aches of all forces, shocks, and fears.
Now, all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make ’gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath,
That shall prefer and undertake my troth.”

This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level’d on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow’d space.
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who, glaz’d with crystal, gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hou incloses.

O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear;

But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O cool effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extinguish hath!

For lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv’d my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I dash’d;
Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears:
Appear to him, as ho to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore,
His poison’d me, and mine did him restore.

In him a plenty of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or swooning palesness; and he takes and leaves,
In either’s pantags, as it best deceives
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white, and swoon at tragic shows:

That not a heart which in his level came,
Could scape the hall of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame,
And veil’d in them, did win whom he would main:
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim;
When he most burn’d in heart-wish’d luxury,
He preach’d pure maid, and prais’d cold chastity.

Thus, merely with the garment of a grace
The naked and concealed fixed he cover’d;
That th’ unexperienc’d gave the tempter place,
Which, like a cherubin, above them hover’d.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover’d?
Ah me! I fell; and yet do question make,
What I should do again for such a sake.
O, that infected moisture of his eye!
O, that false fire, which in his cheek so gloried!
O, that for’d thunder from his heart did fly!
O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestowed!
O, all that borrow’d motion, seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray’d,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!

—“Daff’d,” i. e., put off.
—“To cautels,” i. e., to cunning.
—“Luxury,” i. e., licentiousness.
THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

STANZA IV.

INTRODUCTION.

In the following pages we have reprinted "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, as it came from the press of W. Jaggard, with the exception only of the orthography. Malone omitted several portions of it, some because they were substantially repetitions of poems contained elsewhere, and others because they appeared to have been improperly assigned to Shakespeare: one piece, the last in the tract, is not inserted at all in Boswell's edition, although Malone reprinted it in 1780, and no reason is assigned for rejecting it. We have given the whole, and in our notes we have stated the particular circumstances belonging to such pieces as there is reason to believe did not come from the pen of our great dramatist.

1. When my love swears that she is made of truth I do believe her, though I know she lies, That she may think me some tutor'd youth Unskilful in the world's false forgetters. Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young, Although I know my years be past the best, I smiling credit her false speaking tongue, Out-facing faults in love with love's ill rest. But wherefore says my love that she is young? And wherefore say I that I am old? O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue, And age, in love, loves not to have years told. Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me, Since that our faults in love thus another'd be.

2. To win me soon to hell, my female evil Tempteth my better angel from my side, And would corrupt a saint to be a devil, Wooing his purity with her fair pride; And whether that my angel be turn'd found, Suspect I may, but not directly tell; For being both to me, both to each friend, I guess one angel in another's hell. The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt, Till my sad angel fire my good one out.

3. Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, 'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument, Persuade my heart to this false perjury? Vows for thee broke deserve no punishment. A woman I forswore; but I will prove Thou being a godess, I forswore not thee: My vow was earthly; thou a heavenly love; Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me. My vow was breath, and breath a vapor is: Thou then fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,

* This sonnet is substantially the same as Sonnet cxxxviii.
* This sonnet is also the same as Sonnet cxxlix., but with some slight variations.
THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

Exhale this vapor now: in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what foot is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV.

Sweet Cytheraea, sitting by a brook,
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there:
Touches so soft still conquer chaste.
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refrain'd to take her figure profly,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer:
Then, fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:
He rose and ran away; ah, fool too froward!

V.

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O! never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd:
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove:
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,
Where all those pleasures live, that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice:
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend:
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder,
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which (not to anger bent) is music and sweet fire:
Celestial as thou art, O! do not love that wrong,
To sing the heavens' praise with such an earthly tongue.

VI.

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
When Cytheraea, all in love forborne,
A longing torrance for Adonis made,
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook, where Adonis did to cool his spleen:
Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
For his approach, that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim;
The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wisty as this queen on him:
He, spaying her, bound'd in, whereas he stood:
O Jove! quoth she, why was not I a flood?

VII.

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle,
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle,
Softer than wax, and yet as iron rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none failer to deface her.
Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing
How many tales to please me hath she coin'd,
Dreadful my love, the love whereof still fearing

Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.
She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out burneth;
She from'd the love, and yet she did the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then, must the love be great twixt thee and me
Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.
Doulant to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense?
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such,
As passing all conceit needs no defence.
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Thaues' lute (the queen of music) makes;
And in I deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feln,
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX.

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love,

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild;
Her hand she takes upon a steep up hill:
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds;
She silly queen, with more than love's good will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds.
Once, (quoth she) did I see a fair sweet youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a bare,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh, (quoth she,) here was the sore
She showed hers; he saw more wounds than one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

X.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon faded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and faded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely shaded,
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, (through wind) before the fall should be.
I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why? thou left'st me nothing in thy will.
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why? I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes, (dear friend,) I pardon crave of thee:
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

XI.

Venus with Adonis sitting by her,
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, she fell to him.
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god embrac'd me;
And then she (quoth she)Adonis in her arms;
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god embrac'd me,
As if the boy should use like loving charms:

4 This poem was published in 1598, in Richard Barnfield's "Concerning Lady Vereens." There is little doubt that it is his property.—"Wheama," i.e., at the time when.—
"This sonnet, with considerable variations, is the third in a collection of seventy-two sonnets, published in 1598, under the title of "Fides," with the name of B. Griffin, as the author. A manuscript of the true, now before us, has the initials W. S. at the end.—"Chipp'd," i.e., encircled.
Even thus, (quoth she) he seized on my lips,
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetched breath, away he slips,
And would not take her meaning, nor her pleasure.
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I ran away!

The Passionate Pilgrim.

XII.
Crabbed age and youth
Cannot live together;
Youth is full of pleasance,
Age is full of care:
Youth like summer born,
Age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave,
Age like winter faire.
Youth is full of sport,
Age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame:
Youth is hot and cold,
Age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee,
Youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee;
O, sweet shepherd! hie thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XIII.
Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining gloss that fadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies, when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass, that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, faded, broken, dead within an hour.
And as goods lost are sold or never found,
As faded gloss no rubbing will refresh;
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress;
So beauty blemish'd once, for ever lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV.
Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share:
She bade good night, that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.
Farewell, quoth she, and come again to-morrow:
Fare well I could not, for I supped with sorrow.
Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, 'till I construe whether:
'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
'T may be, again to make me wander thither;
"Wander," a word for shadows like thyself,
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

XV.
Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
My heart doth charge the watch, the morning rise
Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
And wish her lary was tuned like the lark;
For she doth welcome day-light with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismall-dreaming night:
The night to pack I, I post upon thy pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;
Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why? she sigh'd, and bade me come to mor-

Are I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon:
Yet not for me, shine sun to succor flowers!
Pack night, peep day, good day, of night now row:
Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-mor-

XVI.
It was a lordling's daughter,
The fairest one of three,
That liked of her master
As well as well might be,
Till looking on an Englishman,
The fairest that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a turning.
Long was the combat doubtful,
That love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless,
Or kill the gallant knight:
To put in practice either,
Alas! it was a spite
Unto the silly damsel.
But one must be refused,
More mickle was the pain,
That nothing could be used,
To turn them both to gain;
For of the two the treaty knight
Was wounded with disdain:
Alas! she could not help it.
Thus art with arms contending
Was victor of the day,
Which by a gift of learning
Did bear the maid away;
Then bullaby, the learned man
Hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

XVII.
On a day (nock the day!) Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the violet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover (sick to death)
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
Air (quoth he) thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand lathe sworn
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet:
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.

XVIII.
My flocks feed not,
My eyes breed not,

4 "A moon," I. e., a month.—This is the first piece in the division of "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1595, called, "Sonnets to sundry Notes of Music."—This poem, in a more complete state, may be seen in "Love's Labor's Lost." The poem is also printed in "England's Helicon," a miscellany of poetry, first published in 1600, where "W. Shakespeare" is appended to it. In "England's Helicon," 1600, this poem immediately follows "On a day (nock the day?)" but it is there entitled, "The unknown Shepherd's Complaint," and is subscribed Ignote. Hence, we may suppose that the compiler of that collection knew that it was not by Shakespeare, although it had been attributed to him in "The Passionate Pilgrim," of the year preceding.

"Pleasance," I. e., gayety.—"Sold for soldom.—""Nill," I. e., I will not.
My rams speed not,
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and bawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,

When craft hath taught her thus to say,—

"Had women been so strong as men,
In faith you had not had it then."

And to her will frame all thy ways:
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble, true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to choose a new.

When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them luck,
The cock that treads them shall not know:
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's faith doth stand for nought?

Think, women still to strive with men
To sin, and never for to shun:

There is no heaven; be holy then,
When time with age shall them attain.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But soft! enough,—too much, I fear;
Lest that my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to warm my ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long:

Yet wilt she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

XX.

Live with me and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove,
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And the craggie mountain yield.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks
By shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies;
A cup of flowers, and a kittle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral chapls and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then, live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.

If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move,
To live with thee and be thy love.

---

"This poem here incomplete, and what is called "Love's Answer," still more imperfect, belong to Christopher Marlowe and Sir Walter Raleigh; the first is assigned by name to Marlowe, in "England's Helicon," 1600, and the last appears in the same collection, under the name of Ignoto, which was a signature sometimes adopted by Sir Walter Raleigh."
As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade,
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap and birds did sing,
Trees did grow and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish morn,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Leant her breast upstill a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull's ditty,
That to hear it was great pity.
Fie, fie, fie! now would she cry;
Terre, Terre! by and by;
That to hear her so complain
Scare I could from my refrains,
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Mada me think upon mine own.
Ah! thought I, thou mou'st in vain,
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee,
Ruthless bears they will not cheer thee.

Whilst as sickle fortune smil'd,
Thou and I were both beguil'd:
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend,
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such like flattering,
Pity but he were a king.
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice:
If to women he be bent,
They have him at commandment;
But if fortune once do frown,
Then, farewell his great renown:
Thy that saw'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed
He will help thee in thy need;
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep:
Thus of every grief in heart,
He with thee does bear a part.
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

Let the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound elate wings obey.

But thou shrieking harbingler,
Foul pre-currer of the fiend,
Augur of the lover's end,
To this troop come thou not near.
From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Keep the oscopy so strict.
Let the priest in surplice white,
That definitive music can
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou, treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.
Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phoenix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.
So they lov'd, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one;
Two distinct, division none:
Number there in love was slain.
Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the Phoenix' sight:
Either was the other's mine.
Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd,
Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together:
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded;
That it cry'd, how true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain.
Whereupon it made this threne,
To the Phoenix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here inclin'd in cinders lie.
Death is now the Phoenix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest.
Leaving no posterity:
T was not their infirmity,
It was married chastely.
Truth may seem, but cannot be;
Beauty brag, but 't is not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.
To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds a prayer.
